"We have a lot of people going about saying, 'If we want Europe to pay what she owes us, we must take off the tariff so she can sell to us,'" he said. "I ask them this question: 'What American factory shall we shut down so they can open a factory in Europe?' I have been a protectionist all my life. I know what it means. Wages are three times higher in this country than in other countries."

Speaking of the dignity of labor, he said: "I am interested in training children to understand industrial life. I have strong educational convictions. I believe that when a boy and girl get through high school, they ought to be able to earn a living with their hands."

"Immigration," he said, "was one of the government's big problems. When he had accepted President Harding's offer of the portfolio of labor, there had been between five and six million men in America out of work, and two millions in Europe waiting to come over. The result was the restrictive immigration act of 1924, on which the present law is based."

Speaking of the policy of holding examinations in Europe instead of at Ellis Island, he said:

"They're rejecting a good many on the other side. I've sat in on examinations there, and I didn't hear one man who was refused a vise complain of his treatment. We're putting into effect a partially selective plan. Why can't we have purely selective immigration?"

Elaborating, he said that instead of having the quota taken at random, he would have examiners go out into the line of prospective immigrants to find out what kind of men they were. He would have employers report to the labor department the type of men they need, and then would have the required men given preference over others not so urgently required.

As an example, he cited the theoretical case of a New England mill, employing 1,000 operatives, which was about to change over from textiles to some other form of industry. The management needed a specialist who was in Europe to make the change effective. "Why," he asked, "shouldn't that man have preference, and come over to give those thousand men a chance to work?"

"If we can't construe the quota law that way," he said, "let's have a law that will make it possible."

"I'm sure the people of America will never again stand for the open door in immigration," he said. "That's the feeling of the country, as expressed in the national house of representatives."

"I'm for the people to come over to keep the country going," he said. "I'm for the laborers that come here that you can recruit, your management from."

Later he added: "I talk freely about the foreign-born, because I'm one of them myself."

Secretary Davis was introduced by Governor Trumbull, who took occasion to point to the development which aviation has made in Connecticut, elaborating on some of the thoughts expressed in Senator Bingham's speech.

All the speakers commented on the excellence of the Bridgeport manufacturers' chorus which furnished entertainment throughout the evening.

ROTARIANS' GOVERNOR TALKS OF ZERO, HERO AND HERO MEN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 18—John Alison, D. D., of Holyoke, Mass., governor of the 86th Rotary District made his annual visit to Willimantic Rotary club last evening at a largely attended meeting held in the Y. M. C. A. His talk on the Aims and Standards of Rotary was inspiring and informing.

The Auxiliary of the Y served an appetizing supper, during which group songs led by Harry W. Standish with Dr. R. Bulloch Jones at the piano, were a feature. The president, John F. Ahern then called to order the brief business meeting, during which the secretary, Gerard E. Loisell read the roll call and minutes. James F. Mustard, chairman of the Boys' Work committee announced that next Tuesday evening the club would entertain members of Windham High school football team. At the conclusion of the meeting the Iridiron warriors will be hosts to the Rotarians who have been invited to attend the play, All of a Sudden Peggy.

Guests of the club were John C. Frazier, new manager of the local office of the Southern New England Telephone company and Charles F. Curran.

At the conclusion of a brief introduction by President Ahern, Governor John Alison was greeted with a salvo of applause and the singing of a welcome song.

Rev. Dr. Alison commanded the attention of the members for nearly an hour. He explained the methods used in Rotary to transmit the idea of the unselfish work of that organization. He told of the meeting of the district governors with International President Don Adams of New Haven and his board of directors, in Chicago, last August. Then followed the meeting of the district governors with the club executives in September. The club executives then transmitted the messages and the program of Rotary to the committee chairmen, who in turn filled the last gap by informing the individual members. Stating that he was highly impressed by the quality and manhood to be found in Rotary, Governor Alison said that the guarantee of the future of Rotary relies on the ability and the service of its leaders. The fundamentals for membership in Rotary, he said, were first, "classification" and second "qualification." In no instance, he added, had he found these two attributes lacking.

"I heartily endorse President Don Adams definition of Rotary", he said, "when he calls it a spiritual thing (not however religious). And spiritual things," he continued, "are imponderable, impalpable, imperishable, inevitable, fundamental and eternal things." Having exploited this beautiful thought, the leader of Rotary in this district expounded the motto of Rotary, "Service Above Self." With this motto before them Rotary is to Rotarians their part in seeking to put self where self belongs, with service above and self beneath. In differentiating between three basic types of men, he named three: the Zero man, who thinks nothing, says nothing, does nothing, therefore amounts to nothing. The Nero type of man who fiddles and fiddles away his time, strength and substance while his world deteriorates, decays and falls away—while Rome burns. The last type and the type requisite for a true Rotarian is the Hero type, the man who is always ready to answer the call of service and declares that he is prepared, "not knowing whither he goes."

At the conclusion of his talk he was extended a rising vote of thanks. The meeting adjourned with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner. At the close of the meeting the district governor went into a lengthy conference with the officers and committee chairmen of the club. He was then accompanied to Hartford as the guest of James P. Bath and a delegation of the officers.

WHIST AT SCOTLAND OPEN COMMUNITY HOUSE

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 18.—Many residents and visitors from Willimantic and other places attended a whist party in Scotland's new community house, Wednesday evening. A gratifying sum was realized to be used in completing the interior woodwork and decorations of the newly purchased building. The structure was bought by popular subscription and considerable work has been done in its remodeling. It is now planned to give a series of whist parties at the hall in order to secure sufficient funds to complete the work. At a later date a dedication of the building will be carried out. The committee in charge of the first whist was James H. Johnson, chairman; Charles Perry and Howard Brenn. There was a lunch during the evening.

Two years ago a respite was given local postal employes when deliveries were ordered to cease at noon on Christmas and from the success of the experiment comes the order for a full day suspension this year. The activities at the office will halt at midnight, December 24. Only such employes as are required to make regular holiday dispatches of first class mail and to receive, but not to work on, incoming mail will be retained at the office. Operations will resume with vigor at mid night, December 25th.

An interesting meeting of the Woman's Club was held this week with Mrs. Carl B. Alford in charge. There was a large attendance. A feature of the meeting were selections by Master Burton Kimball of Scotland and his sister, Miss Kimball, violinist and pianist, respectively. Mr. Wolfe of Hartford made a plea for aid for the refugees of the Near East stating that if aid were given for two years more they would become self-supporting. Last year the town of Windham cared for twenty children and he hoped that during Golden Rule Week the same fine spirit would be shown.

Mrs. Alford then introduced Miss Alice Kretschmar, of Boston, who spoke on China and Pottery. She followed the history and romance of china and pottery and supplemented her talk with an exhibition of rare old pieces of Chelsea, Wedgewood, Spode, Minepet, Cauldon, Sevres and others. As a conclusion she read The Romance of the Willow Plate, by Dickens.

A Children's Heart Tag Day is to be held in Willimantic Saturday next, under the auspices of the Volunteers of America, founded in 1896, by General and Mrs. Ballington Booth. An honorary committee composed of the following have endorsed the worthy work: Mrs. Carl R. Alford, Mrs. Arthur J. Squires, Rev. Andrew S. Muirhead, Mrs. James B. Hurley and Mrs. Robert H. Fenton. Miss Edith Willet will be in charge of headquarters.

Samuel Richmond Sypher, 52, died at his home at The Ridges Wednesday morning. He was a former resident of this city. He was born in Brooklyn, September 17, 1873, a son of William H. and Sarah A. Schaeck Sypher. Surviving him is his wife; five brothers, Charles H., of New London, Abner of this city, Gilbert, of Milo, Me., George A. of Andover, and Walter Sypher, of New Haven; and two sisters, Mrs. George Howard of Pleasant Valley and Mrs. B. Denault of New Haven. Mr. Sypher was a moulder by occupation and up to the time of his last illness he had been in the employ of the Vandermen Manufacturing company.

William Clark, 67, died at the Windham town farm at four o'clock Tuesday afternoon. He was formerly a weaver and had been an inmate of the town farm for a number of years.

The Willimantic Public Library is having the largest circulation of books in its history, according to the report for the recently ended fiscal year, made by Mrs. Ruth C. Terry, librarian. In 1924, 55,590 books were in circulation. In 1925 the number was increased by 2,303 or a total circulation of 57,590 books. 287 books were added during the year. Of this number 220 were obtained by purchase, 47 from the state and 20 were individual gifts. 145 books were withdrawn from circulation because of worn-out condition and 26 were lost, nine of them being paid for. Of those lost 13 have been replaced making a total number of books 11,872. For as average the circulation of books has been 190 per day and an average number of 75 readers per day. So far this year the "fine money" has amounted to $110.97 which has been turned over to the city treasurer.

John Collins, a headliner in varieties, now classed as vaudeville, half a century and holder of the title of champion harmonica player in the world, has been about the city of late announcing a new business upon which he has embarked.

Collins is now a resident of Chaplin but is regarded as a product of Windham.

Dr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Simonds, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Elliott and daughter, Miss Barbara and Mr. and Mrs. C. Winfield Noyes attended the Hamilton-Stearns wedding in Hartford Wednesday evening. Mrs. Hamilton is the daughter of Parker Stearns of Minneapolis, who formerly resided in this city.

Miss Maud S. Deming, president, Miss Annie H. Smith, secretary and Mrs. Alice A. Bentley, senior aid department of Connecticut, Women's Relief Corps were in Hartford Wednesday evening and attended the 45th annual campfire of Robert O. Tyler Post, No. 56, G. A. R.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c.

Manila Teachers' Salary $23

MANILA, Nov. 18 (AP)—Inadequate preparation of Filippine teachers and the instability of the teaching force in the public schools are attributed chiefly to low salaries. Dr. Luther B. Bowley, director of the bureau of education, said that the average salary paid municipal teachers, who constitute 98 per cent of the elementary course, is about $23.70 a month.

ENGLISH CONSIDER WOMEN FOR MINISTRY TO MEET SITUATION

LONDON, (Nov. 18 (AP)—"Her Grace, the Archbishop of Canterbury," may be known by the present generation of children in England.

So evident is the lack of candidates for the ministry in the Church of England that authorities are being forced to consider the problem of admitting women to the Holy Orders.

Several leading churchmen have warned that the day of women preachers is in sight. The restraint on feminine equality will be removed in the next generation, they said, unless there is a revival of religious interest in the country.

The church has been restricted by the scarcity of ministers during the last 20 years and the situation now is acute, the Bishop of Canterbury told the church congress.

Rev. H. M. M. Watkins, curate of the fashionable church of St. Martins-in-the-Fields, Trafalgar Square, has written in a parish magazine that it now is a necessity that the church move in progress with national life and allow the women to minister in the Church of England.

In the congregations and law church offices, women already out-number men and at church conferences the bulk of delegates are women.

Invents New X-Ray Process

Dr. Evarts A. Graham, Professor of Surgery at the Washington University School of Medicine, St. Louis, Mo., who has been awarded the Charles Lester Leonard prize of $1,000 for his development of a process known as cholecystography, making possible by X-ray accurate diagnosis by gall bladder and other intestinal disorders. It consists of the injection of a salt solution which acts on the patient in such a way as to make the entire region of the bladder visible on the X-ray plate. Diagnosis are thus made 95% perfect, and is of the highest importance to the medical profession.

DANIELSON

GREEN HOLLOW ROAD SCHEME AGAIN PEEVES CITIZENS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Nov. 13—That synthetic gentleman known as Mr. Eastern Connecticut apparently has an attack of nerves—the eastern side of him, anyway. He knows there is something the matter with him, and it acts like growing pains. He has been told that the cure lies in greater transportation facilities, chiefly via the Green Hollow road. The diagnosis was made in Norwich and has been accepted as correct by various parts of the anatomy of this synthetic personality. There may be a bit of dispute between the conscious and sub-conscious parts of this allegorical gentleman as to how the remedy for his ailment may be applied, but there is no lack of claquers shouting from the hilltops that "we must get a cure if we have to cut off his right leg to be rid of a corn."

Plainfield is the latest locality selected for propaganda along the line that we must have that Green Hollow road if we have to close up every other avenue of travel in eastern Connecticut, for maybe it's northeastern Connecticut!) As to this, it may be said that many a man with pneumonia has been brought back to health without cutting his throat in an effort to save his life.

The propaganda which issues from a Plainfield source of publicity is another outpouring of twaddle, in the last analysis, dealing though it does with various interesting distinctions between tweddle-dee and tweddle-dum. Nothing in the article considers, except vaguely, the interests of the borough of Danielson or the town of Killingly, of which Danielson is a part. Mr. Eastern Connecticut must be cured if he has to submit to amputation of his right leg, when al bel seems to require a larger shoe.

Killingly proclaims from the mountain tops that the state of Connecticut is big enough to go forward with its trunk line highway developments without abandoning any highway now in the trunk line system. Turning present trunk line sections back on towns to care for is picayune retrogression and not to be thought of, unless one is willing to concede that Connecticut has stopped growing and is ready to sit back by the fireside and read what other progressive states are doing, in building and maintaining parallel trunk lines to accommodate ever-increasing traffic. If there be legislative barriers to this plan, why not concentrate on this with propaganda, instead of harping that one town should make a heavy annual sacrifice in money and effort—that a new road may be built to benefit many towns? If, as the article out of Plainfield stresses, it will be a small matter to make up the difference in cost between maintaining a certain line of gravel highway and a certain line of present trunk line to be turned back—a small matter for the town of Killingly, ever so small, why does the state balk at spending pennies when it regularly issues statements boasting of the millions it devotes to state highway improvement? If the cost would be so small to the town, how insignificant to the state.

The Green Hollow improvement is a desirable one. All of the towns along the route want it. But here in Killingly the officials representing the town, and speaking for the people, want the state to do something real along the lines of providing additional trunk lines for traffic relief. In this town it looks as though eastern Connecticut had better get together on the Green Hollow road proposal. The new roadway can be acquired and present trunk lines retained if half the action is put into an effort to obtain this result that is being expended on bromides that only excite and do not cure. Killingly will fight to the last ditch against the entire proposition unless an agreement is reached, by legislation or otherwise, that will oblige the state to continue its maintenance of the present Danielson-Waurepan route as a trunk line. Not a traveling man has been killed coming here from Norwich in years, so things are not so bad as they seem. The present highway will do, unless there is a real agreement protecting Killingly's interests.

MRS. HENRY M. DANIELSON CHURCH MEMBER 50 YEARS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Nov. 13—The death of Mrs. Harriet Hammond Danielson, 82, wife of Henry M. Danielson, occurred early Wednesday morning at their home on Main street. Mrs. Danielson had been in failing health for several months. Born in Pomfret, Sept. 23, 1843, a daughter of Henry and Emma Dorrance Hammond, she came to Danielson with her parents at the age of nine. Uniting with the Westfield Congregational church November 4, 1865, she had always maintained an interest in its affairs. She married Mr. Danielson February 7, 1902.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Danielson leaves four cousins, Mrs. John Davenport, of West Medford, Mass., Mrs. Albert D. Putnam, Mrs. John A. Paine and Miss Grace Bassett, of Danielson.

FLORIDA HOUSELOT SAMPLE LOST WHEN BOTTLE BROKE

DANIELSON, Nov. 13—That hombre who had "Follow Me For Ford Parts" chalked on the bank of his old Lizzie had nothing on the man who wept here Wednesday, upon dropping and breaking a bottle, the contents of which spilled promiscuously. He explained he had lost a sample of his newly purchased Florida houselot—and it might have been true.

It was recalled Wednesday by one who was a pupil in the Brooklyn Center school years ago, that in those days there was a United States history in the school library that contained a picture of the venerable John Farragut, who died in Brooklyn Monday evening. This picture definitely identified Mr. Farragut in his Union army assignment during the Civil war. Beneath the picture was the inscription "Snowball—Colonel's Orderly." Snowball was the cognomen first given Mr. Farragut during the Civil war and it clung to him, and in the most friendly sense, during all of his residence in Brooklyn.

Providing this is a fair weather day, concrete for the new state highway bridge over the Assawaga river will be poured before night. The big cement mixer that has been in use on the state highway contract between Morin avenue and Elmville has been taken down to the bridge and was all set Wednesday afternoon and ready to go into action this morning. Those who have the opportunity will be interested during today in seeing the big machine at work.

A bazaar under the auspices of St. James' parish had an auspicious opening, at the town hall Wednesday evening. Several hundred flocked to see the attractions and to enjoy the entertainment that was presented. There are various booths in charge of representatives of societies of the parish, these booths prettily decorated and arranged in clever manner. The attendance Wednesday evening was representative not only of Danielson, but of surrounding towns.

Concrete work on the new state highway between Danielson and Elmville is completed, but only part of the new highway is open to travel. A section from Judd avenue to Morin avenue is closed to allow the concrete to set before travel begins to pass over it. Workers are now concerned with building the shoulders of the new highway, giving attention to drains and other detail work that will occupy their attention for some time to come. It is anticipated that all detouring will be done away within in the near future and the fine new road opened to uninterrupted travel.

Mr. and Mrs. Cosmer A. Young and their daughter, Alice, of Mechanic street, are en route by boat from New York to Jacksonville and their winter home is in New Symrna, Fla. Traveling in their party are Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Clement and daughter, Mabel, of Townsend, Mass., relatives. The Townsend family are to be at St. Petersburg for the winter.

Mrs. J. H. Milligan of North Main street is to have the members of the Roundabout club at her home for a meeting Friday afternoon.

Arthur Grimes, who came north to attend the funeral of his father, Charles Grimes, of Pomfret, has returned to Florida. He has a position at the Belleair hotel, Bellevue, Fla.

Stop throwing away your safety razor blades! Have them re-sharpened better than new. We know what a shaving edge is. Gaston A. Maindon, barber, Exchange block.—Adv.

County investigator W. E. Jackson of Willimantic was a visitor in Danielson Wednesday.

Fine entertainment, many things to interest you at St. James' parish bazaar, town hall, tonight. You are invited.—Adv.

A series of promising amateur boxing bouts is scheduled to be held at the Casino arena, here next week. Young Major and Sunny Mays, both of Danielson, are appearing in two of the bouts carded.

Our display of Christmas handkerchiefs ready for your inspection. Thanksgiving linens. Exquisite satin-quilted bath robes just in. The Alice-Eleanor Shop.—Adv.

H. G. Beecher, of Brooklyn, for a brief time member of the state police force, has resigned and plans to spend the winter in Florida.

Another Indian summer day Wednesday, when during the afternoon, the mercury ran up to 66 degrees.

Harry Warren and John Gordon are members of a motor party now en route from Danielson in Mr. Warren's car for Florida. Mr. Warren has Miami as his destination. He expects to do an automobile livery business there during the winter season.

Leo J. L'Homme post, American legion, will benefit materially from the presentation of the show All Aboard, at the Orpheum theater this week. The profits obtained will be added to the post building fund.

Rhode Island continues to discuss a road project that would bring another line of trunk-line highway from North Scituate to the Connecticut line at East Killingly, this route intended to relieve congestion on the present Danielson-Providence route. And Rhode Island will build it without asking the towns of Scituate and Foster to take over maintenance of the present trunk line through those towns into Killingly.

When repairs to be made at once to the state armory in Danielson are completed some weeks hence, the building will be in the best condition since its construction, nearly 30 years ago.

Women have flocked to attend the free cooking course being given by the D. and P. Gas and Electric company at its local headquarters, Miss Sylvia Wheelock of Putnam demonstrator. Members of high school girls are taking the course. Women's and girls' clubs also are interested. A course also is to be given at the Community house in Plainfield.

MOVING SIDEWALKS MAY HELP PARISIANS ALONG BOULEVARDS

PARIS, Nov. 13, (AP)—Moving sidewalks will be established on the fashionable Paris boulevards and a few other congested thoroughfares in an effort to meet the transportation problem, if experiments conducted by the Inventions Office show the expected result.

The principal point to solve is the gradual transition from normal walking pace to a speed of eight miles an hour, without subjecting the passenger to jolts or the danger of a fall.

Two systems now under trial partly accomplish this. The first, however, which consists of small fixed rollers turning on themselves, imparts a tickling sensation to the sole of the foot. The second, which is made of strips of leather belting, is free from this defect but the transition from one speed to another is more abrupt. Both systems are provided with moving handrails on either side.

PUTNAM

CO. COMMISSIONERS' REPORT SHOWS ASSETS $138,121

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Nov. 13—The commissioners' report for Windham county for the year ending September 30, 1925, shows that the county has assets of $138,121.72, consisting largely of the jail and temporary home properties and liabilities in the form of outstanding orders amounting to $20,600. The balance in the treasury is $40.70. The report is signed by Edgar H. Cortis, Urgele Lafrance and A. C. Keith, county commissioners, and is certified by A. L. Weatherhead and N. J. Fournier, auditors.

The operation of the county jail at Brooklyn shows a deficit of $6,140.45. The receipts, including $6,243.43 received from the state for the board of prisoners, amounted to $8,216.57. The largest item aside from the state board was the sale of the products raised on the farm. The total expenditures for the jail were $14,357.02.

The temporary home at Putnam cost $26,688.69 to operate, the largest expense being clothing and provisions. It is interesting to note that $170.95 was expended for soap and disinfectants, showing that cleanliness is considered of great importance at the home. The state paid $21,989.50 for the board of children, which, with a few sundry receipts, leaves a deficit of $4297.44.

The report of the county treasurer shows that considerable sums were laid out during the year on improvements at the jail and the home. $4,429.92 was paid to the state for widows' aid, $2,000 to the Windham County Farmers' association and $3,230 to the town of Putnam for school expenses. Among the receipts is $1,722.81 from the tax on amusements. On October 1, 1924, there was a balance on hand of $11,302.38 of which $5,000 was deposited in the first National Bank of Putnam. Dividends from the receiver of the bank has amounted to $2,826.42 and there is an approved claim of $2,312.54 which is recounted as an asset. The outstanding orders for $20,600 cover temporary loans.

MRS. MILLER MINISTER AS WELL AS HUSBAND

PUTNAM, Nov. 13—Mrs. John R. Miller of Moodus, has been granted a local preacher's license by the M. E. Conference. Mr. and Mrs. Miller recently moved from East Thompson to Moodus, where the former has charge of the Methodist church. Friends of Mrs. Miller feel sure that she will make a success in her new work.

DESERTED FOR "FELICE" WIFE GETS DIVORCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 13—Corinne Phaneuf of North Grosvenordale was granted a divorce from Idola Phaneuf recently by Judge Dickinson of the superior court. They were married at North Grosvenordale May 10, 1905. She said that the first years of their married life were happy ones, but about two years ago there was a change in her husband, and January 22, 1924 he left her. Sometimes before he left he frequently spoke of a woman he called Felice. Constable Nere Codierre of North Grosvenordale testified that he knew the man and that Phaneuf was now living with the other woman in Manchester. The decree was granted and Mrs. Phaneuf was allowed to resume her maiden name of Corinne Laprencelle.

George F. Miles of Pomfret is spending several weeks at Jacksonville, Fla.

Misses Gladys Peterson and Mildred Hattin of Pomfret have entered Wilfred Academy, Boston.

Ernest L. Davis of this city left a few days ago to spend the winter at Safety Harbor, Florida. Mr. Davis has been spending his winters in Florida for several years.

There is lively interest hereabouts in the decision of Judge Edwin C. Dickenson of the superior court in the case of Pomfret school against the town of Pomfret, appeal from the board of relief. Judge Dickinson held that the property of the school is taxable, on the grounds that an institution teaching elementary grade studies, although it also fitted students for college, was not "exclusively" an academy as the law demands in order to get exemption from taxes. The case will affect private academies in Connecticut. Among those who had testified that the Pomfret school, although teaching academic studies, also taught the subjects pursued in the seventh and eighth grades of the common schools were Robert A. Case, principal of Windham High school, Rexford Supervisor Levi T. Garrison and Supervisor A. Wilson Greer, of that district.

Mrs. Edna Morris who was injured in an automobile accident at Dark Hollow hill last week is has been taken to the Day Kimball hospital for treatment.

The Putnam Checker club will again compete with the Danielson Athletic club team next Friday night at the room of the C. A. C.

Mrs. Howard Mansfield of Center street has returned from a visit of several weeks with relatives in Detroit, Mich.

Howard Perrin of Woodstock has a position with a typewriter company at Jacksonville, Florida and will leave in a few days to assume his new duties.

Anastazya Karykowska, wife of Louis Karykowska, of Main street died at St. Vincent hospital in Worcester following an operation. The funeral was held Wednesday morning at St. Mary's church where requiem mass was offered at nine o'clock. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dion of Webster have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dumas of Providence street.

Mrs. Jesse Rich entertained seven friends at her home on Grove street with a four course dinner and auction bridge.

The dinner consisted of tomato bisque and saltines; lamb chops, potato chips, buttered rolls and celery; stuffed bananas with crushed peanuts and salad dressing, nut bread, sandwiches, cake; Nabisco ice cream sandwiches, fancy cakes and coffee. It was a silverless dinner, not a piece of silver being used during the four courses. The novel idea of the primitive manner of eating this 1925 dinner afforded much amusement. The room was decorated with yellow chrysanthemums, with yellow baskets filled with nuts and each guests had a yello bib. The guests were Mrs. Genevieve Letters, Mrs. E. B. Simpson, Mrs. Otto E. Wulf, Mrs. J. J. Russell, Mrs. Charles E. Dean, Mrs. Silas M. Wheelock and Mrs. Arthur D. McIntyre. At bridge, Mrs. Genevieve Letters won first prize and Mrs. E. L. Simpson, took second prize.

There is to be a musical entertainment and progressive whist party for the members and the friends of the Parent-Teachers' Association in the High school auditorium.

Mrs. Charles E. Searls has been entertaining her sister, Mrs. Thompson, at her home in Thompson.

Some people flatter themselves when they can't get others to do it for them.

JEWETT CITY

TOWN NURSE COMMITTEE MEETS TO ORGANIZE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 13—The newly appointed town nurse committee met in the Red Cross room last evening. Rr. G. H. Jennings was elected chairman and Miss Margaret Driscoll secretary and treasurer. A vote of appreciation was given Miss Driscoll for her services, as she filled the office of treasurer, during Joseph H. McCarthy's absence. Mr. McCarthy's work was also included in this vote. At his request, the two offices were combined. It was voted to engage Miss Alice Brennan, R. N., as public health nurse for another year. Her report for October showed an increase in care for the sick, and calls to the nurse. The metropolitan calls were: Adults 157, baby 24, total 181. Other calls: Adults 73, operation 1, delivery 3, total 57. A total fo 238 calls for the month. The bill to the metropolitan was $123.75. Other collections 21, $5.20 was received for a March collection. The total amount of money received was $149.95.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Franklin and children and Miss Verna Clark of Phenix, R. I., were recent guests at Mrs. Agnes Franklin's.

A Teachers' Institute is to be held at Riverside Grammar School Friday. Teachers from Canterbury, Lisbon, Sterling, Voluntown and Griswold will attend. At 9:15 a. m., there will be an exhibition of folk dancing by first grades, followed by two-part singing by the eighth grade. At 9:30 the subject of Reading will be discussed by Miss Tuttle. At 10:30 Dr. A. G. Ireland, state director of physical education and health, will speak. At 1:30 p. m., Robert C. Rice, director of physical training from New London, will speak. At 2:30, Frederick R. Noble, principal, of the Willimantic Model School, will discuss the topic of Arithmetic.

Mrs. William Phillips is to have charge of the Red Cross Roll Call drive in the Brick School house district, Lisbon. Elnor LeClaire will assist Benjamin Schleiffer in his district.

One of the most successful and enthusiastic meetings ever held by the Missionary society of the Baptist church took place in the vestry Tuesday at 2 p. m. with Mrs. A. M. Brown in the chair. The White Cross committee reported sending three parcels and a box of clothing to the Mather Industrial school. Mrs. Swift was appointed chairman of White Cross work. The program for the afternoon "Fall Fashions from Abroad," was in charge of Mrs. Swift. The meeting presented a picture both vivid and contrasting. Here were to be seen Fashions from the Dark Continent, mingling with the gay colors of Oriental China and Japan paraded alongside those of Burmah and Assam. Mrs. Tripp with two assistants represented a domestic science teacher from the Vanga School, Africa. Assam was represented by Mrs. Brewster in the dress of a missioner's wife, and her two assistants. China was portrayed by Mrs. Scates, garbed as a teacher from the mother craft school. She was accompanied by her little daughter, Athiam dressed in Chinese costume, and three other assistants. Burmah had as its delegation Mrs. G. H. Prior, with three assistants. Mrs. Prior was dressed as a nurse from the Moulmein hospital. A pleasing touch was given this representation as Mrs. Prior's rendering of the hymn, "Jesus Savior Pilot Me." Japan was represented by Mrs. B. R. Gardner as a Kindergarten teacher. Accompanying Mrs. Gardner were two Japanese children with their mother. Then came the nine college girls who gave an illustration of college life in the orient. A feature of this part of the program was the singing of college songs by the girls. A social half hour followed during which tea and wafers were served.

In the bowling match Wednesday evening the scores stood:

Margaret McGowan	50	85	76	251
Mrs. Liberty	59	61	55	175
Agnes Dudkowski	76	81	81	238
Helen McGowan	102	70	76	258

PRIMITIVE MOVIES OF PENNY ARCADES GRIND OUT HISTORY

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 13 (AP)—Only a half hour's ride from the humming studios of Hollywood and Culver City, where the movies march on to their appointed future with a great blare of publicity, there is a place where time has stopped and where one may see the film industry in its swaddling clothes, naively offering to the passerby Pictures That Move! for a penny.

It is the penny arcades of Main street, Los Angeles, where Jim Jeffries is still heavyweight champion of the world and where, on the picture postcards of bygone era, Gloria Swanson still wears the bathing suit of her beach comedy days.

Here, in machines called Mutoscopes de the great Jeffries-Sharkey fight of November, 1899. Filmed by the old Biograph company in New York, it still feeds the gaze of the fan willing to put a penny in the slot and turn the crank. Here Jack Dempsey is unknown; of his victory over Willard no hint has penetrated this hiding place of the past.

And here, if one has a good memory for faces seen on the nickelodeon screen almost a score of years ago, one may recognize other features, still familiar, and perhaps even famous, in filmdom.

In his early association with Biograph the man who later directed The Birth of a Nation earned a modest living directing these quaint Mutoscope pictures which one sees by peering into a hollow contraption of metal. If one is not afraid of being seen in these penny arcades and searches long enough, it is even possible to find somewhere the Mutoscope in which David Wark Griffith acted.

And after a few hours spent among the Mutoscopes of the penny arcades the student of the motion picture destiny may gain new respect for the men who like Griffith took these crude and customarily scandalous one-minute comedy affairs and out of them, step by step, lifted motion pictures to their present plane.

ELECTRIC LIGHT TO INDUCE HENS TO LAY

HARTFORD, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Artificial light may be used to coerce no induce the hens of the state into producing enough eggs to stave off the threatened shortage which is predicted may send prices to $1.25 and $1.50 a dozen before the Christmas season. Retail prices today ranged from 95 cents to $1.05 a dozen and these prices have held for more than a week. Normally, the layers do not begin again after the fall "layoff" until the first of the year and the poultrymen are planning midnight "electric sunlight" for the next two months to make the hens advance the lay schedules.

Amy Lowell Died Rich

Amy Lowell, the poet, turned out to be a shrewd investor and financier. Upon probating her will after the death a few months ago, it was discovered that she left an estate of $809,644.54 of which over $100,000 was in real property, and the balance in personal holdings.

Sense of touch consists of knowing when to strike for a loan.

PLAINFIELD

CHAS. O. DODGE MASTER OF PLAINFIELD GRANGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Nov. 13—At the Plainfield Grange meeting last night, the annual election took place, with the following result: Master, Charles O. Dodge, chaplain, Mrs. Thomas Cooper; treasurer, Jason Lathrop; secretary Mrs. William Gardner; steward, Louis Gendron; assistant steward, Elmer Green; lady steward, Mrs. Susan Dodge; overseer, Harold Hopkins; gate keeper, Fred Lyons; lecturer, Mrs. Irene Gendron; Ceres, Mrs. Rose Gendron; Flora, Mrs. Ethel Lyon; Pomona, Mrs. Lillian Roode. This (Thursday) night a large delegation is to be present at the meeting of the Pachaug Grange, for which a special program has been arranged.

At a recent meeting of the O. E. S. it was planned to hold a special meeting Monday night next, for the past matrons and past patrons.

The recent trouble of the local telephones, was found to be a high tension wire crossed, after five men had worked all day Monday and part of Tuesday locating the difficulty.

The first in a series of five entertainments, to be held at the Community house was held Wednesday night with the McCords as chief entertainers. A good attendance was recorded.

The contract for the building of Hall Rock school house was awarded to Plassmann and Dubreil, at a meeting held by the town school committee.

The committee of the church social met Wednesday night at the vestry of the Congregational church to complete plans etc. The program consists of vocal and instrumental music and readings, followed by refreshments. This is the second in a series of social for this church.

William Barstow attended the funeral service of Theodore D. Pond at Brooklyn Tuesday. Mr. Pond died at the home of relatives in Providence, where he was visiting.

Jason Lathrop has returned home after a pleasant trip to Rhode Island and Massachusetts. One of the outstanding features of Mr. Lathrop's trip, was a visit to the historic "Wayside Inn" at Sudbury, Mass., purchased by Henry Ford, who is making a park of the surrounding property. Mr. Lathrop was interested to see the antique furniture boast of which dates back to the Revolution, especially an old grandfather clock, made in England in 1716 and still running. This Inn, was the resting place of Washington and Lafayette during their visits in that territory.

At a meeting of the school committee of the town of Plainfield, held Tuesday November 17th, sealed bids for the erection of the school house at Flat Rock District were received and opened.

The firms bidding and the amounts bid are as follows:

Charles E. Hopkins & Sons $2,780; Edward Bellevance & Son $2,100; Daniel A. Smith $1,950; Winfred Gardner $1,900. Plassmann & Du Breuil $1,700.

It was unanimously voted by the committee to award the contract to Plassmann & De Breuil at the contract price, work to begin at once.

REELFOOT LAKE THIS SEASON HAVEN FOR HUNTED WILL LIFE

NASHVILLE, Nov. 13 (AP)—Reelfoot Lake, winter quarters for millions of the wild duck family, this year offers protected refuge to the migratory visitors from the north and the far northwest.

A sanctuary in the grassy bend of the curiously-shaped lake and in the deep wild grasses is wired off from the reach of the hunter's gun.

A heavy fine is provided for any person who enters the wire enclosure or draws a boat about the grasses within, which will be permitted to grow up in the wildest confusion, untouched by human.

Reelfoot lake was formed by the great earthquake of 1811-12. It is ragged and jagged. Some parts of the marshy sections are impenetrable and it is very dangerous for hunters to attempt a trip on its vast expanse without the guidance of a "pusher."

Reelfoot's northern tip extends just over the Kentucky state line. The lake proper contains 14,150 acres and with its marshes included, 25,050 acres.

Thousands of sportsmen from the United States and many from foreign countries have visited the lake every year. A conservative estimate of the number killed on the first day of the open season was 10,000.

The state is considering the establishment of a biological station there for scientific study and investigation.

GERMANY NEXT COUNTRY TO GO DRY THINKS DR. CHERRINGTON

WESTERVILLE, O., Nov. 13. (AP)—Despite the fondness of many Germans for their beer, Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, believes that Germany will be the next great country to go dry. Economic conditions will demand the change.

"The European industry is finding it hard now to compete with American industry," he said. "The reason is that prohibition is reflected in a better American workman, and this improvement goes all along the line."

Dr. Cherrington says that the adoption of prohibition by either Great Britain or Germany will cause other countries of the world to fall in line.

TANGO MAYBE LAST GASP IN RHYTHM BUT VISITORS SHUN IT

PARIS, Nov. 13 (AP)—Dancing masters, and especially dancing mistresses, have decreed that the tango must be danced; that it is the last gasp in rhythm and the poesy of motion. But the decrees are lost on most of the visitors to Paris. Even Frenchmen decline it.

Spaniards and South Americans make a majority of the dancers in fashionable clubs and cafes when the tango comes on. This is especially true at afternoon dances, when most of the participants are not in formal dress. Street clothes and the tango do not go well together, and it cannot be done at all in Oxford bags.

One American girl who refused the tango at a tea party laughingly apologized: "I have given it up. I have decided that it could only be danced with some man one is desperately in love with and should be done in a secluded verandah in the moonlight. It is too hard to stage it properly. It is too hard to stage it properly."

Fault is something that is often found where it is not.

CUTTING THE TAXES

When it is declared by the chairman of the house ways and means committee that the condition of the treasury will not warrant a reduction in revenue of more than the $300,000,000 that the committee favors, he is voicing the facts that have been presented to the committee and which it accepts as correct.

In making the reduction in revenue by over $300,000,000 the committee is actuated by the known and estimated conditions and a determination to keep within the bounds of sane tax reduction instead of plunging into a rough deeper cut only to have the folly of that brought to attention later on through the creation of a deficit.

The house committee has given a thorough hearing to the matter of tax reduction. It has found it impossible to accept all the suggestions made and there are instances where it has decided upon cuts which some of the members were much opposed to. In other words they have been convinced by the statement of facts and the sentiment of the people that certain revisions should be undertaken. The committee is not refraining from further recommendations than it has made because it is convinced the people have been given all the relief they are entitled to, but they have been guided by the established facts. It is their purpose of cut the tax in keeping with what the condition of the treasury will warrant. They are proposing to congress that the tax reduction garment be cut in accordance with the cloth available. That is rational and sound.

If the financial situation were such that further and deeper cuts could be made there is evidence that the committee would not hesitate to make recommendations in accord therewith. As it is they prefer to proceed safely and, by adhering to such a policy, to keep the financial condition sound and make it possible for further reductions another year if justified by conditions. It is far preferable to proceed on a scientific basis than to adopt a hit or miss policy and incur regrets. It is well that limits should get recognition.

OUR MERCHANT MARINE

From the day when the cry for "ships, ships and more ships" went forth up to the present time we have not received the proper adjustment of our merchant marine problem. We want a merchant marine, we need a merchant marine and yet we are piling up deficits every year in the government handling of the merchant marine which are not satisfactory. Those deficits are not as large as they were but $25,000,000 a year is too large. We are opposed to ship subsidies but just as long as it is possible for the United States treasury to be tapped to fill up the hole that is made by the increased expenditures over revenue for the government owned merchant ships there isn't much difference. We avoid the name but we have to provide the money.

In his communication to the merchant marine conference, Secretary Hoover of the department of commerce deals pointedly with the situation. He wastes no words in declaring that there should be an abandonment of government operation, that the ships should be gotten into private ownership to be operated by private capital and where the federal treasury will not be available for relief in time of financial distress. He recites a well understood fact when he says that private enterprise is handicapped and balked when it has to compete with government operation.

Our experiences since the merchant marine was established bear out his statement when he says "We will never have a real or satisfactory merchant marine until it is owned and maintained by private enterprise. The government cannot operate cheaply. It cannot secure revenue as large as private enterprise. It cannot avoid the interminable difficulties and wastes of bureaucracy and, above all, the direct and indirect political pressures."

Secretary Hoover does not favor having the merchant marine placed under his department but he does advocate the abandonment of the shipping board and the placing of [illegible] with the Emergency Fleet corporation. The shipping board has not created a favorable impression because of its squabbles.

MORE SPEED

Eight miles an hour cannot be recorded as much better speed than that obtained in a traffic jam, so there is nothing unusual about the decision of the New York board of aldermen in almost unanimously voting to permit the speed limit on Brooklyn bridge to be increased to 25 miles an hour. The present limit is 15 miles an hour. Motorists on the bridge during the rush hours in their daily trips to and from work have been held down to a speed of 8 miles an hour. Under such conditions it does not require much time to cross the bridge.

It was only a few months ago that Rhode Island automobilists called for a speed of 35 miles an hour on the main thoroughfares to keep traffic moving. That is faster than many drivers over the right of traffic, but it unquestionably helps in keeping down the long lines of machines which are held up by the slow movers, and prevents much of the chance taking that is done when it becomes necessary for the impatient driver to pass the slow one.

There was the time when subways were piled upon upper, when elevated tracks were constructed and then much concern was displayed over the rapidly moving cars. With more care and more competition a different viewpoint has been established. There is a recognition for more speed in order to create greater safety in the highways. This must not be interpreted as inviting reckless driving but an effort to have the highways handle more traffic without forcing as many cars to pass the slow which have hitherto been proceeding at a slow pace.

It can be appreciated that better speed on Brooklyn bridge will make the ending of most congestion.

FOREIGN BUILT

When it comes to exclusive importations of narcissus and other bulbs because they are carriers of dangerous pests it is to be questioned that they are bringing something to this country which is not already here. But according to the testimony which has been given in an effort to have the embargo removed which is scheduled to go into effect the first of the year it appears that domestic bulbs are similarly infested as that those which come from abroad are as worse than those here and in some instances not so bad.

Much opposition is being displayed the exclusion which was decided upon three years ago. Large purchases are made every year of foreign bulbs and if that business is shut off it will mean a much greater demand upon domestic production, all of which might be regarded as being beneficial to home industry were it the fact that the pests which it is hoped to avoid had not already gained a foothold here. If the foreign bulbs are no worse than the domestic ones so far as harboring the pests is concerned it would with the advocates of the embargo to show why that should stand in the way of a continuance of such business. It can hardly be urged that it is encouraging local industry unless something more convincing in the way of evidence can be furnished. There is already a duty paid upon this foreign product so that revenue is obtained from the importations, but if the pests brought along at the same time are really dangerous the objections today must be much worse than it was three years ago. Whether that can be brought out in the rehearing of the matter is now the important question.

AFIRE AT SEA

With the fifth of a fleet of passenger carrying vessels afire at sea within a few years and two within a month it would indicate that the situation was one that called for more than the ordinary inquiry.

The fire on the Lexington, a steamship of 7,000 tons, was not such as to destroy the vessel but the fact cannot be overlooked that the lives of about 500 passengers were reckoned. Just why it was not as serious as the fire which destroyed the Commercio of the same line last month remains to be told but the fire record on that line of steamers is not a happy one.

It was a case where the wireless calls had brought assistance to the point where it is probable no lives would have been lost had it been a repetition of the Commercio fire, but it is highly desirable that passengers should not be subjected to the risks that might arise in the case of a sea passenger carrying ship. It it was the character of the cargo or if it was the conditions that prevail on the steamship should be promptly determined by an investigation both by the company and the federal inspectors.

With so many fires occurring on these vessels there is revealed a condition which ought to be improved. It is at least time to find out where the trouble lies and what is responsible for it and to put into effect such corrective measures as will eliminate the condition in the future. There are had enough on land to say nothing of on the high seas.

WEIGHTY DECISION.

"I'm getting very down," confided the dyed Park youth to his friend from Woodlawn, sitting down next to him in the chamber. "Wouldn't be so bad if only they'd stay put, but they keep on continual lowering."

"Sigh!" the Woodlawn man snorted with severity. "Nagging at that poor old again, are you?"

"Huh!" the Hyde Park man retorted in his turn. "Not nagging, just pathetically murmuring as all married men do!

"When I opened her through the bobbed-hair epidemic," he went on, "with all the fluctuations of shall I or shan't I and finally landed her in the barber's chair and achieved a little perm I thought that she'd rest quietly but do you know what is upon us now? Imogene is in the throes of wondering whether to let it grow out or keep on having it clipped.

"Well, when she had told me all her troubles I advised her to go ahead and let it grow and start the ball a-rolling! You, she came back, but what after she had let it grow several weeks and endured the being at that awkward stage when it is too short to do up and too long to be a real classy bob and looked like an old-fashioned suffragist or something that has just escaped—what if anybody else followed suit, but kept right on bobbing and paying no attention? Wouldn't she feel foolish having it all clipped again he thought she had just come to and realized what her head looked like? Well, if it really was the style in Paris, I guessed dat, she could be buoyed up by that consciousness, no matter how Chicago women acted, couldn't she? Sure, sure, she wailed, wasn't I dumb! Before you could be buoyed up by your inner consciousness and have it really take, she said that you had to have several millions dollars, a few quarts of people and a reputation, any kind of a reputation, for or against, and then people would whisper 'why of course you must be right and they'll want to copy you!

"But if a totally unknown woman like herself, able to pay her bills and go away two weeks in the summer, tried a stunt like that nobody would even notice what she was doing!

"I was in a hurry to get back to my novel so I tried a new tack. Be independent, I advised her. If she preferred to wear long hair, wear it! If short hair was her suit, chip in! Just hold up her chin and please herself and tell people practically to go hang! That was the ticket! I thought Imogene was going to pass away on the spot—she said I was callous, dumb and heartless. Why, when I was snoring peacefully nights she lay awake worrying over what she should do and it simply had to be decided and why couldn't I help her? Mum, I said, marking my page in my book, well, what was Elise doing with her hair? Elise always looked stylish!

"Imogene walked to the window and walked back before she trusted herself to speak. She had always known I was crazy about Elise and she supposed it would do no good to point out that no one looking stylish, the worst one just as chic in an aluminum cap frame and had about as much idea of what was what as an African monkey that had never descended to the ground from the treetops. Go ahead with my little affair with Elise if I wanted to and never mind her, much she cared!

"She'd die before she'd descend to copying Elise and if Elise was letting her hair grow that settled it, Imogene would keep hers short. Whatever Elise did was sure to be wrong—had I been so befuddled with admiration at the last dance that I had not observed the utterly atrocious gown the woman had worn? Probably in my infatuation I had thought Elise looked a raving beauty, but if I could have heard what the other women said about the array!

"'Hey,' I said, 'what's this to do with your bobbed hair?' And Imogene said it had a 1-1-ot to do and I'd know it if I wasn't a complete dumb-bell. And she won't say a word to me this morning beyond yes and no, mostly no or else she doesn't hear me—you know."

"They ought-a be born with feathers," sympathized the Woodlawn man who felt his friend's troubles keenly. —Exchange.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

BULGER-GREEK BORDER

The bombardment of the Bulgarian town of Petrich by Greek guns brought forth from American cartoonists the inevitable smoking volcano with "Balkans" heavily labeled on the lower slopes. The artists might have pencilled a whole range of volcanoes. All of them could be dormant except one large cone marked "Petrich." The district around Petrich has been a center of Balkan eruption.

The Greek-Bulgarian boundary line near which Petrich lies is approximately 200 miles long but there are very few places in this stretch where it is easy to penetrate from one country to the other," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C.

"One of these routes is by the Maritza river which runs through Adrianople before turning into Bulgarian territory. But this entrance would bring Turkey into the question since the lower reaches of the Maritza form the Turkish-Greek frontier.

"Petrich, on the other hand, is the doorway to a private corridor between Greece and Bulgaria. The town lies close to the Struma river which cuts its way directly north through the disjointed mountain ranges of the Balkans. The Struma is an avenue to the heart of Bulgaria and to Sofia, as straight and broad as the Hudson is to Albany. Nowhere else between the Struma and the Maritza is there a direct pass to the interior. This doorway to Bulgaria is also within easy reach of the sea. Saloniki, the important Greek city and logical port for most of the Balkan peninsula, is only 50 miles away.

"Villages where fighting has been reported all lie in the southwest corner of Bulgaria. Many of them figured in the Balkan wars leading up to the World war. Demir Hissar, which has been serving as a Greek concentration point, was the scene of a double massacre in 1918. The defeated Bulgarian army was retreating up the Struma valley when the Greek inhabitants of Demir Hissar fell upon the Bulgarians.

"Before the Greek army reached the scene, the Bulgarian rear guard had exacted swift and bloody vengeance.

"Another familiar name in the Balkan news is 'comitadjis.' Translated this means 'committee man,' which sounds peaceful enough. But the word 'comitadjis' is enough to make Greece shiver and the Bulgarian government shudder.

"'Comitadjis' appeared in the Balkan lexicon shortly after the treaty of Stephano. England had been sufficiently aroused by the 'Bulgarian atrocities' at the hands of the Turk to cooperate with Russia in assuring an autonomous Bulgaria. But England could not approve Russia gaining her long-sought outlet to the sea, although it would be only by proxy through Rumania and Bulgaria. Therefore, the Macedonian plain, which is now Grecian territory between Bulgaria and the Aegean sea, was reserved to Turkey.

"Bulgarian residents in the Macedonian plain despaired of further help against the Turk from western Europe so they organized their 'committee men.' These insurrent bands spread a reign of terror. Turkey's customary severe control was revamped into a rule of ruthlessness but that did not check the 'comitadjis.' Even women joined the guerrilla bands, enduring camp life, marching mountain trails at night and obeying the strict rules of the insurrents. The story is told of one young woman who joined a band to be with her lover. She began to lag from weariness and the chief ordered her left behind. The 'comitadjis' rules permit no desertion. When her lover tried to stay behind with her he was executed.

"The Turk's attempt to put down the 'comitadjis' rebellion unified the Balkan peoples for once and in 1912 they very nearly drove Moslem power out of Europe. The advantages of this war were dissipated by the fighting over the spoils in 1913 when Bulgaria contested against all her neighbors. The original 'comitadjis' organization did not die and its border raids are believed to be partly the cause of the present strife.

"Greek-Bulgar warfare has blazed up in the presence of two movements which were expected to promote permanent peace. The exchange of alien populations has gone forward rapidly between Greece and Bulgaria. Tens of thousands of Bulgarians living in Greek territory have crossed the border and passed up the Struma valley while Greeks have been moving in the other direction. Furthermore, the irritation of both Bulgaria and Yugoslavia at being denied a trade outlet to the Aegean has been relieved recently by the Greek government's declaration making Saloniki a free port, in accordance with the Treaty of Neuilly."

THIRA

There is at least one place in the world where a large and clangorous boiler factory would not be unwelcome. On the Greek island called, in recent news dispatches, Santorini, but now officially designated Thira, a visiting observer reports the natives have become so accustomed to being rocked by the heavy rumbling and rifle-cracklings of a newly active volcano they fear they will suffer from insomnia when it quiets down again. The volcano started its eruption August 1 and will continue, it has been predicted, until next August.

"Thira has been for thousands of years a theater of volcanic activity," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. "The waters of its great bay have boiled and flamed for days, and islands of red-hot matter have risen and disappeared as if controlled by stage machinery.

"At one time Thira was the top of a huge active volcano. It probably owes its present peculiar crescent shape to a tremendous eruption some 25 centuries ago when great gaps were blown in its sides. Another theory is that the mountain mass on which the volcano rested has sunk, leaving only the highest portions of the crater's rim above the surface of the water.

"Volcanic activity in this part of the Aegean is practically a continuous performance, although nothing short of a catastrophe seems to be recorded as as 'eruption.' B. C. 197 is given by some authorities as the date of the first great recorded eruption. There have since been several major outbreaks, causing the appearance and disappearance of certain small islands (not the present ones, however) in the center of the crater.

"The number '7' figures in the dates chosen by the volcano to be active. Records show eruptions during B. C. 197 and A. D. 726, 1570, 1573, 1707, 1711, 1847 and 1870. During the latter eruption an island arose in the center of the basin to a height of 420 feet. It was named George crater, for King George of Greece.

"Today the remainder of the once great rim can be traced only by the islands which help to inclose the water-filled crater. In the center of this basin lie the Kaymani islands, representing the peaks of new volcanic upheavals within historic times. According to reports a new island has been added to this group by the current disturbances.

"The islands, which are on the direct steamer route between Athens and Egypt, are not unpossessing from a distance. Owing to the lack of water there are no trees. The inner walls of the crater descend to the central basin in sheer cliffs, from 600 to 1000 feet in height. The external slope, however, is more gradual and the thick layer of pumice stone, which covers it, is favorable to the growth of the vine.

"In close proximity on this slope are the two principal sources of wealth. The mining and shipping of 'Santorini earth,' a composition of pumice stone valuable as a hydraulic cement, and the production of wine furnish employment to most of the 15,000 inhabitants of these islands, whose combined area is only half that of the District of Columbia.

"Phira, the capital, nestles on the spur of a hill at the edge of the inner basin. A zigzag road winds up to it from its port, Skala, directly below, and its white houses and cupolas enliven the brown crater walls in the bright Mediterranean sunshine.

"Approaching Thira by steamer from the northwest the gentle vine-clad outer slopes formed by the crater suddenly open and disclose an enormous basin, seemingly enclosed on all sides, the deep brown rock walls of which are stratified, like marble-cake, with deposits of lighter-colored pumice stone. Clinging to the crater rim are several small villages and numerous many-sailed windmills, similar to those on the Isle of Samos, near by.

"The ancient capital, Thira, seven hours away by horseback on the eastern shore, perches on a ridge or plateau dropping on three sides. It must have been easy to defend in the days when the island was in turn a Phoenician, a Spartan, an Egyptian, a Roman, a Frank and a Turkish colony. For like its sister islands in the Aegean, Thira has known many masters. The first settlers are believed to have been the Phoenicians, but the principal ruins uncovered date from Roman times.

"Excavations reveal a long central street or road, interested by numerous irregular side streets. Several temples, baths, a large theater, shrines, markets and dwelling houses have been found. Underneath the stage of the Roman theater traces of a Ptolemaic proscenium, on which the arc of the orchestra abutted have been found. There are also a number of sanctuaries, hewn from solid rock, to the Egyptian Gods Isis, Serapis and Anubis."

Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

King Ferdinand of Roumania, whose administration is alleged to have been the object of a communist plot which has been brought to light in Bucharest, has had rather a tempestuous reign since he came to the throne in 1914, following the death of his uncle, King Charles. For some years bolshevist propagandists are said to have been active in Roumania and in 1919 there were reports of a revolutionary plot against King Ferdinand. The king was born in 1865 and is a member of the Hohenzollern family. His early life was passed in Germany and two of his brothers fought as generals in the German army in the late war. In 1893 Ferdinand was married to Princess Marie of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, a granddaughter of Queen Victoria of Great Britain and first cousin to King George V.

Stories That Recall Others

Why She Blushed

In a town in the west there is a church that has a bright young pastor but the attendance is unfortunately small. Among the parishioners was an agreeable young widow. One evening as she was leaving the church she was addressed by a deacon.

"How did you like the sermon?"

"I think it was perfectly lovely," was the enthusiastic reply. "But there were so few of us that every time the person said 'dearly beloved' I positively blushed."

Three Fourths Married

This teacher has never had very much use for fractions on the typewriter. She gave various reasons for her dislike, but the other day she admitted to her close friend the real reason. She was filling out a government application which left blanks after the words Married ——— and Single ———. She checked the word single and put a hyphen after the word married—so she thought. Her examiner laughed and said he hoped she would get the other fourth of a husband. She had held down the shift key and had written the fraction three fourths which on her typewriter was on the same key with the hyphen.

From Small Beginnings

Robert Burns, the Great Scotch Poet

In a household so poor that it could not afford the luxury of meat, Robert Burns took his share of privations. In fact, he was the "hired man" even from childhood. With his little hands he took hold of the wooden flail and beat out the grain, his back and arms aching and his head whirling. He drove the horse that pulled the plow through the rather barren soil. With almost nothing about to encourage him, he laid the foundations for that career of poetry that has made his name honored over the entire world, that has led to the erection of statues of him in every English-speaking land and that has given to the world such a heart-moving song as "Auld Lang Syne."

Something within him drove him to study. He went to a little school and there gained a slight education. His real education he gave himself. In the few moments when he was not at work in the field he read, and he even propped books before him on the table to read while he ate and thus save time for work. When he went out into the field he took with him an active brain. His muscles carried on farm work; his brain lived in the realm of poetry. Thus, when he plowed up a mouse's nest, he found in it material for one of his most beautiful poems. When he drove the horses home after the day's work he turned his thoughts into rhyme. When he looked about him at the cottage life and thought of his serious, religious father he saw in all this material for such a rich poem as "The Cotter's Saturday Night." To him every subject, whether in the fields or in the home, was a subject for poetry. Because he wrote of all this from the very depths of his heart he glorified Scotch life and made immortal poetry.

Burns' life was far from happy or fortunate. He was always beset by poverty and the necessity for hard work. He moved from one poor farm to another, and finally published a volume of his poems to get money with which to buy a ticket to America. The poems were successful and he gave up his proposed trip and went to Edinburgh. There for a time he was lionized and then neglected. He became a guzzler of liquor, a farmer, and at last died at 37, a broken and disappointed man.

Carlyle says that Burns should have given himself wholly to poetry, regardless of praise or blame, and have continued in the simple life to which he was born. However that may be, Burns' poetry is an inspiration to all who read it.

Carbon Melted

The long-sought after process of melting carbon, whose lack has stood in the way of the manufacture of genuine diamonds, has been discovered by a group of German chemists, Drs. Alterthum, Fehse and Pirani, according to Science Magazine. Carbon has been one of the most heat-resistant substances known and for that reason it has been used for arc lights and carbon filament lamps where this substance found such resistance that it raised it to white heat without melting.

But the existence of diamonds which are pure crystalized carbon tantalized chemists for years, because it proved that at some time in the past carbon had been in a molten state before it formed the transparent eight-faced diamond crystal. Graphite has been known for a long time and can be made artificially, but unlike the diamond, it is softer, opaque and forms six-faced crystals.

Dr. Alterthum and his co-workers heated a graphite cylinder about 5 1-2 inches in length, and an inch and a half in diameter, the thickened ends of which were bent in copper electrodes, by means of an electric current. The various temperatures attained were measured at the middle of the cylinder through an opening. It was definitely determined that some degree of melting actually occurred within the bore of the carbon cylinder, and the melting point was determined as about 6,300 degrees Fahrenheit.

Theft of $100,000 in liberty bonds and $800 in currency was reported to the police by John R. Osborne, wealthy Los Angeles business man, who is a guest at the Hotel Maryland at Pasadena.

Buster Bear Saves His Coat

Think quickly and as quickly act
Though you may lacking be in tact.
—Buster Bear.

Up in a tree in the Green Forest was Buster Bear. On the ground under the tree was a hunter with a terrible gun. The hunter had started out that morning to try to shoot Buster Bear for nothing under the sun but that he wanted Buster's fine fur coat for a rug to put before the fireplace in his home. He had hunted and hunted and hunted that morning without getting so much as a glimpse of Buster Bear. But now he had Buster treed. Yes, sir, he had Buster up a tree where he could neither hide nor run away. But—that hunter didn't know it.

You see, he hadn't thought of looking up in trees for Buster Bear. He had looked this way and looked that way on the ground, and finally had stopped to rest under the very tree in which Buster was, but hadn't once looked up. But if he didn't know that he had Buster treed, Buster knew it. He looked right down at that hunter and his terrible gun and it gave him an all-gone feeling. Yes, sir, that is just the kind of a feeling it gave him. He knew in less than half a minute that the hunter hadn't discovered him, but he also knew that that hunter might look up any second; and if he did that would be the end of him. That terrible gun would bang and he would shortly after lose his fur coat. He didn't want to lose that fur coat. You see, if he lost that he would lose his life with it. What to do?

Buster did some fast thinking. He thought a lot all in a minute. "If I start to scramble down that hunter will hear me and I won't have even a little chance," thought Buster. "If I could get down there without that hunter knowing it I might have some chance to run away. I know what I'll do; I'll just drop. I won't stop to climb down; I'll drop. It is a long way down, but I guess I can stand it. He won't have time to do anything with that terrible gun while I am getting down."

Just a minute later as that hunter was saying to himself, "It is queer, but I have a feeling that there is a Bear right near me," a great black mass landed with a thud right beside him and frightened him half out of his wits. Then that great black mass scrambled to four feet and away it went down hill at a rate that no one would believe who hasn't seen a frightened Bear run. By the time that badly scared hunter realized what it was, and remembered that he had a terrible gun, Buster Bear had disappeared and that hunter knew that there wasn't a chance in the world that he would see so much as a hair of Buster again that day.

Such a foolish look as there was on the face of that hunter. He kept looking up in that tree as if he half expected another Bear to drop our of it, or else as if he couldn't believe that a Bear really had dropped out of it.

"To think he was right here and I didn't know it!" he kept saying over and over. "Why, if I had known he was up in that tree I could have shot him with no trouble at all, and I would have had that coat of his for a rug. The old rascal never made a sound until he hit the ground. He must have just let go up there and dropped. It is a lucky thing for me that he scared me so that I forgot I had a gun in my hands until he was out of sight. I'm glad no one saw that performance."

Of course, he meant no other man or boy. But other eyes did see it all, the bright eyes of Sammy Jay. And to this day Sammy chuckles whenever he thinks of it. Sammy has seen funny things, but nothing funnier than the look of that hunter when Buster Bear landed beside him. As to Buster, Sammy's respect for him was increased greatly. Sammy had seen at once the dreadful situation in which Buster was caught and he had been sure that he was about to see the end of Buster. The instant Buster dropped Sammy saw that he had done the only thing there was to do, and his respect for Buster and his quick wit doubled.

The Tiny Atom

The actual smallness of the atom is almost impossible to realize. There are two hydrogen atoms to one oxygen atom in one molecule of water, and there are so many atoms of hydrogen in one small drop that if the atom were as big as a drop they could cover the whole world with a foot of water; or if they fell as in the heaviest rainfall it would rain all over the United States for nearly two weeks.

Vigor Producing Elixir Brings Glorious Health and Radiant Vitality to Weak, Exhausted People

Men and Women, Weak and Nervous, Need the Help of This Great Restorative That Lee & Osgood Co. Is Glad to Offer on Money Back Plan.

Here is a medicine that is taking the country by storm—thousands of bottles are sold daily.

Thousands of once worn out, run-down human machines now know the happiness that buoyant, exhilarating health brings.

Dare's Mentha Pepsin is first of all a powerful digestive. It starts at the root of most human misery—the stomach.

It builds up and makes strong the digestive organs so that every particle of food you eat is properly and thoroughly digested and assimilated into the blood stream, furnishing nourishment that produces vigorous health.

Without proper digestion good health is impossible. Foul gases accumulate and toxins poison the blood.

Always remember that nine times in ten the ailments that continually [illegible] you feel depressed and unfit are caused by the stomach not functioning properly.

So now all men and women who are weakened by disease or overwork, who are nervous and irritable, can put their faith in this tonic medicine that is pleasant to take and agreeable to the stomach.

People who have sallow skin, are mentally depressed and can't get restful sleep at night are advised to try this sterling upbuilding elixir.

Bear in mind that you can prove the goodness of Dare's Mentha Pepsin by trying just one bottle and if it doesn't help you more than any medicine you have ever tried, Lee & Osgood Co. or any druggist will gladly return your money without quibbling.

So why not, for your health's sake, get a bottle today? It is probably just what you need to help you get well and strong again.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

OBITUARY

Mrs. Fred A. Byrnes

After a lingering illness Annie Harwood, widow of Fred A. Byrnes, of No. 73 Warren street, this city, died Tuesday at the Lawrence Memorial hospital, New London. Mrs. Byrnes was well known in Norwich for her philanthropic spirit. She took a very active part in the tuberculosis sanitorium holiday fund, which with Miss Mary Richards she instituted in Norwich. She also took an active part in Red Cross work in this vicinity during the war days.

Mrs. Byrnes was a native of New York where she was born January 20 1863, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Harwood. In 1884 at Marmoheneck, N. Y., she was united in marriage with Fred A. Byrnes, who for many years was purser of the Norwich, New London and New York steamship line Mrs. Byrnes was a prominent member of Christ Episcopal church. For many months she had suffered with illness but in spite of this she kept in close touch with matters pertaining to Norwich and with her friends.

Mrs. Byrnes is survived by two sons, Harwood Byrnes of New York, and Ronald Muirhead Byrnes, also of New York.

Miss Susan A. Brand

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 18—Miss Susan A. Brand, 81, daughter of the late Christopher C. Brand of Norwich, died this evening at the home of her niece, Mrs. Howard R. Regal of 181 Park avenue, of pneumonia. She had been a resident of West Springfield for about 40 years, having come here from Norwich to make her home with her sister, the late Mrs. Henry Phelon. She was born at Gilgard Conn., in 1844, and spent her early life in Norwich. In Springfield, she leaves beside her niece, a nephew, John W. B. Brand, treasurer of the Springfield Institution for Savings, and in Norwich she leaves a brother Junius Brand, besides several nephews and nieces.

The funeral will be held in West Springfield with burial in Yantic cemetery at Norwich.

Mrs. Fred Wohlleben

The death of Katherine Leipold, beloved wife of Fred Wohlleben, of 15 South A street, Taftville, occurred on Wednesday afternoon about 5 o'clock in this city. Mrs. Wohlleben had been sick for some time and about three weeks ago she had an operation from which she had apparently rallied, but her death occurred suddenly from an embolus.

Mrs. Wohlleben was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Leipold and was born in Germany, Dec. 9, 1874, coming to this country with her parents in her youth. She was a resident of Taftville for a number of years, where on Sept. 7, 1900 she was united in marriage with Fred Wohlleben.

Besides her husband she is survived by two sons, John and Louis Wohlleben and three brothers, Michael Leipold of Baltic, Adam Leipold of Taftville and Nicholas Leipold of New Bedford.

Walter G. Burdick

Walter G. Burdick, 55, died Wednesday morning at his home in Glasgo. He was born in Griswold, March 3 1870, and was the son of Orrin F. and Mary J. Eccleston. He was a farmer by occupation and for a number of years made his home in that vicinity, gaining a wide circle of friends who will learn of his death with sorrow. He is survived by two brothers in Glasgo and also leaves other relatives.

JERSEY CATTLE OWNERS OF COUNTY ORGANIZE

Jersey cattle breeders of New London county organized Tuesday, at a meeting held at the home of Mr. L. S. Robertson of Quaker Hill. There were eight present, but the aim of the club is a membership of 50.

The association organized, with C. E. Kirschoff, president, C. S. Briggs of Lebanon, vice president, Austin D. Lathrop of Norwich Town secretary and treasurer. This is the first unit of the Jersey Club to be organized in this county.

The meeting was addressed by W. C. Randolph, field man for the American Jersey Cattle club, from New York. The purpose of the organization is to promote the Jersey breed and its products. The members met with Mrs. L. S. Robertson, who is delexate-at-large of the state club elected at a recent state meeting at South Coventry. Mrs. Robertson owns 13 head of Jersey cattle, all bred up from two cows. The meeting lasted from 10.30 a. m. until 4.30 p. m. Mrs. Robertson served lunch and during the afternoon the visitors inspected her fine herd.

It was voted to send a copy of the constitution and a questionnaire to every owner of Jersey cattle in New London county.

W. C. Randolph, the New York speaker at the meeting, left later for Hartford, where he addressed a meeting at the Ellsworth farm Wednesday.

GEORGE TRACY IN BOSTON HOLDUP TRIO UNDER ELEVEN CHARGES

Under bonds of $37,000, George Tracy of this city, is one of a trio of men facing indictments based on eleven holdups they are alleged to have committed in the Brighton district of Boston. Tracy, with James J. Keating and Carl Ghella, was arrested Sunday night following a hold up and shooting affray at a Brighton avenue druggists. Ghella was shot in a pistol duel by Motorcycle Officer Edward L. Daly and is in a serious condition at the St. Elizabeth hospital, Boston.

The eleven indictments were returned Wednesday by the Suffolk county grand jury and when Tracy and Keating were arraigned they were held in bail aggregating $37,000 each.

Tracy, up till about two years ago, made his home in this city, where he has relatives living and for some time was employed by a local electrical supply company. Since leaving Norwich it is understood that he has been as far west as Illinois. It is said that he was in Norwich about two months ago, where he boasted of being in the bootlegging business.

Following is a Boston version of the holdups and shooting affray; where Tracy is under arrest under the name of Murphy:

Through identifications made by victims of recent holdups in Boston and surrounding communities, Brighton police and officers of other police departments are prepared to connect the three alleged bandits captured by officers of the Brighton station Sunday night with at least seven holdups in addition to that in the drugstore of Harry S. Cummings, 284 Brighton avenue, Allston.

Time after time two of the captured men, Keating and Murphy, alias Callahan, alias Tracy, were brought from their cells to stand in line with officers in plain clothes, while a victim of a recent holdup tried to pick out the man or men responsible.

By far the most significant phase of the identifications made developed when Albert E. Ellsworth of 9 Kenwood terrace, Lynn, went to St. Elizabeth hospital in company with Lynn officers and positively identified Ghella as the man who boarded a street car in Lynn at 12:30 last Friday morning, shot Warren Beverly Stiles, manager of Hunt's Lunch, Inc., and robbed him of $258.

Ellsworth was a passenger on the car and witnessed the shooting of Stiles. Stiles is still in a critical condition. One of the Lynn officers noted a resemblance in Keating to the man who operated the automobile in which the bandit who shot Stiles later made his getaway, but the identification of Keating was by no means positive.

John O'Hara, in charge of Tar's drug store at 55 Dudley street, Roxbury, who was held and robbed in the store about an hour previous to the Allston holdup Sunday night, positively identified Keating as the man who forced him into the back room. The identification of Keating by O'Hara was substantiated by a young man who happened to walk into the drug store while the holdup was being staged and who also was a victim, being forced into a back room with O'Hara. This young man picked out Keating.

O'Hara was not so positive about Murphy, alias Tracey although he thought he resembled one of the other two men who entered the store. He said it was useless for him to go to the hospital to look at Ghella, as he felt certain he could not pick out the third man, who was more or less in the background.

Tracey is Identified

Keating appeared to be the man that none of the victims had difficulty in identifying. The various victims agreed that it was Keating who proceeded the other men into the stores and it was Keating, they said, who displayed the pistol.

O'Hara not only identified Keating, but he was able to give a description of the money he lost in the holdup. This description tallied in almost every detail with the money taken from the holdup men.

Arnold H. Epstein, who was held up in his drugstore at 419 Harvard street, Brookline, at 11.20 p. m. Wednesday and robbed of $100, identified Keating and Murphy, or Tracey as the men responsible for this job.

Edward A. Malone, a druggist at 1770 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, who was also held up and robbed at 10.30 p. m., Nov. 2, connected the two men at the Brighton station with that holdup.

George J. Lamb and Frank J. Cullen clerks in the Fenway Pharmacy, 304 Huntington avenue, Roxbury, identified Keating and Murphy as the men who held them up in the drugstore Wednesday and robbed the till of $105. Cullen and Lamb were both searched by the bandits when they were held up.

Keating and Murphy maintained a sullen demeanor when questioned by the police. They were taken to Boston police headquarters to be photographed and to have their finger prints taken.

Not once did either of the men have anything to say; that was when O'Hara, the Roxbury drug clerk, was at the desk describing the money that had been taken from him. Both denied the holdup, but were unable to give Capt. Anderson a clear explanation of how they came into possession of the money so accurately described.

Tracey Gives Other Names

Keating, who first gave the name of Kelly, was first identified by patrolman Finn of the Brighton station and again at police headquarters. The police say he has a record for breaking and entering and larceny from the person.

Murphy has given a variety of names to the police. When arrested he gave the name of John J. Callahan. He changed this to John J. Murphy, and later he declared his real name is George Tracy and that he gave the other names so that his relatives would not know of his present predicament.

Supt. of Police Michael J. Crowley and Capt. John M. Anderson of Station 14 highly complimented Motorcycle Officer Daly and Patrolman Orrin L. Taylor, the men who brought about the capture of the three.

Daly had a revolver duel with the three men in Cummings' drugstore Sunday night, during which Ghella was shot in the left breast and left arm.

Daly was shot at twice, one bullet grazing the shoulder of his uniform coat and the other entering the side of the coat and becoming imbedded in a packet of papers and a note book in the officer's inside pocket.

Daly did not discover the second bullet until he was getting on his uniform coat. He extracted a 38-calibre bullet from the papers.

Patrolman Taylor pursued the other two men in an automobile operated by Paul A. Strang of 48 North Beacon street, Brighton. When the machines reached Coolidge corner, Brookline, Taylor made a flying leap from Strang's car to the running board of the bandit car and after a struggle succeeded in stopping it.

Brighton citizens went out of their way to telephone or call upon Capt. Anderson to compliment the police on their fine capture. Capt. Anderson said the affair was the biggest of its kind that had come to his attention since he became a police officer.

The automobile used by the three men is a sedan. It had a dealer's number plates attached. There were several sets of plates bearing various registrations in the back of the car.

Patrolman Taylor recovered two pistols in the car after he stopped Keating and Murphy. Officer Daly took a third pistol from the hand of Ghella as he lay on the floor of drugstore.

TRYING AUTOMOBILE SUIT IN COMMON PLEAS

The $1,000 damage suit of Joseph P. Patterson of Mystic against Morris Schwartz of Preston for damage to the plaintiff's automobile was partly tried in the common pleas court at New London Tuesday before Judge C. B. Waller and a jury. Attorney E. H. Hewitt, counsel for the defendant, contributed one unusual feature by polling the jury with a view to securing jurors who were not affected by race prejudice. Attorney Arthur T. Keefe appeared for the plaintiff.

Patterson sues Schwartz for damages to his automobile and to himself, alleged to have resulted from an automobile collision on the road leading from Mystic to Old Mystic. The plaintiff alleged that about 1 p. m. on Sept. 9, 1925 he was driving along the highway when the one ton Ford truck, owned and driven by the defendant came out of the private driveway on the Whipple farm, without sounding signal or giving any warning; that the driveway was on the right hand side of the road and that the defendant's car recklessly driven at a high rate of speed, crashed into the plaintiff's car, damaging it in excess of $250 and causing the plaintiff to sustain severe and painful injuries.

Attorney Hewitt then read to the jury the defense answer in which the defendant denied all of the allegations and then entered a counter claim, alleging that the Schwartz car was crashed into by the Patterson Ford coupe, which was being driven at an excessive rate of speed and which caused damage to the defendant's car. The defendant in the counter claim asked for $100 in it.

Attorney Hewitt asked to poll the jury and the jury and the jurymen were sent back to the jury room and brought out singly and questioned by the defense counsel. Several were excused and after many questions had been propounded one juryman was needed to fill the panel. Almarin F. Hale was summoned as a talesman and qualified as the needed juror.

Attorney Hewitt sought to ascertain if any of the jurymen held any prejudice against the Jewish race, of which the defendant was one. The defendant was a junk dealer by occupation and the defense attorney inquired also if any of the jurors bore any prejudices against that occupation or a man engaged.

The following jury were finally sworn in by Clerk Lewis Crandall: George T. Benham, Joseph A. Dalton, New London; William E. Bracewell, Groton; George I. Babcock, Pawcatuck; John S. Chappell, Montville; Frank Calvert, Uncasville; Joseph W. Smith, Montville; Fred H. Smith, East Lyme; Herman Smith, East Lyme; Claude de Wolf, Old Lyme; Robert R. Hurley, Niantic; T. Hale, of New London.

Patterson was first called to the stand by Attorney Keefe and he told in detail his version of the collision. Attorney Keefe then presented several photographs taken at the scene and the plaintiff pointed out the point significant in the case. He testified that he paid $136.75 for repairs to his machine, which was laid up several days and said that he was out of work for four days, which cost him $8 a day, his salary as a velvet weaver.

An automobile salesman testified as to his opinion of the value of the Ford coupe before and after the accident. He said that previous to the collision he estimated it at $300 and now believed it to be worth but $100.

State Policeman Joseph Bobnick was next called to the stand. After the officer had related his deductions made in an investigation, Attorney Hewitt began his cross-examination of the witness.

It was brought out that the defendant was arrested by State Policeman Bobnick and prosecuted in the town court of Stonington. The case, however, was nolled.

The attorney and the state police man had several hot exchanges in the course of the cross examination. The officer admitted that he told Schwartz that he would place an additional charge against him if he didn't plead guilty to the one on which he was summoned to the Stonington court. Bobnick denied that he told Schwartz he would place another charge against him if he hired an attorney at the time the case came up in the Stonington court.

INVITING PARENTS TO VISIT SCHOOLS FRIDAY

The Norwich public schools are to make Friday their special observance of Education Week by making it a day for the parents and others interested in the school work to visit the schools in order to become better acquainted with the work that is being done by the great public school system.

Parents and others are therefore invited to visit the schools.

To observe:

1. Physical conditions under which the work is being carried on.

2. The sanitary conditions in the school building.

3. The spirit and cultural atmosphere.

To visit the schools:

1. To talk with the teachers.

2. To learn whether or not the children are doing the prescribed work.

3. To learn whether or not the children are spending their time profitably.

4. To establish a close cooperation between teacher and parent, home and school.

Circulars are being sent from the school to the homes of the pupils, explaining some of the things that are being done for the pupils of the school. The following is a typical example:

1. A healthy body is essential to moral education and civic success.

2. Our pupils are given the physical examination and defects are followed up by the health department. The dental hygienist examines the teeth and recommends needed attention.

3. Each class is inspected daily by the home room teacher and health habits are taught.

4. Setting up exercises are conducted with each class.

5. A special teacher of art helps them to make beautiful things.

6. A special teacher of music teaches them to sing and appreciate beautiful music.

7. A special teacher of physical training gives them exercises to make them strong and healthy.

8. The pupils are given instruction in safety first lessons.

Each school is sending out the invitations to the parents of the pupils, setting the time for the visiting hours on Friday.

LATE W. C. WILSON'S COINS WERE SOLD IN NEW YORK

The late W. C. Wilson, of Montreal who married Miss Millie Marx, of Norwich, had a very rare and valuable collection of coins which had been on sale in New York for three days, ending Wednesday.

A New York paper said regarding the collection:

The second session of the three-day sale of the numismatic collection of the late W. C. Wilson, of Montreal, Canada, Tuesday at the Anderson galleries, brought $1,502.25. The sales to date amount to $14,926.25, with the third and final sale this (Wednesday) afternoon.

L. A. Renaud acquired a 1870 French regime, fifteen sols piece, for $550, the day's highest price. A piece so rare Crosby could not find one to illustrate there probably being not more than six known. He also paid $125 for a rare "bent leaf" sou of the Bourbonois. For two 1823 "British Colonies-in-general coins" he paid $100, and for a set of twelve Repentigny tokens struck in silver, very rare, Mr. Renaud paid $107.50.

Dr. L. A. Langstroth paid from $105 to $225 each for seven items. For a bouquet sou one-half penny, in wreath he paid $225. For a Repentigny token B. W. Owen Montreal ropery, within a wreath of rope, he paid $165; for a Bout de l'Isle token, set of four, with De Montreal and Repentigny in the centre, with Richelieu on the back, Caleche, Cherreier, Cheval and Personne, respectively, he paid $145, and for a nearly similar set he paid $125. He also paid $100 for a bouquet sou, Corteau 52. For a Newfoundland, Peter M'Augland, St. Johns, he paid $135, and for a miscellaneous token, a large ship, he paid $110. Another of the Bout de l'Isle tokens went on "order" for $105.

CONNECTICUT TRUST CO'S REPORT LARGE INCREASES

Connecticut as usual reported a large yearly increase in trust company resources on June 30, 1925, according to "Trust Companies of the United States," just issued by the United States Mortgage and Trust Company of New York.

Connecticut reported [illegible] of $24,134,860 over the previous year. The 2701 [illegible] companies in the United States had total assets of $45,413,477,[illegible] an increase of $3,300,000,000 over [illegible] an increase of $4,000,000,000.

President John [illegible] United States Mortgage and Trust Company, in his annual report for 1925, says:

"The position of the trust companies, measured in terms of resources and prosperity, is apparently the envy of the leading world powers. Through [illegible] efficiency, specialized service to their home [illegible]

UNION MEMBERSHIP MEETING FOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Notices have been mailed to the members of the Chamber of Commerce for the special Thanksgiving membership meeting which will be held in the Wauregan hotel next Monday at 6.15 p. m. Reservations are already being made at the Chamber of Commerce office for the meeting, and it is expected that a large number of ladies will be present as on former occasions. The meetings of the Chamber are open to the public and one desirous of attending the meeting may do so by making reservation at the Chamber of Commerce office some Saturday of this week. This month's meeting will be a Thanksgiving meeting and the program is in that line with Rev. Charles H. Hickox, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church will speak on the subject of what we should be thankful for, the Religious Viewpoint; Walter F. Lester, chairman of the town school committee, from the Educational Viewpoint; Hon. Arthur W. Brown, state attorney, from the Business Viewpoint and Prof. Roy M. Tirrell, principal of the Norwich Free Academy, from the Historical Viewpoint. Each speaker will address the meeting for fifteen minutes.

In announcing the membership meeting the officers of the Chamber of Commerce say: Such a meeting cannot but arouse feelings of a greater community spirit for Norwich. The undercurrent of this community has manifested itself in many ways, while it is true that Norwich has felt the business depression to the extent that other communities have experienced, this seems to be the result of the splendid diversity of our industries and to the fact that more business is done in Norwich than in any community east of the Connecticut river in Connecticut. The chamber feels that the spirit of our community should be one of the most loyal and optimistic and that we should continue to grow in prosperity. It is apparent that a large number of our citizens are interested in the welfare of the city and their friends, both ladies and gentlemen, will be present at the meeting next Monday night. It is through such community gatherings as are held under the auspices of the chamber that a genuine community spirit can be maintained and developed. There have been a number of topics suggested to the chamber for discussion at which this is one of the most important. The selection should be left, however, to create some prominent interest in our community including the coming sales policy for Norwich. The interest in the slogan contest is quickening. The contest closes next Saturday and a prize of $10 will be awarded to the author of the contest.

There is also being considered the advisability of the chamber taking up the subject of Norwich as an attractive city in which to live. Prizes will be awarded to the winners of the essays written in the grammar schools and the Norwich Free Academy. Silver cups will be awarded to the winners and also to the pupils who have been the most improved in the essays written in the respective grades of the city. The eighth grades of every school in the school district will go to Bozrah, Maine, Lebanon and Norwich to see why Norwich is an attractive city in which to live and the chamber will encourage all those residents for room-mates to become members of the chamber. It is the purpose of the chamber to have the residents of Norwich to know that the new railroad tunnel built in the United States is the one constructed near the Taftville plant of the North Connecticut Power Company's property adjacent to Taftville. The turnpike between Norwich and New London built in 1800, was the first turnpike built in the United States. The Adams Express company was chartered as an enterprise in which and New London. Regular steamship connections with New York was started in 1818. The father of Oliver Perry of Lake Erie fame and of Matthew Perry who opened the Japanese ports to western civilization, kept a store in Norwich Town. Many of the old residents of Norwich took a keen interest in establishing platforms in which by the year 1841 Daniel Coit Gilman, the first president of John Hopkins university was born in Norwich. Dr. Timothy Dwight, twelfth president of Yale college was a native of Norwich. Also that Major James Fitch, Dr. Daniel Lathrop and Dr. Alfred E. Perkins, three citizens of Norwich have to their credit the largest donations which individuals each successive time up to $50 an application was made to the Norwich Free Academy, the alma of the founders were first to excite in the minds of parents, guardians and children a deeper interest in education. Second, to stimulate scholarship in primary, intermediate and grammar schools to higher attainments in the elementary branches. Third, to elevate the standard of education in the town and university. Fourth, to furnish the facilities for higher education for sons and daughters so cheaply that the poorest can enjoy them, and so amply that the richest shall be grateful for the privilege of receiving their benefits. It is due to the foresight and benevolence of the early founders of the Norwich Free Academy that Norwich enjoy the distinction today of furnishing high school education at a per capita cost that is far below the average American city. There is no reason therefore why the community spirit of Norwich should not be most enthusiastically maintained.

PROMOTERS SAY WAR ON HIGH PRICED BOXERS HAS ACCOMPLISHED NOTHING

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—Promoters of the Christmas fund boxing show in Madison Square Garden on Dec. 23, announced today that they were prepared to go before the New York state athletic commission on Friday and report that the board's threat of war on high priced boxers has not thus far brought championship talent and charity any closer together.

Although matchmakers have been negotiating for more than a week on two championship fights, Garden officials admitted this afternoon that they have been unable to sign the champion in either bout because the terms of both are too high. The matches under consideration would call upon Mickey Walker of Elizabeth, N. J., to defend his welterweight title against Tommy Milligan of England, and Jimmy Goodrich of Buffalo, N. Y., the lightweight champion, to fight Jack Vincentini of Chile.

Tex Rickard accordingly proposes to make a second effort to have the commission withdraw its stipulation that 50 per cent of the gross proceeds of the show must go to the charity for which it is arranged. Rickard is prepared to show that no outstanding title fight can be signed under the present conditions. He will ask the board to permit him to make a special arrangement with the Christmas fund sponsors, to which the latter have already agreed.

Garden officials said that, regardless of the commission's efforts, they have been forced to abandon their plans to stage two championship fights because Walker's terms for Milligan are too high to permit the promoters also to meet Goodrich's terms. This means, Rickard indicated, that the Goodrich-Vincentini bout, which was tentatively slated as a semi-final, will likely be dropped.

Walker and Milligan have both agreed to terms, the matchmaker said and the only obstacle now confronting the promoters is to iron out the financial problem resulting jointly from the high prices asked by the boxers and the commission's charity requirements.

BULKELEY WORKING HARD FOR FORDHAM GAME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 18—Hard scrimmage was the feature of the Bulkeley workout today in preparation for the Fordham freshman game here next Saturday.

The Fordham game will mark the termination of the official schedule of the local high school and it is expected there will be a large turnout to give the new Bulkeley team a hand.

All afternoon Coach Canty sent his boys through their formation and signals and straight football. The two sections of the Bulkeley team played hard and fought for their scores and each one treating the other with the celebrated forward pass.

It is expected that in addition to the forward pass the Bulkeley line will do much of the work in the game Saturday although all departments of the team are being well groomed for the contest.

The backfield of the local team is getting along very well under their new direction and there is every indication that there will be an improvement "de luxe" in this department.

Fordham it is reported is going through the customary practice this week and is anticipating a hard clash with the local eleven.

The Fordham boys are the aggregates of a fast eleven capable of administering severe trouncings to the team that is unlucky to suffer the loss of the lead.

The management reports an exceptionally fine sale of tickets and there will in all probability be another group of tickets printed for the city fans who are planning to take in the game.

The features that the management has under way for the collegiate part of the game have not as yet materialized and there is much speculation. The definite announcement is withheld until the final plans are completed.

Manager Schinman is in charge of the advertising part of the game while Manager Dreyfus is taking care of the financial part of the affair.

ACADEMY HAS LONG SCRIMMAGE AGAINST SCRUBS

Wednesday afternoon Coach Whitney put his charges through a long scrimmage. The varsity spent the whole afternoon battling the scrubs and showed up fine. The first string players ripped big holes through the scrubs that the backs went through for long gains.

The entire team is working hard in preparation for Saturday's game against Stonington High school and hopes are running high for a decided N. F. A. victory, in their last game the Academy and Stonington battled furiously only to have the game end a scoreless tie. Since then however the local boys have improved a hundred per cent and should have little trouble with their opponents in this week's contest.

Saturday's game will be important, for if the local school beats Stonington and both Stonington and Chapman Tech defeat Westerly High the Academy will be the champions of the Eastern Connecticut league. This sounds complicated but Stonington has already defeated Westerly once and Westerly just barely nosed out Chapman Tech at New London a few weeks ago so that the N. F. A. chances of winning the football championship are far from hopeless.

PAL REED AND STONE FIGHT TO A DRAW

NEW LONDON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Pal Reed, of Framingham, Mass., and Jack Stone, boxed twelve rounds to a draw in the main bout at the Lyceum theatre here tonight. The decision was not popular, a newspaper decision being given to Reed.

Phil Jackson, of Bridgeport, was awarded the decision over McGollar of Newark, N. J., in an eight round bout.

Walter Cross, of the coast guard was given a decision over Young Rossi of Westerly, R. I., who was unable to continue after the sixth round.

Young Cross, of the coast guard was given the decision on a foul from Henry De Julio, of Bridgeport.

HOLY CROSS WILL NOT ATTEMPT 40-PLAY SYSTEM

BOSTON, Nov. 18—(A. P.)—Holy Cross will not experiment with the 40-play system of measuring football candy at this late stage of the season, Coach Cleo O'Donnell of the Purple team notified Boston University athletic officials today in response to a request that the plan be tried in the Boston University-Holy Cross game Saturday.

The 40-play system was tried in the Brown-Boston university game at Providence, recently to the expressed satisfaction of coaches and officials interested. Coach O'Donnell, while declining to experiment with the novelty in a late season game, said he would like to try it out during the early part of the Holy Cross schedule next season.

HARVARD VARSITY PLAYERS EJECTED FROM THEATRE

BOSTON, Nov. 18—(A. P.)—Thirty members of the Harvard varsity football squad were ejected from the lobby of the Tremont theatre tonight after an argument with the manager. A policeman on duty told them they were "half drunk," and several of the men repaired to a police station to demonstrate their sobriety and lodge complaints against the policeman.

The trouble started when Joe Crosby, a regular half back on the team, slipped on the tiled floor and fell full length. The men, fresh from a pre-Yale game rally at the Harvard Union in Cambridge had been shouting and "carrying on," and after Crosby's tumble the manager interfered. He ordered the policeman detailed to the lobby to eject the visitors, and after a taste of gridiron brawn and muscle the officer succeeded.

The second act of the drama was played at the police station, with Captain Cheek and Manager Osborn the protagonists. They stepped up to the big desk and invited Lieutenant Dobbins to "come out and look us over." Lieutenant Dobbins did, and found the whole squad, minus two, lined up on La Grange street.

"They are sober, all right," he said, "but I can't do anything about it."

The gridiron men were indignant at the term "half-fried," which they said the lobby policeman had hurled at them, but they said the theatre manager, Albert M. Sheehan, and not the officer, was responsible for their ejection. The off-gridiron game with the law ended with the score nothing to nothing.

AMATEUR BOUTS AT DANIELSON NEXT TUESDAY

DANIELSON, Nov. 18.—Boxing fans are in for a real treat here next Tuesday evening. As nifty a card of amateur bouts as has been prepared for eastern Connecticut for years is Promoter Frank Barber's offering to the fans. Boys like Johnny Mack, state champion in the 128 pound class, and Lew Adams of Worcester, a 165-pounder are on the bill. And they are matched with boys that will make them go.

As the card lines up, it looks like Connecticut against Worcester county. Young Chappedy, Worcester county champion, is to meet Johnny Mack, whirlwind performer and nifty as the sniftiest. Adams will go against Sunny Maya, the Danielson Bear Cat. Victor Zona of Worcester will meet Ray Strong of Hartford and Young Mulvaney of Worcester will be up against Danny Doran of Hartford. Young Major of Danielson will have it out in a return match with Johnny Angelo of Hartford, who won a decision over him here last month.

All the Worcester boys are the class. Each of them was returned a winner in his class in recent bouts held at the Elks' club in Boston.

NUTMEGS-TIGERS GAME LIKELY TO FALL THROUGH

This Thursday evening at 7:30 p. m., weather permitting, the Nutmegs will hold their final practice of the week. All members are requested to report promptly at the above hour.

The Nutmegs would like to hear either from the Aces or Athletes of New London for a game this coming Sunday, Nov. 22, at Sachem Field, Falls. The game scheduled with the Greeneville Tigers seems to have fallen through and it begins to look like these two bitter rivals will not meet this season as the Nutmeg schedule is filled up to December 13, with some fast teams booked to play in this city before the 1926 gridiron curtain rings down. There is still a possibility of a Nutmeg-Tiger game Sunday but it is not a probability.

The New London teams or any other fast team wishing to play at Sachem Field Sunday please call either 427 between 6 and 6:30 or 35-3 between 9 and 10 or answer through this paper.

AGGIES TO LOSE 14 PLAYERS BY GRADUATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., Nov. 18—With fourteen of a squad of twenty-four due to graduate next June, Coach Sumner A. Dole will have to face a difficult task in developing a football team at the Connecticut Agricultural college in 1926.

When the Aggies line up against Rensellaer at Troy, N. Y., next Saturday, eight of the eleven starting will be playing their last game for Connecticut. Moreover, six of the first string substitutes will be making their last appearance for the Aggies.

Both the line and backfield of this year's team will be hard hit. Captain Brink, end; Nanfeldt, tackle, and Bigood, guard, the entire left side of the line will be graduated. Johnson, right guard, and Fienneman, right end, will also get their sheepskins in June.

In the backfield, Dole loses regulars in Filmer and Moreland, halfbacks and Mackofski, fullback.

Among the first string substitutes who will graduate are Baker and Hohn, a capable pair of tackles; Longo and McAllister, two guards who have played a strong consistent game; Allard and Donovan, halfbacks, who have made rapid development and have been among the most dependable of Dole's backfield reserves.

BIG MASS MEETING OF HARVARD STUDENTS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 18—(A. P.)—A pre-Yale game mass meeting said by students to be the largest ever held here was attended by more than 2,000 undergraduates at the Harvard union tonight. A "snake dance" to the various dormitories served to call out the throngs, who trooped to the rally cheering and singing. At the meeting Head Coach Bob Fisher declared from the platform that the material in the varsity squad was "as good if not better than any since the war." William Blake, who was scouted at Yale games for Harvard this year, and Captain "Dolph" Cheek were the other speakers.

At practice this afternoon Joe McGlone, quarterback on team B., played at the position on the varsity, a precautionary measure should Stafford's injuries keep him from starting the Yale game in the pilot berth. Hooper and Kilgour worked alternately at right guard, Chauncy and Zarakov at right half and Miller and Howe at fullback.

Party Report for Hockey

PRINCETON, N. J. Nov. 18—(A. P.)—Recent promotion of hockey at Princeton university to even terms with football, baseball, crew and track, the major sports, brought out more than forty candidates for the team at the opening meeting of the season tonight. Coach Ramsey announced that practice would consist in outdoor work, for conditioning mainly touch football, until Baker rink is ready on December 1.

GRANGE WILL PROBABLY PLAY PRO FOOTBALL

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—(AP)—It appeared certain tonight that Harold "Red" Grange will toss aside his amateur status to become a professional football player and also end his college career, leaving the University of Illinois, after the Ohio State-Illinois game at Columbus Saturday.

Reports persisted that in a conference with his father at Wheaton, Ills., today, Grange who at the age of 22 years has a prospect of a fortune being dumped into his lap, reached a decision, with his father's consent, to play professional football and to leave the university.

Grange's father, Lyle Grange, a deputy sheriff, said tonight that Harold had returned to the university this afternoon, but that he could not say, at least he did not want to say, the result of his heart-to-heart talk with his son.

INDOOR LEAGUE MEETING TO BE HELD TONIGHT

The meeting for the purpose of forming an Indoor Baseball League will be held at the Armory this Thursday evening at 8 p. m. sharp. As much business of importance is to be transacted it is urgent that captain and manager of the four teams be on hand at the above hour. The four teams to enter are Tigers, Faber's All Stars, Nutmegs and Battery B.

The roster of these four teams contains the names of some of the best in this vicinity and many fast games will be in order this winter at the Armory when the Indoor Baseball League gets going.

Tunney Gets Decision

CLEVELAND, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Gene Tunney, New York, was given the decision over John Risko, Cleveland heavyweight, in a 12-round bout here tonight.

Tunney weighed 188 and Risko 192 pounds.

YALE-HARVARD GAME TO BE FEATURE OF ANCIENT FOOTBALL CLASSICS

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—(A. P.)—Two of the oldest classics of the gridiron, one of them between traditional foes that have met in a record total of 58 conflicts, will call four elevens to the center of the football stage Saturday for their final appearances of the 1925 season.

Although the Lafayette-Lehigh series does not date back as far as the Yale-Harvard struggle on the same day, teams from the Pennsylvania colleges played two games each season from 1884 to 1901, to run up a total of conflicts exceeding that of the "Big Three" classic.

The Yale-Princeton series which had its 1935 renewal last week, ranks second, the Bulldog having battled the Tiger forty-nine times, while the Crimson has tussled with the Elis on 43 occasions, one more than the total of Amherst-Williams grapples, another ancient feud.

Lafayette and Yale are the favored teams on the basis of their early season records. The former's outstanding achievement was an unexpected triumph over Pittsburgh, but the Easton eleven also was held to a tie by Colgate 6-6, before losing by a single point to W. and J. For the first time since the Colgate game, Oct. 17, Captain Gebhard, Lafayette fullback, again expects to fill his old position.

Lehigh's outlook and enthusiasm dimmed in no small degree a few weeks ago by the death of the team's clever quarterback, Charlie Prior, whose spine was fractured in a game against West Virginia Wesleyan.

Lafayette holds the edge in the competition, with 23 victories, ten more than Lehigh. Only two games ended in ties.

Yale has a big margin over Harvard since New Haven and Cambridge elevens met for the first time in 1883. Of the forty-three games they have played, the Blue has captured twenty-three against fifteen for the Crimson. Five of their games resulted in tie scores.

Harvard's chances have taken on a brighter hue as a result of last Saturday's developments. The Crimson's defeats at the hands of Holy Cross Dartmouth and Princeton were partially offset in the come-back of Captain Cheek's team with a 3-0 victory over Brown while the Yale cohorts were being toppled unexpectedly by a raging Princeton Tiger.

A third classic provides interest this week as a test for the unbeaten and untied Fordham eleven against Georgetown at the Polo Grounds. As football series go, this is comparatively new, the teams having come together for the first time in 1907. Of the twelve games they have played each team has won six. Fordham was victorious a year ago, 9 to 6, and probably will start a favorite this week.

Army, Brown, Columbia and Syracuse on Saturday will prepare for keener tests during the following week. The Cadets will take on Ursinus at West Point, in preparation for their game with the Navy one week later, while Brown looks upon its game with New Hampshire as a warm-up for the Colgate battle Thanksgiving Day.

Columbia, hooking up this week with Alfred, and Syracuse, opposing Niagara, will tune up for their annual tussle at the Polo Grounds on Thanksgiving Day.

Cornell and Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Washington and Jefferson and Pittsburgh and Penn State, meeting in other traditional battles on Thanksgiving Day, also will be this week.

YALE SWIMMING TEAM WILL HAVE 17 MEETS

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 18—(A. P.)—At the opening meeting of the Yale swimming season tonight a tentative schedule including 17 meets was announced. The season will open Monday when training tables for the team will be started. The tentative schedule follows:

December 12, Alumni meet; January 15, College of the City of New York at New York; 22, Brown; February 5, Dartmouth, at Hanover; 11, College of the City of New York; 13, Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia; 16, Wesleyan, at Middletown; 17, Syracuse; 20, Columbia, at New York; 22, Boys clubs; 27, Princeton; March 5, Columbia; 6, Pennsylvania; 12, M. I. T.; 18, Princeton, at Princeton; 20, Navy; 27, Intercollegiates, at New York.

"WE WERE ROTTEN," SAYS JOES TO STUDENT BODY

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 18—(A. P.)—Fifteen hundred Yale undergraduates cheering for their varsity football team, staged one of the largest football rallies of the season at Woolsey hall tonight. The students gathered on the campus and paraded behind the Yale band to the hall. The rally was addressed by Capt. Johnny Joes and two former Yale captains, "Cupid" Black and Bill Mallory.

"We were rotten Saturday but we are going to go this time," said Captain Joes. Black, who captained the champion Yale team in 1916, cautioned Yale to forget its overconfidence and settle down to the job of beating Harvard. Turning to the team, he told the men they were "dust if they failed to beat Harvard."

YALE VARSITY HOLDS LAST SCRIMMAGE OF YEAR

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 18.—(AP)—In a spirited scrimmage today, the last the Yale football team will have this year the varsity scored three touchdowns against the strong scrub team. Kline, right halfback, plunged through the line for the first score. Fishwick, relief quarterback, raced around right end for the second, and Larry Noble, left halfback, broke through the line for the final tally.

In the signal drill which preceded the scrimmage, Coach Tad Jones had every regular except Dan Allen in the lineup. Jerry Wadsworth took the latter's place at fullback but Allen, it was said, will be able to start on Saturday.

COLGATE WILL NOT PLAY POST-SEASON GAME

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—(A. P.)—Chances of an outstanding eastern eleven competing in any post-season conflicts on the Pacific coast New Year's Day are dwindling rapidly.

In addition to Dartmouth and Pennsylvania, which already have announced they will not consider any post-season invitations, Colgate today was removed from the list of possibilities by Graduate Manager W. A. Reid, who informed the Associated Press the unbeaten upstate eleven "cannot accept an invitation to play a post-season game on the coast."

SAYS OVERCONFIDENCE CAUSE OF YALE DOWNFALL

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—Overconfidence, inspired by newspaper stories of Eli browsers, was partially responsible for the defeat of Yale by Princeton, in the opinion of Louis E. Stoddard, chairman of the Yale football committee and president of the United States Polo association.

In explanation of this, Mr. Stoddard said he was told before the game last Saturday by Tad Jones, Yale head coach, that the team was "going to lose" because it was "in the wrong mental state." He further quoted Jones as saying that the players "read in the papers every day that they are 3 to 1 favorites and they believe it."

Enlarging on his idea, Mr. Stoddard declared his belief that "the press stresses personalities at the expense of team play."

"It sickens me," he said, "to read the biographies of Red Grange printed in the newspapers. It doesn't matter that I am made sick, what does matter is the effect of this glorification of Red Grange."

WESLEYAN WINS SOCCER TITLE OF "LITTLE THREEE"

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Wesleyan won the New England "Little Three" soccer championship today when it defeated Amherst here by a score of 2 to 1 in a post season game. The teams had previously played a 1 to 1 tie game October 24 at Amherst. Williams the third team in the "Little Three" had been beaten by both Amherst and Wesleyan. Rupprecht scored both goals for Wesleyan, and Steele one for Amherst in today's game.

FOUR PIRATES ON ALL-STAR BASEBALL TEAM

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Four members of the Pirates were given places on an all-star team picked by the members of the Baseball Writers' association of America, through the Sporting News, a St. Louis weekly periodical and made public today. They were Cuyler, Carey, Wright and Traynor.

Westerly vs. Speedboys

The Jewett City Speedboys have succeeded in booking the fast Lorraine Club from Westerly for this Sunday's game at Ashinad Park, Jewett City. The Lorraine lineup will be the same as last Sunday when they defeated the strong Nutmegs of Norwich. The Speedboys not satisfied with their Sunday's showing have had a complete shake-up in the lineup and have signed two new men. Capt. Parkhurst will not choose his starting lineup until Friday. Smith, Provost and possibly Capt. Parkhurst will be out with injuries.

Jarvis Outpoints Woods

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Ernie Jarvis, English flyweight, easily outpointed Wee Willie Woods, of Scotland in a ten round contest here tonight. Jarvis weighed 113 1-2 and Woods 113 1-2.

Johnny Breslin, of New York, 114 3-4 gained a decision over Joey Ross, of New York, 113 3-4, in ten round and Willie Lamorte, Jersey City flyweight, conquered Jimmy Russo, of Grand Rapids, in ten rounds.

Landis Visits New York

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—(A. P.)—Apparently finding all peaceful around the baseball circuit, Baseball Commissioner Landis was in New York today for a brief visit which he said had no particular significance.

"I just happened to have an idle week on my hands and am spending it traveling," said the commissioner, adding that he intended to leave tonight for Washington.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

Six members of Dartmouth's great football team have played their last college contest. They are Swede Oberlander, Heinie Sare, Mike Tully, Jack Straight, Captain Nate Parker and Dutch Diehl.

A $5,000 professional golf tournament is announced for St. Augustine, Fla., March 18, 19 and 20. The winner will receive more than $1,000 and the runner-up about $650.

Tex Rickard who barred the radio from Madison Square Garden last winter, is reported to have been converted. Station WSMG is expected to send forth the sound of rattling gloves from his new enterprise this season.

The army golf association organized at the direction of secretary of war for the encouragement and development of golf throughout the army, has applied for allied membership in the United States Golf association.

Gene Tunney and his manager, Billy Gibson, despairing of business in New York, have departed for Cleveland where Gene will battle Johnny Risko.

Jack Kearns has received a new offer from the Madison Square Garden management for the appearance of Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, against Tommy Milligan of Scotland in the Christmas fund bouts. Kearns is said to be on his way east to handle Walker in his coming battle with Sailor Friedman in Newark.

Graduation will take six players from the Princeton football team which last Saturday produced one of the season's greatest upsets by defeating Yale, 25 to 12. Olligan, Dignan and Caulkins will go from the backfield while Captain McMillan, Gates and Craig will leave the line.

Yale's hockey team will play McGill University, Dartmouth, Harvard, Princeton and Boston university, in the new Madison Square Garden rink in New York this winter.

Two gigantic bonfires blazing forth at Hanover, N. H., and Princeton, N. J., last night signalled the return of gridiron heroes from successful campaigns, but for Warriors several eastern teams there remains another week or two before any fires, except those of ambition, will be lighted.

"Hawley's Comet" that eleven pointed body that described a parabolic orbit over the 1925 gridiron leaving a trail of green from Hanover, N. H., to Chicago, has passed from view.

New York university and Columbia football teams, which fought each other to a tie this year, probably will not meet on the gridiron next season. N. Y. U. authorities explain the situation as one caused by difficulties in arranging schedules to avoid a succession of heavy games.

The four touchdowns Princeton rolled up against Yale at New Haven Saturday represent as much scoring by that method as the Tigers registered against their Bulldog rivals in the previous seven years. Only once before, in 1896, when Princeton scored five touchdowns and won, 34-6, has the Tiger gone on such a scoring spree against the Elis.

Prizes will be doubled for the annual championship of the Professional Golfers' Association which will be held next year during September at the Salisbury Country club, Garden City, N. Y.

Tulane university of New Orleans has been placed upon the New York university football schedule for next year. Tulane has won seven games this season and tied one, among its victims being Northwestern by 19 to 7. Northwestern later conquered Michigan, 6 to 0, in a field of mud.

Golf and football mix at times. George Lamprecht of Cleveland, national intercollegiate links champion, is fullback at Tulane, and Emerson Carey, well known wielder of niblicks, is a guard at Cornell and one of the best tackles in the east.

Jack Bentley and Heinie Groh of the New York Giants and Bob Shawkey, golfing pitcher of the Yankees, have departed for Florida to toss around real estate in preparation for the spring campaign.

Bill Wambsganss, one of the triple play heroes of the major leagues is expected to manage the Mobile club next year, having won his unconditional release from the Red Sox. Wamby staged his triple killing while playing for Cleveland against Brooklyn in the World's series of 1920.

Walter Spencer, Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. swimmer, bettered the world's record time held by himself and Bob Skelton of the Illinois A. C. when he covered 200 yards, breast stroke, in 2:33. The accepted mark is 2:35 2-5.

Bobby Walthour and Freddie Spencer, winners of the last six day bicycle race in Madison Square Garden and the recent one in Chicago, will be teamed again for the first event of its kind in the New Garden which starts November 26.

GOLDEN JUBILEE NEAR EAST RELIEF DINNER

WATERBURY, Nov. 18—(A. P.)—Dean Charles R. Brown, of Yale university and ex-Governor Marcus H. Holcomb, were the principal speakers at the golden rule Near East relief dinner held in Waterbury's new Y. M. C. A. gymnasium tonight at which 800 attended. The meal being similar to those received by the Near East refugees, was contributed and cooked by a group of Greek business men in this city, and consisted of meat stew, macaroni and cheese, bread, stewed apricots and coffee.

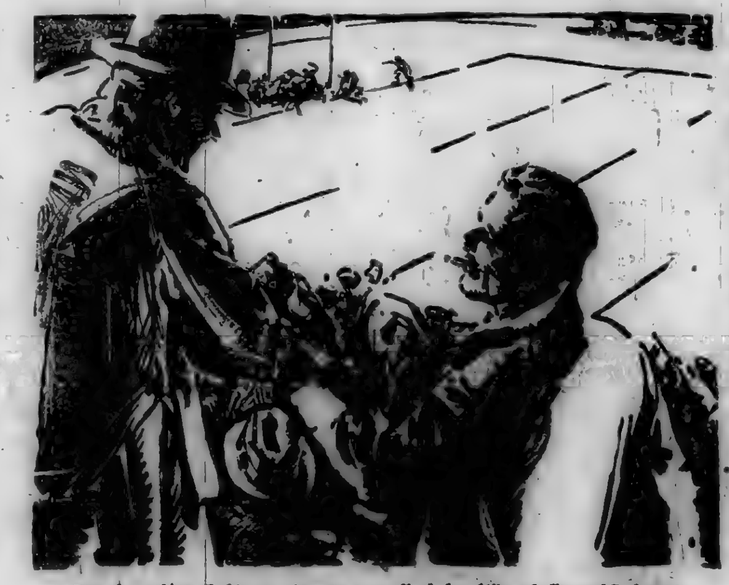
Rev. Dr. John N. Lewis, pastor of St. John's Episcopal church, presided. Following a reel of motion pictures showing conditions in the Near East, ex-Governor Holcomb, chairman of the Connecticut state committee, spoke of the work being done by the committee for the Near East refugees. Dean Brown, of Yale, next spoke of the "Good Samaritan" and said that it is up to this country to act in that capacity as regards the phrase "what's mine is yours."

PRIZE AWARDS BY SHEFF. SCIENTIFIC SCHOOL

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 18—(A. P.)—The Sheffield Scientific school interfraternity scholarship prize was awarded tonight to the St. Elmo club for high standing during 1924-1925. Colony was second and Vernon Hall third.

The scholarship prize was established seven years ago when each fraternity contributed to a general fund, the income from which would to the house having the highest scholarship record.

When it's Thanksgiving—and the teams are drawn up for battle on the gridiron—when the first touchdown goes over and the grandstands rock with frenzy—have a Camel!



WHEN the college bands are playing to make your blood tingle. And the cheers and answering songs sweep back and forth between the opposing thousands of rooters. When, following that tense hush, a swift player darts out from the flashing formations on the gridiron and races across the goal for the first touchdown—oh, man, or superman, when the taste of joy is too keen to endure—have a Camel!

For Camel is the boon companion of your joys. Roam as far as you will from the prosaic things of every day, Camel will be the truest smoke friend you ever had. Not a tired taste, not a cigaretty after-taste, not a regret in a million Camels! Just full and fragrant smoke contentment, just added zest in living.

So when your own college's team tears through for its first smashing goal this Thanksgiving Day—when life seems fullest of the frenzy of happiness—joyfully apply the fire and taste the smoke that's loved by millions.

Have a Camel!

Into the making of this one cigarette goes all of the ability of the world's largest organization of expert tobacco men. Nothing is too good for Camels. The choicest Turkish and domestic tobaccos. The most skilful blenders. The most scientific package. No other cigarette made is like Camels. No finer cigarette can be made. Camels are the overwhelming choice of experienced smokers.

Our highest wish, if you do not yet know Camel quality, is that you try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any cigarette made at any price.

WESTERLY

PETIT JURORS SUMMONED FOR WEDNESDAY'S CASES

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I. Nov. 18—Judge Antonio A. Capotosto opened court Wednesday morning at West Kingston, following the sessions there Monday and Tuesday.

Wednesday, the third day of the November session of superior court for Washington county, was the time set for the appearance of petit jurors who were under summons as follows:

South Kingstown—Arthur N. Peckham; farmer; Clifton P. Partelow, mason; William H. Leslie, carpenter; Frank L. Crandall, mill office manager; George J. Schaeffer, farmer; Francis J. Molloy, mill employee; Grafton I. Kenyon, merchant; Oliver W. Greene, road builder.

North Kingstown—James D. O'Hara, clerk; John E. Rose, ice dealer; William M. Tefft, mechanical engineer; Gideon C. Gardiner, garage; Nathaniel F. Tyler, mill operative; Michael Tully, painter; Oliver M. Stedman, barber.

Westerly—William R. Chapman, time keeper; Shelby C. Nicholds, agent; Paul W. Munsel, manager; Edwin A. Hall, painter; Ernest H. Saunders, superintendent; Cleveland H. Clarke, miller; William B. Dodge, clerk; Ernest A. Thorpe, carpenter; Dwight M. Cornell, card grinder.

Hopkinton—Wilfred E. Barber, painter; Nelson B. Brown, farmer; Frank E. Nichols, salesman; George E. Charaler, chauffeur.

Exeter—Thomas F. Tefft, Albert Andrews.

Charlestown—Elisha P. Crandall, farmer; Herbert A. Gates, carpenter.

Narragansett—Harry I. Whaley, chauffeur; Isaac A. Allen, contractor.

William M. Tefft of North Kingstown and Frank E. Nichols, of Hopkinton, were excused from service at this court session, the remainder being accepted.

On the indictment, the case of State, Fred T. Mitchell, sheriff, complainant vs. Charles Whitman, of Hopkinton, for the breaking and entering of Judge C. H. Williams' house at Woodville in the night time and larceny of goods valued at $75 was taken up.

Before the case went to trial the complaint with the consent of the defendant was amended to read: "breaking and entering in the daytime," instead of night time. Whitman entered a plea of nolo to this amended complaint.

Whitman also pleaded nolo to a complaint charging him with breaking and entering in the daytime the unoccupied dwelling of Georgia R. Wanderlung in the town of Hopkinton on Nov. 21, 1924, and the larceny of certain articles. Sentence in this instance was deferred and bail was fixed at $1,000.

Judge Capotosto warned Whitman that if he again comes before the court he will be given five years in jail.

Judge James O. Watts was counsel for the defendant, having been appointed to serve by Judge Capotosto Monday. He said that the defendant was not the hardened type of criminal and that he had surrendered all the articles he had stolen.

Assistant Attorney-General L. V. Jacquoney, before moving for sentence, said that Whitman had been of considerable assistance to the authorities in giving information about other breaks.

Imposing sentence, Judge Capotosto said that only for the recommendations made to court he would have given the defendant a sentence of three years.

Charles Golden of Providence, who was indicted by the grand jury on a complaint brought by William L. Kay, deputy chief of the police of Hopkinton, charging that on Sept. 22, 1925, he committed the larceny of 483 pullets to the value of $600 from Charles M. Hall at Hope Valley, entered a plea of not guilty. Bail was fixed at $1,000.

Golden also pleaded not guilty to a complaint charging conspiracy and bail in this instance was fixed at $2,500. The cases were set down for trial Nov. 30.

Harold Sunman, who has served a sentence of seven months on the charge of breaking and entering an unoccupied dwelling in the night time, had his sentence deferred on two other complaints on which he had been indicted.

The judge informed the defendant that these cases are now holding over him and warned him that if he again comes before the court he will be given a sentence of seven years. He advised him to go out into the world and be a man.

Attorney A. T. L. Ledwidge of Westerly was counsel for Sunman, having been appointed to act by Judge Capotosto.

Lawrence Main pleaded nolo to a charge of reckless driving and was given a deferred sentence.

The case of the State, Thomas E. Brown, vs. Antone Rindel, charged with operating an automobile while intoxicated, was continued to tomorrow morning for trial.

This afternoon, the case of the State, William L. Kay, deputy chief of police of Hopkinton, vs. N. Edward Burdick, was tried. Burdick is accused of making a violent assault on Roy Kenyon, Jr., at Rockville, Sept. 16. The evidence was first heard in the Third District court at Westerly and Judge Michael J. Turano sentenced the defendant to serve a year at the Providence county jail.

Burdick took an appeal and in superior court this morning entered a plea of not guilty.

The following jury was empaneled to hear the case:

Ernest H. Saunders of Westerly, foreman; Frank L. Crandall, George J. Schaeffer, Francis J. Molloy, South Kingstown; Nathaniel F. Tyler, Oliver H. Stedman, North Kingstown; Paul W. Munsell, Edwin A. Hall, Dwight M. Cornell, Westerly; George E. B. James, Thomas L. Carey, Richmond; Elisha P. Crandall, Charlestown.

After the jury had been out for two hours it returned with a verdict of not guilty for Burdick.

Westerly streets where excavation has been made for sewer main installation have presented obstacles to automobile traffic and on some of the streets, cars proceed at about half-speed to prevent accidents. Wednesday afternoon the big Pierce Arrow truck X8-102 of E. P. Windward of Providence, was proceeding along Railroad avenue toward the Westerly station of the New Haven road, loaded with a miscellaneous cargo of cloth, hardware, etc. When opposite the Quarino block, the forward end of the big truck suddenly without warning sunk into the loosely filled ditch up to the bottom of the hood, but did not capsize. In the endeavor to extricate itself the rear wheels ploughed in and the truck was buried to the axle in the highway.

Filed for record in the office of the Westerly town clerk are the following transfers: Nov. 17. W. Liance Cottrell et al to Church of the Immaculate Conception of Westerly, R. I., a certain lot of land with buildings and improvements on the east side of High street and west of land of the heirs of David F. Stillman.

Antonio M. Reale to James P. Reale a certain lot of land with buildings and improvements on the east side of the proposed extension of Summer street.

The Visiting Nurse association of Westerly, by Kathryn W. Utter, pres., from Louise C. Crandall under date of Nov. 17th lease of the lowest apartment of the premises at 112 High street, to the 1st of Dec. 1927.

Patrolman George L. Madison, returning to his duties Wednesday after two weeks' vacation, began a week's tour of day duty succeeding Officer George H. Champlin who returned to the night patrol, after a week of day duty. Patrolman Fred Ferraro was assigned to a beat in the Pierce street section, where Officer LeRoy Norman has been on duty.

George E. McKernan of West Hartford, and Joseph N. McKernan of Plainville, Conn., arrived in Westerly by automobile Wednesday morning, being called to Westerly, their former home, by the sudden death of their father, Edward McKernan who was struck by an automobile in front of the Westerly postoffice, Tuesday evening at 5:40 o'clock, his death occurring in the Westerly hospital, where he was taken a half hour later.

Adelia Maude Lanphear Burdick, 59, wife of William H. Burdick, died at about 6 o'clock Wednesday morning at her home in Avondale. She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clinton Lanphear, a sister, Mrs. Percy Clarke, and a brother, Fred Lanphear, all of this community.

H. F. NERONE, NO. STONINGTON CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 18—Henry F. Nerone, 22, a painter, residing at Wheeler's Crossing, North Stonington, was presented Wednesday evening in a special session of the Third District court before Acting Judge W. Walter Flynn, Jr., on a charge of manslaughter, Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, of Westerly, complainant. Town Solicitor John Ferguson, Jr., requested that Nerone, D. D., of Holyoke, Mass., governor. The complaint was the result of an automobile accident in Westerly, on Tuesday evening, at 5:40 o'clock, when defendant was operating his Buick touring car up High street, and struck Edward McKernan, 72, a paving cutter at Westerly, as he was crossing from the post office to the Stillman block. Being struck by the fender Mr. McKernan was carried a short distance on it before being thrown under the automobile so that both front wheels of the car passed over his body. The injured man was taken to the office of Dr. Michael H. Scanlon, by direction of Patrolman George H. Champlin, on duty in Dixon square at the time, who saw the wheels of the car pass over him.

Accompanied by Dr. Scanlon and Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, Mr. McKernan was taken to the Westerly hospital where he was given attention by Dr. Gordon Anderson of the hospital staff and Dr. Scanlon, but his death occurred there at 6:15 o'clock before leaving the operating room. Beside a broken neck he had cerebral injuries, also a bad cut near the left temple.

Nerone was placed under arrest on the charge of manslaughter Tuesday night by Chief Brown, following an investigation. Near the end of the present week an inquest will probably be held by Coroner Ferguson, who is also the Westerly town solicitor. After the investigation Tuesday night it was decided that an autopsy would not be necessary. A local undertaker took charge of the body.

Heads Survey To Evolve Traffic Solution

Former Governor James Hartness, of Vermont, President of the American Engineering Council which body is behind the plan to have, engineering and traffic solving societies throughout the United States submit their ideas for relief of the traffic problem, to a general committee in Washington that will act as a clearing house. Out of the mass of information, some good idea will be brought. The American Engineering Council has among its members some of the ablest engineers of the world, all vitally interested in what will be America's premier question in a short while.

TELLS HOW TO AVOID LAMENESS AFTER EXERCISE

Athlete advises a simple method of keeping muscles in trim

Men who put their muscles to the strain of hard exercise have learned a quick, sure way of taking out pain and stiffness.

"In my training work," writes a well-known athlete, "I have used Sloan's Liniment for the past five years and found it most effective for soreness caused by vigorous exercise. Also an incomparable remedy for stiff neck." (Name and address of writer given on request.)

It is marvelous how ache and stiffness in lame muscles yield to the magic of Sloan's. Just a little patted on lightly, and healing new blood tingles through the hurt place.

Away go "fatigue-poisons." Now tissues get needed nourishment. Sore muscles limber up and stop aching. Get a bottle today and have it on hand. All druggists—35 cents.

FOR THE chronic IRRITATION

Smokers—singers—public speakers—and all those whose throats are unduly sensitive—will find not only quick relief but lasting benefit in PERTUSSIN.

It is remarkably soothing to the dry or irritated membranes and keeps the air passages moist and clear. Its harmless qualities permit it to be taken as often as required.

Known to physicians for more than 70 years and sold by all druggists in large or small bottles.

Young People's Week is being observed at the Methodist Episcopal church. The week's program commenced with special services Sunday including a Sunrise Praise service at eight o'clock. The pastor, Rev. J. Garfield Sallis, preached at the 10:30 service on "Your Body is the Temple of the Holy Spirit". In the evening a helpful service was conducted by some of the young men of the church. Tuesday evening there was a Young Homemakers' banquet, to which twenty young married couples were invited. Prof. W. R. Snyder gave an interesting talk on Some Remarkable Personalities I Have Known, and Rev. Mr. Sallis greeted the guests in behalf of the church and extended to them an invitation to make such gatherings a regular feature of the church's activities. Many of the young people spoke briefly and it was decided to organize a Young Homemakers' league and a committee was selected to prepare for another gathering next month. The remainder of the week is to be devoted to a mother-and-daughter banquet, arranged by the Girl Scouts, Thursday; a general social gathering Friday, and an Older and Younger Boys' night Saturday. The spirit and purpose of the week is to be summed up at next Sunday evening's service, which is announced as a Consecration service, conducted by the pastor.

STONINGTON

Just at present S. H. S. stands lowest in the eastern Connecticut-southern Rhode Island league. Much depends on the outcome of the game to be played at Norwich with N. F. A. Saturday. The local boys know that N. F. A.'s team is not a "Grammar" school team so that they will have to put up a tough front but they are keeping their hopes high. If they play the way they did Armistice Day, at Westerly, N. F. A. will have to watch them closely. Adams, Bryer, Levan Duke and McCaffrey are the stars of the Stonington team in most every game. Chapman Tech, of New London, was at Westerly, to root for S. H. S. C. T. is now out of the running, and N. F. A. and S. H. S. still have a slim chance. All hope they will make the most of it.

GERMAN BOXERS DEVELOPING INTO CHAMPIONSHIP CALIBRE

BERLIN, Nov. 18. (AP)—When German boxers squared off against British pugilists in 1920, they usually were given a good boxing lesson or a beating. But now there is little to choose between them. The German mitt wielder compares favorably with those of any other European country.

French and German fighters did not become friendly enough to enter the boxing ring until the end of 1924. That allowed for little comparison. Now that the spirit of peace prevails, some international bouts are expected.

Breitenstrater, Domgoergen and Harry Stein, respectively light heavyweight, middleweight and flyweight, are the German boxers who have the best chance to conquer the title of champion of Europe in their class.

Breitenstrater holds in Germany the position and enjoys the same popularity as did Carpentier in France some four years ago. The people here call him "Hans" just as the French were wont to call the French idol "Georges" in the old days.

He is a clean living, modest, good looking young fellow and deserves his popularity. He is very fast for a big man, has a right which is not to be held too lightly and is as game as they make them. In the early days, before he knew as much about fighting as he does now, he met Arthur Townley, Erminio Spalla, Harry Parson and the ineffable Battling Siki, and the German was never a beaten man until the final gong. His fight against Paolino Uzkudum, the "Mountain Lion of the Pyrenees"—as his manager Francois Deschamps has dubbed him—will be watched with great interest. They meet in Berlin on November 20.

Domgoerten of Cologne is the best of the middleweights. He has met and defeated in France both Plonnier and Paumelle, who rank among the best in that country. The Cologne battler is expected to take the title away from Wiegert, the present holder, when they meet here in December.

Harry Stein also of Cologne would give any of the flyweights in Europe a stiff argument. Both Doemgoerten and Stein learned their boxing with the English professors in the Army of Occupation.

Among the heavies Samson Koerner, Diener of Magdeburg,—a 20 year old youth,—Dickman of Hanover, Haymann of Leipsig and Wagner of Dortmund need not fear to meet the best in France and England.

In the lightweight class, Koerner and Dockmann, who can make the weight and be strong, Melling of Dresden and Smthling of Cologne, form a quartet which would not be out of tune in any ring in Europe.

Kurt Prenzel, Milenz, Domgoergen and Wiegert rank highest among the middleweights.

The welterweight class furnished the largest number of first class men. Hesse of Hamburg, Funke of Berlin, Grimm also of Berlin and Naujocks shape up as real fighters.

Ensel of Cologne is about the only lightweight of any account. This class is the poorest in the German boxing field. Smith is the best of the feathers, while Friedmann and Urban Grass shine among the bantams.

Harry Stein is a class by himself in the flyweight class.

Such is the popularity of boxing here that as soon as a youngster shows any possibilities, he is not long in finding some wealthy "fan" who provides the funds necessary to his training and general conditioning.

Two great organizations, one in Berlin and the other in Hamburg, dominate the sport in Germany. The "Sportpalast" here is unique in Europe for its magnificence.

Benzine Dates Back to 1825

Benzine has been known to the scientific world since 1825 when the eminent physicist and chemist Faraday isolated a substance from the residue found in gas retorts which he called at first "bicarburet of hydrogen." A few drops of Faraday's first preparation are still preserved as an historical treasure in the Royal Institution in London. The molecule of this substance contains six carbon atoms like hexane and six hydrogen atoms.

MENIAL WAS FORMER MAJOR IN JAPANESE ARMY

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Resigning today from the service of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, where he had been for 14 months, most of the time in the kitchen peeling potatoes and helping the chef, Tukuzhiro Fukuda disclosed that he is a former major in the Japanese army sent here to learn the art of hotel keeping, so that American methods may be used in Japanese hotels.

His visit here, he said, was inspired by a desire to reach the sympathies of American travelers through American methods of hotel keeping and to promote international goodwill. On his return to Japan he will become adviser to the Imperial Japanese Government Railways and Hotels.

Skeletons of Giants 6

One of the most interesting of recent discoveries in Mexico is that reported by prospecting miners operating a new gold and silver mining district in the state of Chihuahua. According to one of the engineers, who has reached Mexico City from the Sierra Madre Range of mountains, where the operations are being carried on, there have been discovered several human skeletons measuring from 10 to 12 feet in length. They were all found in one cave, being quite intact. The average length of the feet was from 18 to 20 inches. The anthropological department of the Mexican government is planning to send a commission to investigate the discoveries. The investigation is expected to clear up the origin of the wonderful Indians of the state of Chihuahua. The skeletons were all found in a sitting posture, shoulders bent forward and arms resting on upraised knees.

Hogs on Moonshine Spree

Prohibition agents found 38 barrels of mash and four stills on the farm of William McKenna near Wagner, S. Dak. Soon after the mash was thrown into the hog lots an indescribable commotion was heard. Forty hogs had filled up on mash and were on a genuine spree. Part of them were lying on their backs squealing, some were walking on their hind legs, and others were "dead to the world." The stuff acts much the same in hogs and men.

Colleges Favor Bonds

Replies from 65 of the leading colleges and other educational institutions show that 27 and 9-10 per cent of their income-producing endowments is invested in railway bonds and stocks. Investments in bonds total nearly $130,000,000, while that in stocks is around $20,000,000.

When old age comes accept it gracefully. Any other way is clumsy.

DETAILS OF HIS PRE-MARITAL CONDUCT WERE DRAWN FROM YOUNG RHINELANDER

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 18—(A. P.)—Leonard Hip Rhinelander rightly began to wilt today under a merciless, steady cross-examination that dragged from his reluctant lips intimate details of his pre-martal relations with Alice Beatrice Jones, his negro wife, from whom he now seeks freedom.

Stammering and red of face, he struggled through a maze of questions put to him by Lee Parsons Davis, counsel for Mrs. Rhinelander in her husband's annulment suit. Once during the afternoon young Rhinelander turned to Justice Morschauser and complained that he was tired. A ten-minute recess was granted and again late this afternoon, in the midst of personal questions as to his love life, he complained of fatigue. Adjournment was then taken for the day, and the wealthy youth left the stand, his face drawn and haggard.

He had been subjected to a full day of pounding that had resulted in many contradictions. He had been asked questions that reflected on his gentlemaniness and his sense of honor. He had admitted to a secret marriage pact with the daughter of a negro hack driver, as far back as 1922 and had confessed to suspicions of her color. Through it all, however, he clung to his contention that he did not believe she was a negress when he married her.

During most of this grilling Rhinelander kept his poise, but when he was asked question after question about the week in December, 1921, when he stayed at the Hotel Marie Antoinette, in New York, with Alice he blushed violently and began to show the strain. Alice, herself, spent the day with her face buried in her coat.

"Before I start asking about this matter," said Mr. Davis, "I want you to remember that it was your side that dragged filth into this case."

The story of the trip was told ferkily in response to innumerable questions. He said that he and Alice had made the trip to New York in his father's automobile, driven by his father's chauffeur. They registered at the Marie Antoinette under the names of "Mr. and Mrs. James Smith, of Rye," and then went to a theatre and a restaurant, returning to the hotel later. Previously he told how he had persuaded her to accompany him.

"Didn't you make special arrangement to get Alice from the automobile into a hotel elevator and to the room without delay?" Mr. Davis asked.

"Yes."

"Wasn't this because you were afraid the manager of the hotel might see you taking up this girl, who, obviously on the face of her, had colored blood in her veins?"

"No, that was not my motive."

Mr. Davis then asked a series of questions designed to show that Rhinelander was not unsophiscated as he had been represented. The questions were personal and Rhinelander haltingly answered them, his face suffused with blood. The crowded courtroom hung on every word. In the midst of it, he complained that he was tired and the trial went over until tomorrow.

During the day, five of Rhinelander's letters to his bride and seven postal cards to her parents from him, were read. One of the letters, written at the Canal Zone when he was on a long trip at the order of his father, Philip Rhinelander, was seventeen pages in length and was filled with fervid protestations of love. It revealed that young Rhinelander had been sent away to keep him from Alice. He promised, however, that he would "carry on, no matter how long the fight may last."

Another was from Bermuda where Rhinelander wrote that the girls he met disgusted him, because of their cigarette smoking and drinking.

"You were shocked at these society girls drinking until they became tight," said Mr. Davis. "Did it shock your sense of refinement to register at the Hotel Marie Antoinette with a woman who was not your wife?"

The question made Rhinelander squirm. "No," he answered at length in a low voice.

Another letter revealed that Alice and he had gone on a motor trip through New England in August, 1924, a few months before their marriage. The letter was written from Worcester, Mass., to Mr. and Mrs. Jones, whom he addressed as "Dear Mamma and Papa," and revealed that he had told the Jones family that a "Mr. and Mrs. Mathews" were on the trip as chaperones.

"There were no such persons, were there?" asked Davis.

"No," conceded Rhinelander.

"What do you think of taking a girl away on a trip of this kind and deceiving her aged mother?"

"I think it's all right if the girl is willing."

"Is that the way you have been brought up to view those below your station in life?"

"No," said the witness after some hesitation.

"Would you do this with a girl in your own class?"

"Yes."

The letter also revealed that he and Alice had stayed at the Hotel Bancraft, in Worcester, under the names "Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop." One part of the missive said that he and "Mr. Mathews" were at the hoel resting while the women were at the movies. The postcards to the Jones family simply told of various places they had visited.

A letter from Salt Lake City, written September 19, 1923, revealed the secret marriage pact. One paragraph said: "You know down deep in your heart that I love you and I fully intend to carry out our secret?"

"What did you mean by that?" asked Davis.

"I meant marriage," said Rhinelander.

Previously Rhinelander had testified that he first thought of marrying Alice in March, 1923. In this same letter he wrote: "Are you going to refuse to have me and are you going to make me live my life alone because I am not good enough for you?" This section was in answer to reproaches from Alice because he was away from her at his father's request.

Once Mr. Davis asked him what was the color of Alice's body and he replied that her arms were brown. "No more," he added, "than the arms of many women I have seen in Havana."

"Are you color blind?" he was asked.

"No."

"Can you distinguish brown from white?"

"Yes."

"Was your brain all right in 1923?"

"Yes."

"The bill of particulars" which Rhinelander yesterday admitted contained five falsehoods again was brought up, and he again conceded that it was wrong. Davis then switched to another tack. "Do you know you have dragged your wife's name in the gutter before the world?" he asked.

"I followed my counsel's advice."

"You wouldn't lie like a gentleman to protect a woman, then?"

"Not when I was deceived."

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CONN. MANUFACTURERS' ASS'N

developing and applying aircraft in national defense and to supplement the studies already made by the war and navy departments on that subject. He asked the board to report by the latter part of November and to suggest what action might be taken to improve aviation.

That report has not been completed, but we expect that it will be ready by the latter part of November. It is not my desire or intention to anticipate the recommendations which the president's aircraft board may make, but rather to call to your attention some of the interesting features of the testimony and to bring out some of the things which possibly escaped your attention while the public hearings were in progress.

There have been so many aircraft investigations since the beginning of the war—the earliest one I remember started to slow down the wheels of progress in the army air service as early as the winter of 1917-18—the effect on the public mind has been confusing. In 1918 came the Hughes investigation which was followed in rapid succession by a number of others, congressional and otherwise, nearly all of which have served to cause the officers in the air service to spend an enormous amount of time in answering questions and digging up tables of statistics.

At present there are at least five committees, boards or courts which are investigating the air service and have not made their final official reports. The oldest of these is known as the Lampert committee, a special committee of the house of representatives appointed during the last session of congress to make an inquiry into the operations of the United States air services. This committee conducted prolonged hearings, the results of which have been published in six volumes, a total of 4,200 pages. It may be of interest to note in this connection that Colonel Mitchell was repeatedly requested to testify before this committee and was given an opportunity of stating his views at great length. The number of things which his testimony covered is shown by the fact that the mere index to it occupies 16 pages.

The Lampert committee has not yet made its report to congress, but it is expected to do so this winter. The testimony which it took covered a very wide range of subjects and is of the greatest importance. Some of the documents prepared at the request of the committee will long continue to be standard works of reference for all students of aeronautics.

Besides the Lampert committee and the president's air board there are still in existence the naval court of inquiry into the loss of the Shenandoah, which has not yet made its official report, the committee appointed by the department of commerce in conjunction with the American Engineering council, which has been making a remarkably comprehensive study of commercial aeronautics and the court martial of Colonel Mitchell which is at the present time engaged in airing, in many cases for the third time this year, some of the troubles of the air services.

In view of all these investigations and the score or more which preceded them during the past eight years, it is marvelous that the government air services have had time to make any progress at all. It appears to be true that a very large portion of the time and effort of many of the ablest officers in the army air service has been taken up with the requests for information of the different commissions of inquiry.

In view of this fact the president's aircraft board did not feel it necessary to duplicate the very able and thorough work done by the Lampert committee nor the careful scientific investigations of the committee on civil aviation, all of the results of these committees having been freely placed at our disposal.

We did, however, attempt to make a clear and complete cross section of all governmental activities relating to aviation. We had before four members of the cabinet and their assistants. We asked them to make such statements as they desired regarding their plans and policies. The army air service, the naval bureau of aeronautics, the air mail and the department of commerce were each given full opportunity to present such facts and figures and opinions as they desired. Testimony was sought from the highest officials in the departments as well as from the oldest and most experienced of pilots. Nearly a million words of testimony were taken, of which about 80,000 came from Colonel Mitchell, who was requested by the board to "put everything in".

One result of our hearings so far as the public was concerned was amusingly and graphically represented by Hanny's cartoon in the Philadelphia Inquirer, entitled "They have us so mixed we do not know what to do." He depicted public opinion as a hungry little pup dizzy and cross-eyed with excitement due to the fact that the pros and cons of the testimony for and against a unified air service were throwing down on each side of him such an attractive pile of bones that he could not decide which way to turn. This state of affairs was largely due to the circumstance that although certain advocates of a united air service had given the impression that it was desired by all pilots and air men, the testimony brought out emphatically the fact that a united air service was not desired by the naval pilots. On the other hand it was desired by a majority of the army pilots. The unanimity of the naval pilots in their opposition to a united air service was one of the most striking and unexpected features of the testimony.

The testimony also brought out the fact that the majority of the pilots were clearly of the opinion that the chief troubles of the air services were not in connection with material but in connection with personnel matters. No evidence was introduced tending to show that any country has developed a better type of fighting or pursuit plane than we have. On the contrary it appears that the great majority of our types are better than those developed by any other country, while the great majority now possessed by other countries are in a class referred to by aviation enthusiasts as "obsolete or obsolescent" planes. The testimony seems to show that America has made more progress than any other country in the development of the best airplanes, the best accessories and the soundest aeronautical theory. The people's money has not been spent in piling up a large number of airplanes which would in a year or two become obsolete due to the rapid advancement of aviation but has been spent in a remarkably wise program of research and experimentation. This program places us easily first in knowledge and in design.

A LOAN OF $100,000,000 TO ITALY HAS BEEN ARRANGED

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(A. P.)—A loan of $100,000,000 to the Italian government insuring financial support for the restoration of the gold standard in Italy has been arranged through a group of American banks headed by J. P. Morgan and Company.

Negotiations for the financing virtually were concluded today and formal flotation of the loan was tentatively scheduled for next Friday by a nation-wide banking syndicate. The issue will take the form of bonds maturing within twenty or thirty years and yielding the investor more than 7 per cent. While actual terms have not been made public it is expected that the bonds will bear a seven per cent. interest rate and be placed slightly below par.

The opening of America's private credit resources to Italy quickly followed the agreement reached at Washington last week to fund the Italian war debt to the United States. Count Volpi, Italian finance minister and head of the debt funding commission, came to New York this week and has conducted the negotiations on behalf of his government.

Approximately half of the proceeds of the new loan will be used to retire the $50,000,000 credit extended by J. P. Morgan and Company to the three Italian banks of issue last June for the stabilization of the lira. The funds which will be made available to Italy by the present financing also will be held for exchange stabilization purposes. The revaluation of the lira on a gold basis probably will be announced as a part of Italy's new financing programme.

FIRE IN THE FINE ARTS STUDIO AT HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 18.—(A. P.)—Flames broke out today in the Fine Arts studio here, scattering a number of motion picture companies that were engaged in filming interior scenes and threatening destruction to the historic cinema stages where D. Griffith a decade ago produced his first masterpiece.

Prompt response of fire apparatus extinguished the flames and when the excitement of the actors and employers subsided and a survey of the damage was made by firemen, the loss was found to be small.

The Fine Arts studios are one of the oldest motion picture "lots" in Hollywood. They were recently remodelled to house a group of independent producers.

RHEUMATIC PAINS GO SWOLLEN JOINTS VANISH

Thousands of sufferers have freed themselves from the bondage of rheumatism; rid themselves of the torturing pain; reduced the swollen joints; thrown away canes and crutches, and from helpless beings became able to work and be of use to themselves and their families.

They took Rheuma; the modern enemy of rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, arthritis, and chronic neuralgia.

Don't be skeptical about Rheuma. You will know in a few hours after beginning the treatment that the poisonous waste matter is leaving your system through the natural channels. You will feel better in a day; you will know you are going to be helped in less than a week.

There is no guess work about Rheuma bringing you back to health That's why Lee & Osgood Co. and druggists everywhere sell it with guarantee of money back if it does not give quick relief.

WELLESLEY STUDENTS NOT PERMITTED TO SMOKE

WELLESLEY, Mass., Nov. 18.—(A. P.)—A proposal to permit smoking by Wellesley college students when off the campus has been defeated by the "senate" of the college government association, it was announced today. The five faculty members of the senate voted down the proposition, against the affirmative votes of three student delegates.

The new regulation was passed some time ago by the other branch of the student government body and had been endorsed by 53 per cent. of the 1,297 who voted in a referendum on the subject. The action of the senate signified the retention of the existing rule, which forbids students to smoke anywhere "while living under the regulations of the college government association."

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

Secretary Work called a reclamation conference.

NINE MEMBERS OF THE "ROWLEY GANG" INDICTED

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—(A. P.)—Indictments against nine men were returned today by the grand jury in connection with the round up yesterday of the so-called "Rowley Gang." Assistant District Attorney Murphy announced that $50,000 bail would be demanded for each. Mr. Murphy also said two women would be later arraigned as material witnesses.

French Woman Tells

How to Get Thin

Without Diets, Creams, Exercises or Dangerous Drugs

I reduced my own weight 50 pounds in less than five weeks, and at the same time marvelously improved my general health and appearance with a new French discovery called SAN-GRI-NA. To-day I look, act and feel far younger than my real age. From the results in my own case and those of my friends, I am absolutely convinced that any man or woman burdened with rolls of ugly, injurious, unwholesome fat, can take it off easily, quickly and safely with SAN-GRI-NA. Every day science discovers something new. SAN-GRI-NA is one of the latest French discoveries for the reduction of excess fat. It does away with punishing diets, tiresome exercises, torturing garments and absurd and expensive so-called reducing creams. It is used successfully in Paris, where women of every rank pride themselves on keeping their figures slender and graceful, and where the men detest a heavy waistline or double chin. No matter how fat you are, or what you have done in the past to reduce you must remember that SAN-GRI-NA has never been offered here to the American public. IT IS GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS, does not contain any dangerous drugs, and cannot possibly affect your stomach or your health. By simply taking two small tablets before each meal, I lost 50 pounds in two months, and I have not regained a pound since. I eat all I want and enjoy the best of health. You can do the same. Today go to any good drug store, ask for a package of SAN-GRI-NA. Do not accept anything else, as it is the only thing I ever found to reduce after I had tried hundreds of different ways and remedies.

NOTE.—The above appeared in many papers about 2 years ago. Since then SAN-GRI-NA has been investigated by American Physicians, Nurses, Chiros, Beauty Specialists etc., and is now endorsed and recommended to fat people by Dr. Rudolph, famous Health Commissioner, as a most wonderful and harmless way to reduce. Every day letters from grateful users come to us from all over the country. Men and women in all steps of life have reduced 10, 20, 30, or even as high as 80 pounds, saying also that they were able to greatly improve their health and looks. Do not accept a substitute. Insist on SAN-GRI-NA. If your druggist does not carry SAN-GRI-NA in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. C., and one full sized box SAN-GRI-NA will be mailed you prepaid.

On sale at any good drug or department store. If your druggist does not carry San-Gri-Na in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. City.

MACOMBER'S "STATESMAN" WINS ONLY WITH WINDER IN SADDLE

PARIS, Nov. 18 (AP)—The Statesman, a thoroughbred horse belonging to A. K. Macomber, American silk manufacturer, has an eye for a jockey and expresses himself in such a way as to gain his preference.

Six times this season the colt went to the post. Three times he crossed the tape a winner. Three times he finished last.

The Statesman earned his brackets with Jockey Winder up. His losing races were ridden by Jockey Clout. Stable hands make no secret of the horse's dislike for Clout and love for Winder.

On the three occasions Jockey Clout rode the colt, Statesman did all he could to throw the lad and then refused to start or sulked throughout the race. In training, he will not work if Clout is about.

But let little Winder come along and immediately the colt becomes good natured, buries his nose into the lad's arm and runs like a streak of lightning when he takes the track.

Clout is rated as a very good jockey, with more experience than Winder, but this matters not with The Statesman, who, like a human, has his likes and dislikes.

First White Woman To Cross Africa Alone

Mrs. Delia J. Akeley, of the Brooklyn Museum of Arts and Sciences, who is the first white woman to cross darkest Africa alone. With only credentials and travel papers, she entered the jungle at Kasinyi, on Lake Albert on the 24 leg of her trip, she arrived at Matadi on the Congo River, September 3, with three of her 12 gun cartridges left, and five specimens of jungle animals, unknown to science. She started originally from Lamu on the east coast on October 16 of last year. One of her critical moments was when she was besieged by four foot high Pygmies, who coveted her gun. She distributed her palm, wine, tobacco and salt, and during the rejoicing of the little African natives, she made her escape.

What the ASSOCIATED PRESS IS

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS is an association of persons representing more than 1200 morning, evening and Sunday newspapers scattered throughout the United States, Alaska, Cuba, Costa Rica, Mexico, Hawaii, Philippines, Porto Rico, and Central and South America.

Its sole object is the collection and distribution of the important news of the world for publication in its member papers.

Each member contributes exclusively to the organization the news of his vicinage.

News of all other countries in the world is gathered by staff men in centralized bureaus and in the field. In addition, there is available, through exclusive news-exchange contracts with the important foreign news agencies, all of the news that they gather.

80,000 individuals report news to THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

This news is distributed by leased wires. There are 55,000 miles of leased wires operated in the daytime, and 53,000 at night.

It is the greatest clearing house for news in the world. The number of words daily received and transmitted at each of the more important offices is over 75,000—the equivalent of 60 columns of the average newspaper.

What the ASSOCIATED PRESS IS

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS has no stock capital; it makes no profits and declares no dividends.

The revenues reach an annual aggregate of $7,000,000 derived wholly from weekly assessments levied pro rata upon the members.

The members of THE ASSOCIATED PRESS are persons of every conceivable political, economic and religious advocacy. They demand accurate news; notwithstanding their varying opinions, they are united in one thing—that THE ASSOCIATED PRESS news service shall be wholly free from partisan activity; the news must be important, clean, and free from any tinge of propaganda. To this end the news is intentionally and necessarily subjected to the criticism of fifteen directors, twelve hundred members and, most important, the reading public.

It is the theory of THE ASSOCIATED PRESS that, in a self-governing country like ours, the citizens, if given the facts, must be able to form their own opinion and judgments respecting them.

The Gate That Is Never Closed

I do not think a gate unclosed
Is proof a slovenly tenants there;
Instead I find myself disposed
To feel it breathes a welcome air.
A formal gate, all tightly latched
Seems meant to frighten and repel;
One thinks of vicious dogs detached,
Of bites to cure, of snarls to quell.

An unclosed gate is like a door
That echoes back a glad "Come in!"
A house with footprints on the floor,
Revealing where glad feet have been.
I do not mean untidy feet,
I do not mean that lack of care
Has left the imprint of the street
On unkempt threshold, hall and stair.

My thought is that an unclosed gate
Is but a symbol to impress
Some passerby to hesitate
And ease a soul of loneliness.
Within may be a crippled child
With longings for a playmate's love;
Old age may cherish hours beguiled
In talk of Unclosed Gates above.

An unclosed gate may be a code
A mother has for one who strayed;
It welcomes to the old abode
And bids him enter unafraid.
So think not ill of unclosed gates,
Perhaps no sloven tenants there;
Nobody knows who watches, waits,
And makes "Come in!" her nightly prayer!

—William Herschell in Indianapolis News

Opportunity

Opportunity knocks once
At the door of lazy dunce.

Maybe when your summons fell
You would not attend the bell.

Praps you got it in your head
That the wolf were there instead.

Maybe you misjudged her looks
For an agent selling books.

Anyway, do not despair
That you missed the call so rare.

You must simply hustle more,
Go and get another door.

THIEF, WHEN DISCOVERED, BEATS NEW LONDON WOMAN STORE-KEEPER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 18—The police late this afternoon conducted a search for a would be thief and a woman beater, for earlier in the day the fellow entered the drygoods store conducted by Mrs. Nattie Ornstein, 561 Bank street and after attempting to steal a pair of blankets, dealt the woman a blow on the face.

The man entered the store under the pretense of purchasing a blanket that was in a show window. The woman entered the window for the purpose of getting the desired blanket. While she as thus engaged the fellow went to another part of the store and secured two blankets with which he was attempting to sneak out when Mrs. Ornstein detected him in his act, rushing at the man. The fellow dropped the blankets and then struck the woman a hard blow on the jaw. She notified the police and Patrolmen John Courtney and George Labous made a search for the fellow, but he disappeared through Bank street. Just before the officers arrived at the store.

Charles Williams, accused of having assaulted and tried to rob Philip Seller, operator of a little store on Bank street near the station of the Alen Hook and Ladder company, was in the police court this morning to answer to the crime, but he was not put to plea, as his attorney was unable to be present. Williams is not the sort of man apparently who would rob anybody and such a fellow physically as would be given an awful walloping if he did attempt it. He seems to be an addict of liquor and to be physically and mentally some what weak. But he was suspected and when he was taken into custody and later taken before Seller the latter declared Williams to be the man who assaulted him, according to the police. Prosecutor Hollandersky has not yet conferred with Seller as to the facts in the case, nor has he listened to seller's version of what happened, as the latter will tell it. When Seller is questioned before the case comes to a trial some of the police officers expect that the situation will be changed. Williams declares that he is innocent and will not change a word in the story he has told since his arrest. He could not furnish a bond when he was required to do so in order that he might have his freedom till Friday when the case is to come to a hearing, so he is in jail and will stay there till he appears in court.

It is understood that Seller does not now identify Williams as the fellow who assaulted him, and he says he never identified him. There is so far as the police believe now, absolutely nothing upon which to predicate a case that Williams assaulted Seller and he is likely to be discharged when he is presented in court Friday.

Lake Konomoc has a greater volume of water now than it has ever had and the quantity is still increasing. It is the time of year when its consumption is less than during the summer when there are 1000 or more people here than make their home in the city in the winter. The project to secure Miller's pond as an auxiliary supply has not been abandoned by the promoters of the plan, though the outlook for its purchase now is a very dark one. There has been a reduction in the waste of water, too in the past ten years or more, for nearly all water is now metered and there is caution against waste. The wharves were form rly a source of great waste, but that leak has been stopped. And that raised the question, "where has all the galloping that formerly came to this port disappeared to?" It was no uncommon thing to see some eighty sail in the lower harbor in an easterly storm, while now there is scarcely a vessel to be seen here detained by wind or severe weather. Formerly three and four-mast schooners brought immense cargoes of coal here and to Allen's Point, while now the coal comes by barges or by rail and the schooner has disappeared from the harbor. There is hardly a sailing vessel that makes New London her home port now, and the few that hail from here are rarely in port.

Samuel Einhorn was fined $10 in the police court this morning for two inexcusable breaches of the parking ordinances of the city. He drove his car to a point on Bank street adjoining the custom house where the sidewalk curbing has been painted white to keep autos from stopping there and where there are a couple of standing signs that forbid parking, and there he anchored his machine and went about his affairs. The opposite side of the street was obstructed while machinery was being moved so there was only one side of the highway available for traffic. Einhorn's only excuse was that he didn't see the painted curbing nor did he notice the signs of prohibition, though how that could have happened was a mystery. That's why he was ordered to pay a fine, something that will remind him in the future.

Miss Virginia Borgess of Waterford: Mrs. Albert H. Ritchie and infant son, Mystic; Master Peter Morgenti, Mystic; Mrs. Thomas Quinn and infant son, Niantic; Master William Beck, Henry street and Cornelius Phillips, United States Coast Guard patrol boat, 19, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital were dismissed today.

William H. Harrison, Jr., 40, son of William H. Harrison, Sr., 23 Chapman street, died last night at Lawrence hospital, where he had been under treatment about ten days. Besides his father, Mr. Harrison is survived by his wife and a son. He was a member of Niagara Engine company and had been employed a number of years on repair work connected with the upkeep of the property of the estate of Bryan F. Mahan. Mr. Harrison underwent an operation at the institution about six weeks ago, but the operation did not prove a success. A second operation was deemed advisable and was performed about a week ago.

The funeral of Mrs. Grace DiMaggio, wife of Salvatore DiMaggio, 435 Montauk avenue, was held at 9 o'clock this morning at St. Joseph's church and was attended by a throng of relatives and acquaintances. The floral tributes were beautiful. The solemn mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons, with Rev. Raymond O'Callahan deacon and Rev. Alexander Wollschlaeger sub-deacon. At the offertory Edward F. Murray sang "Ave Maria" and after the final absolution Mrs. Charlotte Dorsey Morrison sang "Some Sweet Day". The bearers were Frank and Antonio Piscitella, nephews of Mrs. DiMaggio, John Syracusa, Guiseppi Micili, Frank DiMaggio, and Guiseppi Longo. Burial was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery.

George Whittlesey today sold a building lot on Fitch avenue to Patrolman Augustus Ray.

The condition of Alphaus Blair of Pequot avenue, employed at the Troy laundry, who was burned severely suffering a compound fracture of the arm several weeks ago while at his work was reported this afternoon at Lawrence hospital as being slightly improved. The patients condition for three days has been critical.

Xenos Patterson of Tilley street, reported to the police late last night that his Marmon touring car had been stolen from the Monte Cristo garage and that a New York man was guilty of the theft. The state police at Groton and Centerbrook barracks were notified of the suspected theft of the machine as were the authorities of New Haven, Hartford and Bridgeport. It later developed that the automobile had not been stolen, but had been taken in charge by Attorney McGarry and Shea because of the allegation of the concern that sold the machine to Patterson, on a conditional bill of sale plan, that Patterson had failed to keep his part of the agreement as regards payments and the sellers had authorized the attorneys to recover the automobile. The car has been placed in storage.

The fire that damaged the three story wooden building at 119 Main street, early this morning, is believed to have been with incendiary intent, at least that is the opinion of Deputy Thomas Shipman, who conducted the work of the department in combatting the blaze. The fire, which was in the shoe repairing establishment of Marav flomolo, originated in the rear of the place, close to a coal stove, the door of which was closed. Inflammable material was close to the stove and when the firemen forced an entrance, the fumes of oil was easily detected. It is the belief that the stove became overheated and caused the material placed close to it to ignite. The fire was in the extreme rear of the store and pedestrians passing the place ten minutes prior to the alarm being rung in did not detect the odor of smoke, nor observe the flames yet when the alarm was sent in by a pedestrian the back of the store was enveloped in flames. Deputy Chief Shipman was absent from the city today, but according to Chief Enos, the former will conduct an investigation within a day or two. No report of the suspicions of Deputy Chief Shipman has been made to the police. The building is owned by Israel Goldstein of Jefferson avenue, who acquired the property several months ago from Mandel Zimmer.

Three rowdy sailors from the submarine base, on a spree last night, took it into their heads to slash and cut the awning at the restaurant at State street and Railroad avenue. They had to settle the costs of their arrest and prosecution and they made good the damage they had caused the restaurant man.

There is said to be no surplus of hard coal in the yards in this city, though the dealers are supplying steady customers with the anthracite fuel. Unfortunately the dealers could not find storage for their coal at a time when it was to be had in abundance before the strike came on, but they did store all their yards would hold.

Some curiosity is manifested over the probable success of the top dressing that was laid over the brick pavement at Bank and Truman streets. The severe rain a few days ago washed the dressing pretty badly and rolled out of the tar much of the pebbles and dirt mixed with it, but on the whole the work is said to stand up pretty well. On the success of the topdressing as to wear will depend degree of the same treatment is accorded other streets. Truman street has become a traveled street now by vehicles the drivers of which desire to avoid the heavy travel on Bank street. This street is macadamized, but the surface is wearing so that it will need attention another summer, and indeed in the early spring, if severe weather comes during the winter. A bit of street that has stood the wear exceptionally well is the short stretch of cement on Methodist street. That was laid during the administration of Mayor Armstrong some ten years ago and not a dollar has been spent upon it to repair the surface. Cement and asphalt appear to be the most serviceable of all covering for the streets of this city, and, after the old-time Belgian blocks, these roads stand up better than any others.

Joseph Daniele of Springfield, Mass., was ordered today to appear in the police court the latter part of the week charged with violation of the city's traffic regulations. Daniele ran his car to the union station last night at 8 o'clock and parked it in the space allotted public service machines, the car remaining there until 11 o'clock this forenoon. Patrolman William Riordan ordered Daniels into court.

Mrs. R.J.S. Eggleston and son, James have returned to their home in Rutland, Vt., after spending several days with friends in this city.

Miss Marian Johnson of Waller court, instructor in the employ of the local branch of the Southern New England Telephone company, is in Putnam, where she will remain several weeks, instructing a class of operators.

Miss Rose Rittell, 28 Barrow street, had been called to Duryea, Pa., by the serious illness of her mother. Miss Rittell left for Duryea this afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Jochum have returned to their home in New York, having spent several days as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Macomber of Ye Faire Harbour apartments, Broad street.

Mrs. William Rathbun returned to her home in Noank today, having been a patient at Home Memorial hospital for a fortnight.

The police report the city unusually quiet insofar as the situation calls for their activities. Only a single drunk was locked up this evening, up till 10 o'clock.

David Mulcahey and Thomas T. Wetmore were in Hartford today where they attended a meeting of insurance agents and this evening were among about 1000 insurance agents at a banquet held at the Hotel Bond.

James F. O'Leary of Montauk avenue, who is at South Manchester, where he is the guest of his brother, P. J. O'Leary, will return to New London shortly and take up his duties at the Hotel O'Leary. Mr. O'Leary is at South Manchester for the purpose of obtaining rest and change from his confining duties at the hotel.

TWO WEST POINT SOLDIERS IN JAIL FOR TAKING CAR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 18—Evidently Leo Roddy and Herbert Mills, a couple of soldiers connected with the engineering corps at West Point, desire to get out of the army. They got into jail in making the attempt, and there they will stay for about seven months. They managed to get to New London, though how is not known, and here they stole a Chevrolet automobile that they found at the curbing in front of the Capitol theatre. The soldiers got as far as Providence on the way to Woonsocket, where Roddy claims a home. On the Roger Williams Plantation the Chevrolet ran out of gasoline and the operator was forced to stop. He was interrogated by the police and it was disclosed that neither of the men had a license to drive a car. New London was notified and the stolen car was located. The soldiers admitted that they intended to steal the car and to sell or abandon it when it had served their purpose. When they realized that they could be imprisoned for five to ten years they concluded that they had done a very foolish thing. It was to their good luck that Judge Prince took jurisdiction in the case and disposed of it with the judgment stated.

NEW AERIAL LADDER DIFFICULT TO MANAGE

NEW LONDON, Nov. 18—The wisdom of operating the new aerial ladder whenever an alarm of fire is sounded in this city is questioned today, in view of the fact that the new apparatus was put into use this morning when a small fire in a small building on Main street called the firemen to duty. The apparatus cannot be made use of except at one inverted, when fire attacks high buildings and there are very few in this city that would permit the use of the ladders. The aerial is a difficult piece of apparatus to handle and it is said that might occasion an accident in the use of it. Some of the firemen have advised that the aerial be not brought into use in case there is a special call made for it.

RUM ROW REESTABLISHED NEAR MONTAUK POINT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 18—Rum Row which was wiped out by the unusual activities of the coast guard, is being reestablished, according to advices brought by fishermen coming in from Montauk Point and vicinity today. It is declared that there are some fourteen vessels at anchor in what was known as Rum Row in the days when so much liquor was coming into this country from England and Scotland. The vessels are all craft, but they have auxiliary power in gasoline and they shift about without going far away each day. That the ships are getting some of their cargo into the little craft that hover about the row there is no doubt, else the ships would not lie there. It is said that there is less intoxicating liquor in this city now than ever before. Indeed there is very little except what is made from day to day and which is nothing more than alcohol and water.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater

How Colonel William F. Cody acquired his title of "Buffalo Bill" has been the theme of many a story and the exact circumstances leading up to the conferring of this title are presented in the William A. Fox drama The Iron Horse, now at the Breed theater. The screen character of Buffalo Bill is played by George Wakner in the photoplay.

During the building of the first transcontinental railroad the workmen were on strike because they had no beef, when Col. Cody saved the situation by bringing in a dozen wagons loaded with buffaloed he had killed. From that day he was known as "Buffalo Bill," a title which he made renowned the world over and which is carved on his tomb at the summit of Pike's Peak. This buffalo hunting incident is accurately pictured in The Iron Horse.

Too Tired To Go Out Nights? Beware of Chronic Fatigue

Thousands of men and women think at it is because they work too hard at they are "all-in" every evening—o tired to go out to a show, or to ay with their children—when in the eat majority of cases the real cause f their weak, worn-out feeling is that hey are victims of chronic fatigue.

Don't confuse chronic fatigue with the "healthy" fatigue you feel after vigorous exercise. Chronic fatigue comes from within. Your organs and muscles have become debilitated due to lack of sufficient organic iron in your blood.

To conquer chronic fatigue you must strengthen your system by restoring this organic iron to your blood. But don't take the older mineral iron medicines which many doctors now say do little good. Take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the iron in your blood and like that in spinach and lentils. Unlike ordinary mineral iron it will not injure the teeth or disturb the stomach, but is promptly assimilated.

Take Nuxated Iron for just 2 weeks and you'll be astonished how that miserable tired feeling vanishes, and you feel strong and better in every way. Money back if not improved. At all good druggists.

Feel Splendid! Nicest Laxative, "Cascarets" 10c

Don't stay bedachy, dizzy, bilious, constipated, sick!

One or two pleasant candy-like "Cascarets" taken any time will mildly stimulate your liver and start your bowels. Then you will both look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed. Your head will be clear, stomach sweet, tongue pink and your skin rosy.

Because "Cascarets" never gripe or sicken, it has become the largest selling laxative in the world.

Directions for men, women, children on each box—any drugstore.

TODAY'S EVENTS

Seventy-five years ago today died Richard M. Johnson, the only man ever elected vice president by vote of the senate.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Thanksgiving Day Appeal

A Thanksgiving day appeal from the family welfare department of the United Workers is made as follows by Elizabeth Selden:

The grand old holiday is almost here, there is something in the air that tells us, in the jubilant shouts of children along the street. It is in the conversation of the older members of the families. The great question now is what shall we do on Thanksgiving day? and also what shall we have for Thanksgiving dinner?

For many a household these questions are answered in the jolliest possible way and not an anxious thought enters in to mar the harmony and good cheer.

In this state of things true of every family? of every home? Alas! no—there are families and homes in our very midst, where there can be no such jollity, no such happy celebrations; unless you and I see to it that the fine women who make it their business to look into this matter and to find out just where these friends and neighbors of ours are, who will have no giving of thanks—no rejoicing, if the good things are not systematically supplied by them; unless, let me repeat, we see to it that these women are amply provided with the necessary money to do what is needed.

Shall we not make it possible to secure a real treat, a generous feast, on this glad day, so that every heart may indeed swell with thanksgiving for the kind and helping hands stretched out to them in love. Shall we not put into these trained hands one hundred dollars for the meat and other things they will need? Don't let's strint them as has come to my attention from time to time that the query is sometimes raised in the minds of those we ask to help us at this time. Hasn't the United Workers enough money to supply every needy family with a good Thanksgiving dinner without any soliciting for it?

And in answer I would like to say that there is a principle involved right here which seems to me most praiseworthy. There are countless ways for the United Workers to spend this appropriated money, cases of poverty, sickness and charity of all kinds. And they feel that they ought not to draw from these sums for Thanksgiving dinners.

Then there seems to me to be another side of the question, will not each one of us be more truly thankful, and happier, and appreciate our own blessings more if we give to them that have not what God in His mercy has bestowed upon us. Did not the dear Lord intend that we should share our good things with those who have less?

All contributions sent to 9 Washington St. Care Miss Corcoran.

Palace Theatre

The Rose Marie Revue one of the greatest aggregations of entertainers in vaudeville and MadETAOINWHR scientific wonder of the world are the two headliners on the vaudeville bill at the Palace today, Friday and Saturday.

The Rose Marie Revue consists of nine pretty girls and two boys. The Charleston, the Ocean Roll and all the latest in modern dancing. A symphonic jazz band soloist—a saxophone sextet, special scenery, beautiful gowns on pretty girls makes this one of the choicest offerings in vaudeville. It's a complete show in itself, but the management desiring to end up its anniversary week with a glorious finish is offering another headline attraction in Hadji Ali called the ninth scientific wonder of the world. Hadji Ali will appear before the leading doctors of Norwich today and will astonish and dumbfound them the same as he has the leaders in the medical profession in this country and Europe. He drinks one hundred glasses of water—swallows thirty pecan nuts, four silk handkerchiefs, a pint of kerosene, lights the kerosene, puts it out with the water and in fact does so many surprising stunts that he has the audience speechless with amazement all the while he is on the stage. Carter and Cornish a pair of fast steppers, who have been with a number of Broadway shows, Storr, Garron and Chris fill out an unusually fine bill.

"The Best People," a Sidney Olcott production for Paramount featuring Warner Baxter, Esther Ralston and Kathlyn Williams, a screen version of the Broadway stage hit by that name, is the feature at the Palace theatre, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The story, written for the screen by Bernard McConville, answers the question, "Who are the 'best people'? Chauffeurs and chorus girls or the children of the rich?" According to the picture the former have far more brains and better morals than do millionaire's families.

"The Best People" portrays a rich New York family horrified because the son and daughter want to marry a chorus girl and a chauffeur but finally, through a series of laughable and thrilling complications, put in the unique position of being forced to beg the young fellow and girl to marry into the aristocratic family.

Laughs, scenes of New York life and novel marriage complications make this story a very entertaining one it is full of life, color, swift pace, pretty girls and wonderful comedy situations.

EX-GOV. LAKE TESTIFIES IN SPENCER DIVORCE CASE

HARTFORD, Nov. 18—(A. P.)—Ex-Governor Everett J. Lake said that Charles Luther Spencer, Jr., of Suffield, prominent in financial and social circles of the state, "laid down under the burden" of a wife who was mentally ill and did not fight to keep her out of a sanitarium, when he was called upon to testify in the superior court before Judge Simpson today on behalf of his wife's first cousin, Corinne Sykes Spencer, to Rockville, who is suing Spencer for divorce on the ground of intolerable cruelty. The case will be resumed tomorrow.

His statement was made on cross examination by Hugh M. Alcorn, who is representing Spencer, and was led up to by the following abridged report:

"Luther said," he testified, quoting Spencer's overheard remarks in 1924, "I can't stand it any longer. She must be kept in a sanitarium and Dr. Thompson and Dr. McLean say it will be only intermittent visits out?' It was something where he had decided that as far as she was concerned, that he would make no further effort to keep her out, but rather to keep her in."

"That is," said Mr. Alcorn, "it seemed it was almost the talk of despair where he said he couldn't stand it?"

"Yes."

"Luther didn't pretend to know anything about it. He was quoting—

"Except that he said, 'we are going to keep her there.' And I don't think any husband should put the 'we' into it. He should fight to keep her out."

"You don't think he ought to fight the doctors, do you?" asked Mr. Alcorn.

"I would fight any doctor who said she was hopelessly insane when she appeared as well as Corinne did," declared the ex-governor. "I wouldn't let any doctor commit my wife to an insane asylum. I would take his advice until he told me her case was hopeless and then I would get somebody else. I wouldn't lay down under the burden."

"Then you think Luther laid down on the burden?"

"I do," said the ex-governor emphatically.

COMMITTEE TO APPLY THE 1921 INHERITANCE TAX RATE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—(A. P.)—The house ways and means committee moved today to nullify the increased inheritance tax rates provided by the 1924 revenue law by making the lower rates of the 1921 law apply on all estate settlements from the time the 1924 rates became effective until the modified rates proposed in the new revenue bill it is writing become law.

Under this plan, the government would return to taxpayers the difference between the higher 1924 rates and the 1921 levies on settlements already made under the last act. In addition, the 25 per cent. credit allowed in the 1924 inheritance tax section for payments made on state inheritance taxes would be the 25 per cent. credit allowed in the 1924 inheritance tax section for payments made on state inheritance taxes would be retained.

With the later provision retained Chairman Green estimated that lower taxes actually would be paid on estates of those who have dies since the 1924 act became law, June 2, 1924. Than under either the 1921 act or the proposed new act, in which the committee has cut the maximum rate from 40 to 20 per cent., and increased the state tax allowance to $0 per cent. how much the government will have to refund under the provision agreed to today is problematical, some committee members estimates the amount at several million dollars.

BUTLER OPENS THE REP. CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGN

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Nov. 18.—(AP)—A call for militant crusaders who will preach the faiths and principles of the republican national committee in an address formally opening the 1926 congressional campaign.

"The elections of next year are of vital importance," he declared. "On their final outcome will largely depend the ability of the president to carry out the program which the people of the nation have endorsed by an overwhelming majority. We must fight for victory.

"We can truthfully say, confidently say, the republican party is united, courageous and looking forward to new victories. We can also say that the democratic party is no nearer united in thought and purpose than it was on the occasion of their last national convention in New York city."

Charging that the democratic party already is endeavoring to set on foot "a warfare of investigating charges and scurrilous attacks similar to what it has heretofore attempted," Senator Butler declared the people will not be fooled: That it "will all end as it did a year ago."

One of the important readjustments within the republican party, he added, must be a more general understanding and offer all we are only republican members, not the owners of party and that we offer membership in a going and growing concern; that we know neither class, creed nor race; that we stand for equal opportunities for all and will fight those who seek to destroy that right."

FUGITIVE AGREES TO RETURN TO WORCESTER

HARTFORD, Nov. 18.—(A. P.)—Charles T. Sullivan, 19, arrested here today for the Worcester, Mass., police as a fugitive agreed tonight to return to Worcester without extradition proceedings. Sullivan is wanted by the Massachusetts police on charges of assault with intent to kill and robbery while armed, in connection with the hold-up and shooting of Adolph Ossens, Worcester restaurant proprietor, on the night of December 9, 1924.

A small scar under his shoulder may win Sullivan's release or conviction when he is tried. The Massachusetts authorities will claim that the scar resulted from a bullet wound received from a policeman while fleeing from the scene of the hold-up. Sullivan will claim that the scar resulted from a lung operation performed some years ago following pleurisy.

FREE GARAGE PARKING BY 90 BOSTON RETAIL STORES

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Free garage parking will be given customers of ninety Boston retail stores, members of the retail board of the Boston chamber fo commerce, it was announced today. The plan, said to be the first of its kind ever undertaken by a group of merchants in any American city, will be placed in operation Friday.

The privilege will be extended to customers of the stores participating in the plan between the hours of 9 and 11 o'clock in the forenoon. In order to be eligible for free service customers will be required to show sales slips or other records of purchases made on the day on which they desire to park ther cars.

SEVEN NAT'L HIGHWAY ROUTES APPROVED

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—(A. P.)—Seven national highway routes connecting New England with the remainder of the nation and Canada have been approved by the United States department of agriculture, William F. Williams, Massachusetts commissioner of public works announced today.

Rout 1, runs from Fort Kent, Me., to Miami, Florida, over the Newburyport turnpike. Route No. 2 connects Houlton, Me., and Banners Ferry, Idaho. Route 3 runs from Colebrook, N. H., near the Canadian line, to Lowell, Mass., and Boston. Route 4 stretches from Portsmouth, N. H., to Fort Edward, N. Y. Route 5 runs from the Canadian line at Newport, Vt., to New Haven, Conn. Route 6 is from Provincetown, Mass., to Brewster, N. Y. Route 7 connects St. Albans, Vt., and Mt. Vernon, N. Y.,

TO ARM PICKED CITIZENS TO COPE WITH BANDITS

SAUGUS, Mass., Nov. 18.—(A. P.)—Because he feels that it would destroy the enthusiasm of any bandits who might fel inclined to operate in Saugus, Nelson C. F. Pratt, chairman of the board of selectmen, has formulated plans for arming 100 picked citizens. Mr. Pratt proposes to equip the citizens with revolvers and have them patrol the streets, especially at night when stores are closing for the day. The board of selectmen will take up consideration of the proposition at a meeting next Monday night. Mr. Pratt points to numerous breaks of late, several attempted hold-ups and a hold-up and shooting on a street car in nearby Lynn.

LEGAL NOTICES.

DISTRICT OF COLCHESTER, ss. Court of Probate, November 18th, 1925. Estate of Joseph Bulkin, late of Colchester, in said District, deceased.

The Administrators of said Estate having made written application to this Court for an order to sell the real estate of said deceased situated in said town of Colchester as per application on file more fully appears, it is ORDERED—That said application be heard and determined at the Probate Office in Colchester, in said District, on the 27th day of November, A. D. 1925, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and that notice be given of the pendency of said application and of the time and place of hearing thereon, by publishing the same once in some newspaper having a circulation in said District.

JOHN CONDREN, Judge.

ALEXANDER JORDAN OF THE Town of Norwich, Connecticut, doing Business under the name and style of J. C. North & Company vs. James F. Sheldon. Order of Notice.

State of Connecticut, County of New London, Norwich, October 31, 1925.

Upon the complaint of the said Alexander Jordan claiming for reasons therein set forth damages in the sum of $100, now pending returnable on the 15th day of September, 1925, before Albert J. Bailey, Esq., a Justice of the Peace in and for said County.

It appearing to and being found by the subscribing authority that the said defendant was not an inhabitant or resident of this state at the commencement of said action, and has not appeared and answered thereto;

It is therefore ordered, that notice of the pendency of said complaint be given said defendant by publishing this order in The Norwich Bulletin, a newspaper printed in the Town of Norwich, County of New London and State of Connecticut, two days successively, commencing on or before the 13th day of November, 1925.

ALBERT J. BAILEY,
Justice of the Peace for New London County.

AT A COURT OF PROBATE HELD at Norwich, within and for the District of Norwich, on the 14th day of November, A. D. 1925.

Present, NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.

Estate of Anna Dumbrosell, late of Norwich, in said District, deceased.

Ordered, That the Administrator cite the creditors of said deceased to bring in their claims against said estate within six months from this date, by posting a notice to that effect, together with a copy of this order on the sign-post nearest to the place where said deceased last dwelt, and in the same town, and by publishing the same once in a newspaper having a circulation in said district, and make return to this Court.

NELSON J. AYLING, Judge.

The above and foregoing is a true copy of record.

Attest, HELEN M. DRESCHER, Clerk.

NOTICE

All creditors of said deceased are hereby notified to present their claims against said estate to the undersigned at R. F. D. No. 2, Norwich Town, Conn., within the time limited in the above and foregoing order.

JOHN A. MACHT,
Administrator.

ANNUAL INSURANCE DAY OBSERVE DIN HARTFORD

HARTFORD, Nov. 18—Hundreds of insurance men from all parts of the state are here today for the observance of Connecticut's second annual Insurance day. The Connecticut Association of Insurance Agents, the Connecticut Field club, Connecticut Life Underwriters association, and the Insurance Companies of Hartford are cooperating in the program.

The big group conferences were held this morning, one for life underwriters and the other for fire, casualty and surety agents. Governor Trumbull and several insurance commissioners from other states spoke at a noon luncheon. There was a joint session this afternoon at which James L. Case of Norwich, chairman of the general committee on insurance day, presided. At a banquet this evening, Donald A. Adams, president of Rotary International, and Congressman Theodore E. Burton of Ohio will be the principal speakers.

LIGHT DEVELOPED FOR DEEP SEA DIVING WORK

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—A new light for use in deep sea diving work, more powerful than any used heretofore, has been developed by the navy for salvaging operations in connection with the raising of the submarine S-51, sunk in collision off Block Island several weeks ago.

COLLAPSE IN STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The spectre of higher federal reserve bank rates cast its shadow over today's stock market and prices collapsed 3 to 15 points under a flood of offerings for both accounts. Total sales of 2,621,800 compared with 3,340,600 in the record-breaking session of Nov. 10, which followed the raising of the Boston federal reserve bank rediscount rate from 3 1-2 to 4 per cent.

Speculative belief that the speech in Boston last night of A. C. Miller, federal reserve board member, warning against the granting of federal reserve credit facilities on too easy terms, was officially inspired, influenced the selling movement which embraced practically the entire list. The break came after an early period of firmness during which speculators for the advance endeavored to restore speculative confidence on the long side by bidding up a selected list of motors and specialties.

The reaction took place in the face of several favorable developments. These included the large of the call money rate, the declaration of a 50 per cent. stock dividend on Mack Trucks common, the announcement that Chrysler motor would be split up on a 4 for 1 basis, publication of optimistic steel trade reviews and reports of another sharp decrease in crude oil production last week.

Special pressure was directed against the motor shares, several of which broke through the low levels recorded in last Tuesday's drastic decline. Chrysler, which recently established a record high of 253, dropped from 217 to 196 3-4 and then rallied to 200 for a net loss of 12 1-2 points on the day. Hudson dropped over 40 points below its recent high to 97 1-4, closing slightly above a net decline of 3 3-8 at 126 1-4 after selling as low as 125 1-2.

Standard industrials also were hard hit. American Can broke from 254 1-2 to 242 and then rallied to 244 for a net loss of 9 5-8. Baldwin dropped over three points to 122 1-8. United States Steel common sank to 128 1-8, or five points below its earlier high, and then rallied to 129 for a net loss of 2 1-2.

Other outstanding weak spots in the industrial group included Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies, Chicago Pneumatic Tool, Commercial Solvents "B," Du Pont, Fairbanks-Morse, Fisher Body, General Electric, Pressed Steel Car, Sears-Roebuck, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, U. S. Rubber, Westinghouse Air Brake, Woolworth and Youngstown Sheet and Tube, all off three to 10 points.

Mack Trucks closed five points lower at 218, after having sold down to 210, despite the declaration of the stock dividend.

American Brake Shoe showed outstanding independent strength, climbing over six points to a new high record at 150 1-4. Among the few other issues to move against the downward trend were J. I. Case, Cuyamel Fruit, Devoe and Reynolds, Marine preferred and U. S. Industrial Alcohol preferred, all of which closed a point or so higher.

Rails yielded with the industrials, although the declines were not as large as the average of 20 leading issues showing a net loss of less than one point as against 2 3-8 for the average of 20 leading industrials.

Call money renewed at 5 per cent. and then dropped to 4 1-2, closing at the bottom figure. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges were reactionary. Demand sterling dropped nearly a quarter of a cent to around $4.84 1-8; French francs broke 5 points to 3.95 1-2 cents and Italian lire yielded 3 1-2 points to 3.97 cents. Polish sixty closed 50 points to a new low record for the year at 15.20 cents.

TAFTVILLE

Ovide Heroux is exhibiting in the window of the store of George W. Weller on North Third avenue, an ornament made of wood and string, on which stand the miniature figures of men and women, all contained in a glass jug with a narrow neck. The building of the model inside the jug called for a great deal of skill and patience, and as the cork is fastened to the model by a pin, Mr. Heroux is offering a prize to anyone who can remove the cork without breaking the jug.

In speaking of the election of officers of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association which took place recently at Mechanicsville, a New England textile journal says of Alfred R. Boutilier of Occum, "Alfred R. Boutilier, elected one of the vice presidents, is another who has earned his office on the merit of past performances, having been an active member of the executive committee, representing the Totokett Mill since the organization of the association." The issue also carries a picture of Mr. Boutilier.

Charles Massler who has been at the Ponemah house for the past few weeks has left town.

Octave Bousquet of South B street is leaving town for Holyoke, where he has accepted a position.

John Urich of Lisbon is to leave this week for Miami, Florida, where he will spend the winter.

Christopher Krauss and Bernard Krauss of Lisbon are to go to New York this week for a visit with relatives.

A conclave of Castle Perilous, K. O. K. A. was held Wednesday evening in the vestry of the Taftville Congregational church, with a social hour in the recreation rooms in the basement following the business session.

"California Fig Syrup"

Dependable Laxative for Sick Baby or Child

Hurry Mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" now will thoroughly clean the little bowels and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Even if cross, feverish, bilious, constipated or full of cold, children love its pleasant taste.

Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.

WELCOME HOME TO FR. BELLEROSE WITH PURSE FROM TAFTVILLE PARISH

Returning Wednesday from three months of absence while he was visiting Rome for the holy year and traveling in Europe, Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of Sacred Heart church at Taftville, was given an impressive demonstration of the love and affection that his parish feels for him and their joy at his return. A welcome home reception for him was held in the evening in Parish hall which was packed to the doors when Father Bellerose and the company of clergymen who were with him were escorted from the parochial residence to the hall by fifteen representatives of the societies of the parish.

As the orchestra played the procession marched up through the hall and onto the stage where with Father Bellerose were seated Monsignor M. H. May of St. Patrick's church, Rev. W. A. Keefe of St. Mary's Memorial church) Rev. F. R. H. Dessureault of Occum, Rev. Henri Chagnon and Rev. John Malley of Taftville.

REV. U. O. BELLEROSE

Music by a chorus was followed by brief but cordial words of welcome from Father Chagnon, assistant pastor of Sacred Heart church, and John B. Benoit, who was the chairman of the evening. An orchestra number was followed by the welcome address from Father Dessureault, who spoke in French, and this was followed by a well rendered soprano solo by Miss Elizabeth Corcoran.

Father Keefe spoke the sentiments of the audience in welcoming Father Bellerose home, when he said that Taftville people were united in their rejoicing at the safe and happy return of their pastor. The speaker referred to his own association over 23 years ago in parish work with Father Bellerose, and spoke the latter's achievements in building the school at Wauregan, the church at Baltic and the church at Taftville. All join in gratitude for these many years of fruitful labor, and Taftville is to be congratulated for the wonderful spirit of generosity, harmony and unity that has always marked that community. It is a message of love, the speaker said, that Father Bellerose is bringing from Pope Pius XI to the parish, and he expressed the hope that the people would listen to the message of Father Bellerose, not only now but for the many years in which he hoped that the pastor would continue to live and walk and labor there.

A tenor solo by William T. Delaney and a violin solo by Miss Marsan, both of which were applauded, was followed by two presentation speeches, one in French by Omer Pellier and the other in English by John Daly. As Mr. Daly concluded, four little children advanced up the aisle, the first two carrying a beautiful basket of roses and the second a silver tray upon which lay a check for $1,700 which they presented to Father Bellerose, the welcome home gift from the parish.

Father Bellerose responded with warm words of appreciation for the gift, speaking first in French and then in English. He said that no one could be any happier about his return than he was himself, to be again in Taftville and with the people he loved, and with whom he hoped to continue his labors for many years. He was glad to assure his people that a physician whom he had consulted in Europe had told him his physical condition was all right and this welcome home was a wonderful medicine to be added to the words of the doctor. The trip he said had been a most happy one, but it was good to be home again with his own people and among the friends he knew.

An orchestra selection concluded the programme while many pressed forward to shake hands with the returned pastor and tell him they were glad to see him.

The children who brought the presentation gift were Alfred White, George Benoit, Ellen Swain and Gloria Larose. The general arrangements for the welcome were in the hands of a committee of which John B. Benoit was chairman, Bryan Hanlon secretary and Archie Molleur treasurer. The stage decorations which were in roses and palms were by Ernst.

Father Bellerose, who reached New York last Friday, went from there to St. Johnsbury, Vt., to visit Father Bastien, the priest with whom he travelled. After several days in Vermont he went to Bristol to visit his mother before returning to Taftville.

PARENT-TEACHERS MET AT POQUETANUCK SCHOOL

About thirty members of the Parent-Teacher association met at the Poquetanuck schoolhouse on Wednesday evening. The meeting opened with the singing of "America." At the business session the monthly reports were read and approved. Mrs. George Mansfield was appointed to take charge of the January meeting. Plans for Christmas were discussed and a committee appointed consisting of Mrs. Elizabeth Beckwith and Mrs. Jane H. Taylor.

Being Armistice Day, the program was of a patrotic nature. A reading, "Your Lad and My Lad," was given by Mrs. Appleton Main; "Our Flag" by Natalie Nagle, followed by "The Star Spangled Banner."

"Cooperation between the Home and the School," the address of the evening, was given by Miss Kingberger, the school nurse. An informal discussion of health followed. The closing number was "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Fuller and Miss Flynn.

THREE SUITS BROUGHT AGAINST GROCERY CO.

The Golden Rule Grocery store, which has been in the Central building on Broadway and which has filed a petition in bankruptcy, has been made the defendant in three suits which are returnable in the common pleas court. The papers have been served by Deputy Sheriff George H. Stanton.

James Magafas of St. Louis, Mo. sues for $1,900 on the common counts, the Levine Bros. Fruit Co. of this city sues for a bill of $700, and William H. Murphy, owner of the Central building, brings suit for $175 for the rent of the store against Michael and Fotio Johns, doing business as the Golden Rule Grocery Co., Inc.

NEW LONDON K. OF C. COUNCIL MAY HAVE $150,000 HOME

Plans for a new K. of C. home at New London, to cost $150,000 are under consideration by officers of Seaside Knights of Columbus Corporation of that city. Seaside council, No. 37, has outgrown its present quarters on Huntington street, and the order feels the need of a large building. Tentative plans have in view a big auditorium and gymnasium. The directors are William C. Fox, president; Dr. William J. Murray, secretary; Thomas C. Dillon, Henry J. Kennedy and David P. Condon.

Camden Due Today

U. S. S. Camden, mothership for submarines of the North Atlantic division and flagship of Rear Admiral Christie, is due to arrive at the Submarine Base today (Thursday) from Boston. The Camden is one of few navy ships bearing the coveted "E" on her stack for efficiency. She is a converted German liner seized during the war. Her complement of officers and men are expected to be in port for Thanksgiving.

SAYBROOK SUMMER HOME TOTAL LOSS BY FIRE

A large single family house at Saybrook Heights, Saybrook, the summer residence of Daniel J. Matroni, of Springfield, Mass., was totally destroyed by fire that started shortly before 2:30 o'clock Wednesday morning. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss was approximately $10,000. The entire building, completely furnished, was reduced to a heap of charred timbers and ashes.

The fire was discovered by James J. Cummings also of Saybrook Heights. He immediately turned in an alarm which brought a hurried response from Chemical Engine company. When the firemen arrived at the scene, the flames had burst through the roof. The firemen centered their efforts upon preventing the spread of the fire to other buildings. The garage near the house, which was in danger from the start, was saved.

There had been no one in the house since last Sunday night and no possible cause for the fire could be given Wednesday. It is understood that the loss is completely covered by insurance.

Common Pleas Cases Settled

Several cases were disposed of in the court of common pleas before Judge Charles Waller in New London, Wednesday.

The case of J. L. St. Germain against George Marks was settled out of court. The case involved rent alleged to be due the plaintiff and the defendant entered a counter claim for certain amount claimed for services in keeping the lawn cut and other jobs.

The case of James Matassa against Peter Reytar was withdrawn. The case of S. J. Lawson against Morris B. Spector went off as did the case of the Cottrell Lumber Co., against George W. Woodmansee.

A safety beacon light on Park's Hill, Rockville, has just been put in operation. Mayor Cameron and city officials inspected the beacon Tuesday and estimated it could be seen for twenty miles. The light is of 700 candle power and is set on a tower fifty feet high.

AMERICAN LEGION PLAY AGAIN FINELY GIVEN

Princess Bonnie, a John B. Rogers production, and staged under the auspices of Robert C. Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion, scored another success Wednesday evening at the Broadway theatre at its second performance before a house filled to capacity. The same fine acting on the part of principals and cast, which ranked Princess Bonnie among the best amateur productions staged in Norwich, at its first run on Tuesday evening was noticeable to even a greater degree Wednesday night. The song numbers were beautifully rendered and the soloists were called back time and again by an audience which was captivated by the pleasing song hits of the production.

Group numbers were admirably enacted and the chorus work was of the highest type, being in perfect accord with the song numbers, while the many difficult dance numbers were executed in a manner which called for repeated encores.

As in the opening performance, Mabel C. Buckingham, as Princess Bonnie, displayed her wonderful ability to win her audience, her dramatization of the difficult role of the pretty girl about to marry against her will having much to do with the success of the production. Her charming voice in her several solo numbers was especially pleasing, Dreaming of Love, and Indian Love Call, being two numbers rendered in a manner evoking spontaneous applause from a delighted audience.

Miss Eunice B. Taft, in the role of Kitty Clover, the belle of the village, again won instant favor with her audience, her solo and dance numbers being given with expression and charm which are always noticeable in all her appearances before the public.

As Roy Sterling, lover of Bonnie, the choice of J. Warren Kane could not have been improved upon. At home upon the stage and possessing a manner which gets across the footlights, aided by a voice of remarkable clearness, his appearance was looked forward to by the entire house. One of his feature numbers, You Never Lose a Little Fish, sung with Shrimps (William Mitchell), was a hit of the show, the audience demanding encores in this number several times before allowing the play to continue.

MYRA FRINK WARD
Aunt Crabbe Tarpaulin

Frank Crowell playing the part of Captain Tarpaulin, handled his role in a pleasing manner, his character impersonation being of the highest type.

The part of Auntie Crabbe Tarpaulin was safe in the person of Myra Frink Ward, who played this part in the professional manner which was speedily recognized and appreciated.

As Admiral Pomposo, Bonnie's uncle, the selection of Herbert McNeely was a happy choice. Possessing a delightful baritone voice Mr. McNeely put over his prize song, I Am the

HERBERT McNEELY
Admiral Pomposo

Great Pomposo, in a clever manner. In the role of Pomposo he was ably supported by Mary Prodell, as Donna Pomposo, Miss Prodell, with her charming voice and manner, won instant favor in her several appearances and bids fair to become even better known in local productions.

"Billie" Mitchell, playing the comedy role of Shrimps, was a hit. "Billy" has always been good on the stage, but as Shrimps he had a real chance to do his stuff, and, indeed it. His song numbers were also well rendered.

As Capt. Surf, the village fisherman, Harry Bowers both looked and acted the part, while Walter LaFontaine, as

HARRY BOWERS
Capt. Surf

Count Fulsetti, carried his part in the manner of the professional, his appearances being numerous and eagerly awaited by the audience.

The entire cast was well trained and enacted their parts with entire acceptance. That their work was noted by the audience was demonstrated time and again as encores were called for.

The production was of unusually high order for local talent and Norwich is fortunate to possess so many young people capable of taking the parts in such a large production.

WILL CHARGE JURY IN SUIT FOR $35,000

Judge C. L. Avery will charge the jury in the superior court when court opens this (Thursday) morning in the trial of the $35,000 suit of Miss Johanna Keating of 312 Huntington street, New London, against the city of New London for the injuries she received in breaking her hip in a fall on Huntington street on the night of Feb. 16, 1923.

The evidence in the case was concluded about noon on Wednesday and the afternoon was spent in the arguments by counsel, Perry Hollandersky opening for the plaintiff, Frank L. McGuire and Charles B. Whittlesey following in order for the defendant city and Arthur M. Brown closing for the plaintiff. Judge Avery then adjourned court until 10 o'clock this (Thursday) morning.

In the arguments for both sides much stress was placed upon the question of whether or not the sidewalk where Miss Keating fell had been sanded by the city. Attorneys for the city pointed out from the evidence that several thousands dollars had been spent by the city in the month of February, 1923 for taking care of snow and sanding in the city, while attorneys for the defendant countered this by arguing that no testimony had been introduced by the city to show that sand had been put on Huntington street, while there were four or five witnesses for the plaintiff who testified that there had been no sand on the street for a week before the accident and that there was no sand there when Miss Keating fell.

Joseph Cole, who is head of the linen department in a New London department store, was presented by the defense as a feature witness in the trial Wednesday.

Cole upon the witness stand stated that as he was on his way home on the night of Feb. 16, 1923, the night in which Miss Keating was alleged to have fallen upon the sidewalk between the Underhill and Hazard house, he found Miss Keating standing in the gutter and that she was not lying helpless upon the sidewalk as had been testified to previously. He stated that he with the aid of another man helped her into the house and that she walked across the street but he did not carry her as was testified to Tuesday.

Thomas Ashcraft testified Tuesday that it was he and Cole who formed a chair with their hands and carried Miss Keating into her home.

Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky for the plaintiff, asked Cole if he did not say in Attorney Hollandersky's office that the walk was in an icy and dangerous condition. The witness denied that he did and also denied several other things which Attorney Brown alleged that he said at the time.

Mrs. Frances Hazard, in front of whose house Miss Keating fell said that she had put ashes on the walk, the day of the accident and Mr. Hazard, who said that he was totally blind, testified to having heard his wife go out with a can of ashes.

Mrs. Underhill, wife of the late Dr. J. E. Underhill, also testified that, when her husband was living, he was never negligent in keeping his sidewalk clean, and that it was clean on the night of the accident.

Courtland R. Darrow, superintendent of streets, read a comprehensive report regarding the sanding of sidewalks, and said that Broad, State, Huntington and Williams streets were always kept sanded. He testified that the place where Miss Keating was alleged to have fallen had sand upon it on the night in question.

Herbert G. Huntley, city treasurer, gave a report of the various amounts expended in keeping the sidewalks in safe condition.

In rebuttal the defense attorneys called several witnesses who attended the conference in Attorney Hollandersky's office. Their testimony in rebuttal tended to show that what Mr. Cole said at the conference was different from what he testified to in court.

Girls' Missionary Rally

A girls' rally of the eastern Connecticut branch of Missions, will be held in the Norwich Town chapel on Friday, the 20th., at six o'clock. Each girl is expected to carry with her a basket supper. Hot drinks are to be served by the hostesses of the entertaining church. After the supper there will be singing of camp songs.

Miss Woodberry and Miss Helen Frances Smith, both splendid speakers, will tell of the work of missions at home and abroad.

MAKE LIFE WORTH LIVING

Don't go around feeling tired, lacking in energy and strength, because your kidneys are not working properly. The use of FOLEY PILLS, a diuretic stimulant for the kidneys, will flush your kidneys, remove injurious waste matter and bring the kidneys back to a normal, active condition. "Your FOLEY PILLS are the only thing I ever got to do me any good," writes Samuel Brenner, Alexandria, Ind. Lee & Osgood.

TELEPHONE GIRL NOW WELL

Suffered Two Years, Relieved by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Marshalltown, Iowa. — "At the time I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a telephone operator and had been suffering for two years with bearing-down pains and cramps in my legs so I could scarcely walk. At times I could not do any kind of work on account of my trouble. My mother was taking the medicine for the Change of Life and she thought it would help me and it did. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills. I recommend your medicines to my friends and I will answer all letters asking about them." — Mrs. P. E. EVERTS, Box 149, Marshalltown, Ia.

Mrs. Norton's Experience

"Before I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was weak and nervous, and had such terrible dizzy spells that I could not stand some days. I had no appetite, was restless at night and felt all run-down. My husband got me a bottle of the Vegetable Compound and I am surprised at the results after taking it." — Mrs. CLARENCE S. NATIVE OF POMFRET DIES IN MOODUS, AGED 81

John C. Hicks, 81, one of the oldest residents in Moodus, died at his home in Leesville Saturday night. He had been in poor health with heart trouble for a long time. He was born in Pomfret, but had lived in Moodus for more than fifty years. For some years he with his brothers, conducted restaurants in Waterbury, Meriden and Hartford. During the gold fever in the Klondike he went to Alaska. On his return he settled in Leesville, where he conducted a summer hotel. Mr. Hicks married Miss Augusta Murkett, of Moodus, who survives him. He also leaves two sons, Walter Hicks, of Wethersfield, and Ray C. Hicks, of Orange, N. J., and a sister, Mrs. Arthur Merrill, of Hartford.

The funeral service, held at his home Monday afternoon, was conducted by Rev. John R. Miller, pastor of the Methodist church. Mr. Hicks was a member of Columbia lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., of East Haddam, and the members conducted their ritual at the grave.

NORWICH TOWN

The Home Missionary society of the First Congregational church, is to unite Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Frank E. Sterry of Lee avenue. A Christmas box will be packed to send to Miss Ruth Beebe of Athens, Alabama. The box will contain gifts for Miss Beebe's pupils at Trinity school, and there also will be several personal gifts for Miss Beebe.

Under the auspices of the Young People's secretaries of the Eastern Connecticut Branch of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, Mrs. William N. Zumbro, of Norwich, Miss Helen Eadie and Miss Gertrude Ladd of Hanover, there is to be a Young Woman's Rally Friday evening in the chapel of the First Congregational church.

This rally for both home and foreign missions, is for the older girls of the Eastern Connecticut churches. There is to be a basket luncheon at six o'clock. Speaking will begin at seven o'clock. Miss Miriam Woodbury, who is engaged in home missionary work will speak on that subject in connection with the Congregational Home Missionary society.

Miss Helen Frances Smith, connected with the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions in Boston, will give a talk on Foreign Missions.

It is considered fortunate to secure these speakers, who are coming to this church through the courtesy of these secretaries, in conjunction with the missionary and social committees of the Young People's Christian Endeavor society, which held a preliminary meeting Friday evening to make arrangements for this meeting.

Rev. Herman Hunsinger, pastor of the German Lutheran church, Norwich, accompanied by that church choir, will have charge of the religious service at the Sheltering Arms Sunday afternoon.

The Every Member Canvass of the First Congregational church is to take place Sunday afternoon, November 22, from 1.30 to 6.30 o'clock. Letters have been in circulation this week among the members of the parish, requesting them to have pledge cards filled out and ready for the canvassers, when they call at the various homes throughout the town. The letters read: "Financially this church is solvent, thanks to you, generous contributions throughout the year and to the legacies of those who lived in other days and whose love for the old church is immortal. We gratefully record a legacy of $2,000, now available provided in the will of Mrs. Sarah J. Tibbals, of New Haven. Also a bequest of $100 from Mrs. H. Elima Smith, of Norwich Town. We have expended approximately $400 on permanent improvements in the chapel during 1925. A new furnace will be needed in the chapel building during the coming year.

"Let us not forget that we maintain our home church not alone to stimulate religious impulses in our hearts, but to furnish a home base from which to spread the Gospel message to the ends of the earth.

"Therefore the pledge cards enclosed in the letters provide eportunity for giving also to the larger work.

"Every contribution makes an addition to the sum total. It does more, it shows the interest of the contributor in the things which the church is trying to do.

"In behalf of the church, fraternally yours, the committee on finance and missions."

The church calendars, distributed a year ago, are to be collected by the visitors Sunday afternoon.

Joint-Ease

COOLIDGE WARNS THAT GOVERNMENT SHOULD NOT CONFLICT WITH BUSINESS

President Tells Members of New York Chamber of Commerce That the Entry of the Government Into Fields of Business Would Nullify Competition, Close the Door of Opportunity and Result in Monopoly—Declares Welfare of the Country Would Be Advanced by a Better Knowledge By Both Parties of the Multifold Problems With Which Each Has to Deal—President Was Buoyed Up By News of Improvement in Condition of His Father.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—President Coolidge was in New York tonight to deliver an address at the 137th annual banquet of the state Chamber of Commerce.

Prepared to discuss the relation of business with government foreign debts, the world court issue and kindred subjects, the president arrived here early in the afternoon and went to the Waldorf-Astoria before receiving a limited number of friends and attending the dinner.

The banquet, held in the hotel, afforded the executive the first opportunity in more than a year to deliver a speech in the metropolis of the nation.

Reassured by reports from Plymouth, Vt., that there was a decided improvement in the condition of his father, Colonel John C. Coolidge, the president planned to return to Washington after his address. Major James F. Coupal, the white house physician, who accompanied him, however, made arrangements to go to Plymouth from here, chiefly to arrange for the colonel to go to Washington, if his condition permits, for the winter.

On his arrival here the president was met at Pennsylvania station by a delegation of New York Chamber of Commerce officials headed by F. H. Ecker, president of the organization. Police had difficulty holding back the throng that sought to get a glimpse of the executive as he passed through the station concourse, through the streets in an automobile and through the Waldorf-Astoria lobby.

After his customary afternoon nap the president received a number of friends who called to pay their respects. They included Charles D. Hilles, republican national committeeman from New York; Frank A. Munsey, newspaper publisher; Thomas W. Lamont, of the firm of J. P. Morgan and company; William A. Prendergast, chairman of the public service commission, Michael Friedsam, of B. Altman & Company; Surrogate John P. O'Brien, and Judge Francis Martin, of the Bronx.

Mr. Coolidge also received, for exchange of greeting, a group interested in crime prevention, headed by Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, and Richard Washburn Child, former ambassador to Italy.

President Coolidge was given an enthusiastic ovation as he entered the banquet hall, crowded with one thousand business men and manufacturers. Mrs. Coolidge who had dined with a few friends, also was greeted with applause when she entered a box, opposite the speakers' table, just before the president began to speak.

COL. COOLIDGE SENDS CONGRATULATIONS TO SON

PLYMOUTH, Vermont, Nov. 19 (A. P.)—Colonel John C. Coolidge, father of the president, tonight transmitted through the Associated Press to the president the following telegram of congratulation on the latter's address in New York city:

"Dear Cal,—

"Just heard you over radio. Congratulations on fine address.

"John C. Coolidge."

CONDITION OF COLONEL COOLIDGE IS IMPROVED

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Nov. 19—(A. P.)—The condition of Col. John C. Coolidge, father of the president, had so far improved today that at 4 o'clock his physician issued the most encouraging statement since his present illness.

The statement, which was issued informally by Dr. Albert N. Cram of Bridgewater, said that although his patient had suffered four attacks of heart block since rising, all had been markedly less severe than those of any day since Sunday when he was first taken ill.

Dr. Cram also announced that Col. Coolidge's condition was not "immediately serious." Heretofore his statements have characterized the situation as "serious" but throughout he has insisted there have been no alarming symptoms.

He also made known that he considered hope for ultimate improvement better than any time this week. Col. Coolidge, he added, was considerably cheered and and looked forward eagerly to hearing President Coolidge speak by radio later in the night.

ADDRESS MADE BY PRESIDENT COOLIDGE

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (AP)—Interpreting his attitude toward business, President Coolidge in an address tonight at the annual banquet of the New York State Chamber of Commerce, appealed for a better and more sympathetic understanding by the government of the commercial world's problems and by business men of the affairs of government.

"When government enters the field of business with its great resources," he said, "it has a tendency to extravagance and inefficiency, but having the power to crush all competitors, likewise closes the door of opportunity and results in monopoly."

During his speech the president reiterated his belief that there must be continued effort toward government economy and efficiency with resulting tax reduction; expressed the view that no permanent stabilization of European finances and currency can be accomplished without a definite adjustment of the debts owed by various nations abroad to the United States, and advocated anew American adhesion to the World Court protocol.

Declaring that the American forefathers were wise in making Washington the political center of the nation, leaving New York to develop as the business metropolis, Mr. Coolidge said that this arrangement, however, has resulted in one important disadvantage—"the possibility that otherwise business and government might have had a better understanding of each other and been less likely to develop mutual misapprehensions and suspicions."

"If a contest could be held to determine how much those who are really prominent in our government life know about business and how much those who are really prominent in our business life know about government," continued the president, "it is my firm conviction that the prize would be awarded to those who are in government life. This is as it ought to be."

FURTHER TESTIMONY IN THE MACRI MURDER CASE

LITCHFIELD, Nov. 19.—(A. P.)—The altercation on the Wooster street bridge between Olympia Macri and the man she shot two weeks later in the lobby of the Palace theater in New Haven last February was again described by two witnesses in the Litchfield county superior court here today in the second trial of the girl on a charge of murder.

Only five witnesses testified for the state today, the thirteenth of the retrial. Two who testified at the forenoon session were eye-witnesses to the shooting on the sidewalk in front of the theatre after Bagnano had been chased from within the lobby by Olympia.

Two this afternoon described the Wooster street incident and the fifth, Henry P. Clark, captain of traffic of the New Haven police department, told of having sent the fatally wounded man to the hospital and having taken the four men who accompanied the body from downtown to the hospital to police headquarters.

Carrie Bagnano, widow of the man killed by Miss Macri, was not called today. She had been expected to testify yesterday, but during the afternoon while a witness was describing the quarrel between Olympia and Bagnano two weeks before he was shot, she fainted and was in no condition to take the witness stand.

She did not appear in court today until late in the afternoon. She was accompanied by Mrs. Mary Lombardi, her aunt, and the latter's daughters, Miss Mollie Lombardi and Mrs. Marion Bagnano, all of New Haven. They testified at the first trial.

Litchfield and Litchfield county are apparently becoming more interested in the Macri trial. Two days in succession when the afternoon session opened the court room has been filled and would-be spectators were turned away.

COLLEGE MEN UNPROMISING FOR RAILROAD EXECUTIVES

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—That many railroad officials believe that college men are unpromising candidates for executive positions in transportation companies, is the finding of the committee in charge of the nationwide survey of transportation which is being made by Yale university. Other tentative findings were made public by the committee based on the first ten months of its investigation.

These are summarized in the report as follows: Many railroad officials are either skeptical of the utility of university instruction in transportation, or entertain ideas so vague as to afford little constructive guidance; university instruction in transportation is often of a routine and some times of a mediocre character; scientific experiment is being conducted by many agencies, of which the university is but one, and among which commercial concerns are becoming increasingly important.

Field investigators in the course of the survey interviewed 300 outstanding leaders in the transportation field, visited about 100 transportation agencies, and 20 universities and technical schools. The conclusions ultimately reached will form the basis of future transportation study at Yale.

"There is a widespread expression of feeling among railroad officials," the committee reports, "that college men as a class are unpromising candidates out of which to make executive heads of transportation companies. College men are said not to be 'steady plugers,' are impatient of promotion, and over-rate their value, when green to the company. One railroad president says they are liabilities, not assets, when taken on."

Election to French Academy

PARIS, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Anatole France's chair was the only one really contested in the election today of three members of the French academy, and the elevation of Paul Valery, critic and poet, to France's place among the forty immortals was the most interesting of the day. M. Clemenceau, who has been elected to the Academy but never received, was among the absentees. The Duc de la Force, and Louis Bertrand, the author, were elected on the first ballot to fill the vacancies caused by the death of the Duc D'Haussonville, and Maurice Barres respectively.

"ONE ARM" WOLFE GETS LIFE IMPRISONMENT

MUNCIE, Ind., Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Charles (One Arm) Wolfe was sentenced today to life imprisonment in the Indiana state prison at Michigan City for the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hance near here August 14.

Looking Judge Clarence Dearth squarely in the eye as sentence was pronounced Wolfe repeated the statement he made last night to his mother when the verdict was returned:

"I am not guilty."

The sentence was in line with recommendation of the jury which last night found Wolfe guilty of first degree murder.

Wolfe was indicted jointly with the late George (Dutch) Anderson, in connection with the murder of the Hances.

BELIEVED HIS SPIRITUAL LEADER COULD END WORLD

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Belief that Eugene Richard La Fleche, late spiritual leader of the Mission of the Divine Spirit Colony on Goat Island could have ended the world by raising his hand was expressed today by Adelard Glasson, business head of the colony, who is on trial for conspiracy to steal. Glasson, testifying in his own defense, denied receiving money from Eugene Martel and other complainants who charged they were defrauded by signing an agreement to work for the colony without pay.

Glasson said he never saw La Fleche perform miracles, as other witnesses testified he had, although the two roomed together for more than eight years. He believed, however, in the leader's power to perform them and to end the world.

INDICTED ON CHARGE OF SMUGGLING LIQUOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Indictment charging smuggling and the illegal importation of liquor was returned today against Captain A. B. Grant and his crew of the masted auxiliary schooner Lincoln, which sailed from New Brunswick and was seized by revenue men in the lagoon at Lloyd's Neck, Long Island, in November. The Revenue men charged that Captain Grant cleared from New Bedford, Mass., and took on board at sea a cargo of liquor valued at $40,000. The members of the crew arrested were: Captain Grant, of New Bedford; Joseph Keogh, deck hand, of 203 Princeton street, Boston; Patrick Wuse, deck hand, of 8 Park street, Dorchester, Mass., and Charles Harlow, cook, of New Bedford.

The men will be arraigned in federal court, Brooklyn, tomorrow.

SEVEN FATAL ACCIDENTS IN STATE LAST WEEK

HARTFORD, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—There were eight victims in seven fatal accidents in the state last week, when 392 automobile crashes occurred according to reports made to the motor vehicle department. The fatal accidents were reported from Lebanon, Middletown, Stratford, Hamden, New Britain, Northford and Clinton. Fourteen cities reported 260 of the total number of accidents.

Hartford led all cities with sixty-three; New Haven was second with fifty, and Bridgeport, third with forty-four. Others were as follows: Waterbury, 23; New Britain, 22; New London, 7; Norwich, 10; Norwalk, 3; Greenwich, 7; Stamford, 8; Middletown, 7; Winsted, 3 Meriden, 8, and Danbury, 4.

LINEMAN KILLED WHILE AT WORK IN EAST PROVIDENCE

EAST PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Frank Lavern, of Providence, a lineman employed by the Narragansett Electric Lighting company, was killed while at work at the top of a pole here this afternoon when he touched a wire carrying 2,300 volts. After he was shocked Lavern's body hung from his belt on the pole until fellow workers brought him down, summoned physicians and a priest and obtained respiratory apparatus. After working over him for more than two hours, the men abandoned, and sent for the medical examiner, Dr. Charles B. O'Rourke, who pronounced death due to accidental electrocution.

ADRIFT IN SMALL BOAT FIVE DAYS WITHOUT FOOD

New York, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Three men who had drifted five days without food in a small boat were picked up at sea today by the collier Isaac T. Mann, bound from Portland, Me., to Norfolk, Va.

OBITUARY

John Kearney

NAUGATUCK, Conn. Nov. 19—(AP)—John Kearney, father of Rev. William Kearney, assistant chancellor of the Diocese of Hartford, who is also assistant editor of the Catholic Transcript, and Rev. Michael Kearney, curate at St. Peter's church, New Haven, died while in his sleep last night, at his home in New Street. His wife also survives.

Edward Alexander Powell

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Edward Alexander Powell, 58, father of Colonel E. Alexander Powell, widely known traveler and writer, died here today of a heart attack. Although he had been in ill health for several months, his sudden death was not anticipated.

Mr. Powell had been prominent in the city for half a century. After several years in the nursery business, he added livestock and real estate to his interests.

Charles D. Lawrence of New York was appointed as assistant attorney general.

Asks Discharge of Shenandoah Court

Counsel For Mrs. Lansdowne Dissatisfied With Its Conduct of the Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—As counsel for Mrs. Margaret Ross Lansdowne, Joseph E. Davies asked Secretary Wilbur in a letter sent to him tonight to discharge the Shenandoah court of inquiry of further duties because of the manner in which it conducted the inquiry into the charges brought against its former judge advocate, Captain Paul Foley, by Mrs. Lansdowne.

Mr. Davies added that if the naval secretary "sees fit to approve the conduct of the Shenandoah court of inquiry, in the manner in which it has handled the controversy between Captain Paul Foley and Mrs. Lansdowne," then, as counsel for Mrs. Lansdowne he requested that the secretary direct and order the Shenandoah court to do these two things:

"First, furnish to counsel for Mrs. Lansdowne, a stenographic copy of the testimony of all witnesses heard before it on the question of any controversy of fact as between her and Captain Foley.

"Second, reconvene and recall witnesses whose appearance is requested by counsel for Mrs. Lansdowne and that counsel for Mrs. Lansdowne be permitted to cross-examine such witnesses for the purpose of eliciting all the facts."

"Permit me to say in conclusion," Mr. Davies wrote, "that there are facts which have not been disclosed upon cross examination under oath, which are germaine and pertinent on the question of what influence was brought to bear on Mrs. Lansdowne either not to testify at all or to modify and change her statement."

FOLEY DENIES STATEMENTS MADE BY MRS. LANSDOWNE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—Statements made before the Shenandoah naval court of inquiry by Mrs. Margaret Ross Lansdowne were assailed twice today before that tribunal, first by Captain Paul Foley, former judge advocate of the court, and again by Lieut. Commander C. E. Rosendahl, senior surviving officer of the wrecked airship.

Captain Foley entered emphatic denial that he had sought to sway Mrs. Lansdowne's testimony before the court, while Commander Rosendahl declared that any "inference" or "insinuation" that Lieut. Commander Zachary Lansdowne took the Shenandoah out believing that weather conditions would jeopardize her safety and that of the 42 men on board with him, "approaches the height of absurdity and slanders the dead."

Commander Rosendahl took the stand unexpectedly and at his own request after Captain Foley had concluded his testimony in his own defense and the court had taken under advisement until tomorrow the charge lodged against him by the widow of the Shenandoah's commander. The dramatic statement of Commander Lansdowne's fellow officer added to the sensations which had followed closely upon one another since the hearing was resumed last Tuesday.

Asserting that Commander Lansdowne had no doubt of the ability of himself and of his crew to carry out the midwestern flight of the Shenandoah and that therefore he did not "knowingly and willfully subject his crew to certain disaster," Commander Rosendahl said:

"I wish to emphasize that I have made this statement for the sake of fair play, so that the indisputable facts may enjoy a just domination over any possible, fancied, perverted or prejudiced variations thereof."

Captain Foley who was on the stand for an hour, under direct and cross examination, will know tomorrow, whether the court is to render an immediate decision in his case, as both he and the present judge advocate, Major Henry Leonard, have requested, or will withhold judgment until its complete report on the Shenandoah inquiry is made.

In reaching its decision on Mrs. Lansdowne's charge, the court has three courses, it may recommend a general courtmartial for the officer or a reprimand by the secretary of the navy or it may exonerate him by discharging him as a defendant before it.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA SUFFERS HEART ATTACK

LONDON, Nov. 19—The British capital experienced emotion and dread this afternoon at the news that the beloved Queen Mother Alexandra, whose eighty-first birthday falls on December 1, had been stricken with a heart attack at her country home, Sandringham House.

The first official bulletin announced that Alexandra was critically ill and this gave rise to the greatest anxiety that death might be expected soon, but tonight a telephone message from King George, who with Queen Mary, is visiting Sandringham, informed the Prince of Wales, who is the Queen Mother's favorite, that her condition was somewhat reassuring.

Consequently the elaborate plans for the prince's procession through London tomorrow to the Guildhall for the lord's mayor's official welcome on his safe return from South America were not cancelled, and the other members of the royal family, including the Duke and Duchess of York, are remaining in London, instead of going to the aged queen's bedside, as would have been the case if all hope were given up.

At ten o'clock tonight the queen mother's condition had not materially changed since early in the day. She was completely conscious and seemed not to be losing ground. The king drove over from York cottage at that time to see his mother, but was expected to return to his own residence in Sandringham tonight.

GREENWICH THIEVES GOT JEWELRY VALUED AT $5,000

GREENWICH, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Thieves entered the home of William V. C. Ruxton, here during the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Ruxton, and made their escape with jewelry valued at $5,000, it was made known by the police today. The robbery is believed to have occurred early in the week and was not discovered until the return of Mr. and Mrs. Ruxton yesterday.

Entrance was gained through a kitchen door and the house was ransacked. Nothing was taken but the jewelry. Mrs. Ruxton is the daughter of Elisha P. Cronkhite, prominent Greenwich resident.

Not to Revoke All Alcohol Permits

Treasury Department Has Countermanded Its Sweeping Order of Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—The treasury today countermanded its sweeping order of yesterday which revoked all alcohol permits, and substituted for it another regulation cancelling only one class of permits December 31 and allowing the others to continue in effect twelve months longer.

All outstanding permits for industrial alcohol plants, alcohol bonded warehouses and denaturing plants are to expire at the end of this year under the new ruling, but permits for use of denatured alcohol in manufacturing and of non-beverage alcohol and other liquors will be continued until December 31, next year.

In accounting for the alteration in the plan of dealing with permits, Assistant Secretary Andrews said it was "physically impossible to put the other decision into effect completely this year."

"To thus rush the business," he said, in a letter of instruction to the prohibition administrators, "would in itself defeat the object, which is that ultimately no one shall hold a government permit unless, after careful investigation, the government is satisfied that he is worthy to hold a permit."

Mr. Andrews told the administrators his purpose was to see administration of the prohibition law "about 100 per cent. successful" in two things. First, the handling of the situation surrounding alcohol permits so as to avoid annoyance and hindrance to legitimate industry, and second, elimination of those who use their permits unlawfully to provide alcohol for the liquor traffic.

DEFENSE OF MITCHELL CASE IS NEARING END

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—Colonel William Mitchell's counsel prepared tonight to rest his case before the army courtmartial next week with the air officer testifying in his own behalf, probably beginning Monday.

At the same time the prosecution speeded preparations to offer voluminous testimony in rebuttal of every important issue developed by Colonel Mitchell in support of his charges that the army and navy are incompetent, negligent and almost treasonable in their administration of the national defense.

Neither side was certain, however, just when it would take the steps planned. A decision on this point hinged on discussions as to whether the prosecution would be willing to stipulate the testimony desired by the defense from four witnesses in Honolulu. It appeared probable that the stipulations would be agreed to as a matter of expediency. In the event no agreement was reached, the defense threatened to have the witnesses produced in court, regardless of the delay in the trial such a step necessarily would entail.

After five defense witnesses had been heard by the court today, Representative Frank R. Reid, chief counsel for Colonel Mitchell, declared the evidence given by his witnesses since the trial started "had proved the truth of virtually every charge the court had been called to hear." He insisted, however, that the testimony of the Honolulu witnesses was essential to the trial record, whether it be given by stipulation or in person.

The prosecution held that the stipulations wanted by the defense were extremely damaging to its side of the case, but recognized that a refusal to agree to stipulations would put the blame on its shoulders for indefinitely halting the trial.

FUNDING OF RUMANIA'S DEBT NEARS COMPLETION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Negotiations for the funding of Rumania's debt to the United States were advanced at a conference of the two commissions today to such an extent that it was officially indicated consideration of a proposal for settlement may be expected at the next joint session, set for Saturday.

No proposal for a settlement has been submitted yet, but each commission was understood to have worked out a plan for funding the debt, which is roughly $46,508,000. Some of the American commissioners have insisted heretofore that Rumania must accept terms similar to those worked out with Great Britain, and there was no indication today that they had receded from that position.

The Rumanians submitted a statement today of their economic and fiscal condition, but it was understood to disagree in some points with the survey of that nation's situation made by William S. Culbertson, the American minister to Bucharest. It was apparent, however, that the American commission thought a reconciliation of the two views would not be difficult.

DISCREPANCY OF $250,000 FEDERAL AID MONEY IN TEXAS

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 19—(A. P.)—A discrepancy of at least $250,000 in federal aid money turned over to the Texas Highway commission for payments on federal projects was disclosed today by C. A. Schutze, superintendent of federal aid projects in the Texas highway department.

The disclosure was made by Schutze while he was testifying in the state's suit for cancellation of the American Road company's permit to do business in Texas and also collect funds claimed by the Texas attorney general to be excessive profits for work done by the company on state highways.

ANOTHER REPRIEVE FOR GERALD CHAPMAN PROBABLE

Second Reprieve Virtually Agreed Upon by State's Attorney Alcorn and Joseph M. Freidman, Counsel For Chapman —To Permit U. S. Courts to Decide Whether the State Has a Right to Execute Chapman Before the Expiration of 25-year Federal Sentence Hanging Over the Condemned Man.

HARTFORD, Nov. 19—A second reprieve for Gerald Chapman was virtually agreed upon today by State's Attorney Alcorn and Joseph M. Freedman of counsel for Chapman. Mr. Freedman said tonight. The purpose of the proposed stay of execution is to spare the condemned man's life long enough to permit the United States courts to settle the point whether the state has a right to hang him before the expiration of the 25-year federal sentence hanging over the prisoner.

Mr. Freedman said the state's attorney told him at a preliminary conference today that he would not object to a reprieve extending Chapman's life beyond December 3, the time now set for his death. While the length o fthe extension was not discussed, Mr. Freedman said, counsel for Chapman will propose a delay of six months at a second conference on the subject to be held in Mr. Alcorn's office Monday.

Before seeing the state's attorney, Mr. Freedman called on Governor Trumbull at the capitol and broached the subject to him. The governor did not commit himself, but indicated that he would not be averse to granting Chapman a second reprieve under the circumstances, if State's Attorney Alcorn agreed to it.

The effect of a second reprieve, if the period of it is fixed as recommended by Mr. Freedman, will be to extend the condemned man's life approximately a year beyond the date, June 25, 1925, originally fixed by Judge Newell Jennings in the superior court following his conviction of the murder of Policeman James Skelly of New Britain. The first reprieve was granted by Governor Trumbull in June.

COUNSEL FOR CHAPMAN WILL APPEAR TODAY

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 19—Frederick E. Groehl, counsel for Gerald Chapman, who is under sentence to die in the state's prison December 3, will appear before Judge Edwin S. Thomas in Norwalk, tomorrow and ask for a writ of habeas corpus calling for a hearing of Chapman's case in the federal court.

The matter was to have come before Judge Thomas today, but Mr. Groehl sent a letter to the court asking a further delay until tomorrow, stating he was unprepared to present his arguments today.

Judge Thomas, State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn, Assistant State's Attorney R. L. Gideon and Assistant U. S. District Attorney G. H. Cohen, held a conference in the federal building today, upon application of State's Attorney Alcorn, to stay the execution until the supreme court of Connecticut could have acted upon his appeal for a new trial. It is, in effect, to give time now to the supreme court of the United States to rule on the case that the second reprieve is wanted.

TALK FIVE YEAR CONTRACT IN THE ANTHRACITE FIELDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—The suggestion for a new five year contract in the anthracite fields, put forward by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, was discussed today at a meeting of anthracite operators.

No statement was issued at the conclusion of the meeting and spokesman for the group declared it was nothing more than the "regular monthly conference," beyond confirming that the strike situation occupied considerable attention and that the Lewis suggestion specifically was considered. Developments within the meeting were closely guarded.

While the operators were in session the National Founders association's convention was adopting a resolution criticizing the "failure of refusal" of the State of Pennsylvania "to appropriately control" the anthracite strike. The state faced a challenge to its citizenship in the situation, the association held.

Interests outside the producers of anthracite but who have followed up closely the tie up of the hard coal districts were unaware of the operators' meeting. It was finally located at the railroad club where it was said that Samuel D. Warriner, president of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company, presided. He was in charge of the joint conferences of miners and operators which preceded the present strike.

DEATH OF POLICEMAN SKELLY WAS ACCIDENTAL

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—The death of State Policeman Bartholomew M. Skelly, of Naugatuck, was accidental, according to a finding handed down by Coroner Eli Mix, today. The coroner found that after doing patrol duty on the Shore Line road with other officers, Policeman Skelly was in the rear of the motorcycle procession on November 14, bound for the Centerbrooks barracks. About three miles east of Clinton, the finding reports, Officer Comstock, one of the officers returning to the barracks, noticed a motorcycle ahead of him balking and spitting fire, which motorcycle he passed on its right. Officer Wood also passed the motorcycle but the motor of Officer Poluda's machine "froze" and he threw out his clutch and coasted. It was then, according to the finding, that Officer Skelley's machine collided with that of Officer Poluda and Ckelly was thrown to the highway. He died in the New Haven hospital a few hours later.

CLYDE LINER LENAPE WILL BE TOTAL LOSS

LEWES, Del., Nov. 19.—(A. P.)—Clyde Line and insurance officials, who today circled the blackened hull of th esteamship Lenape, swept by fire Tuesday night, expressed the belief that the ship was a total loss. The deck plates were still too hot to permit inspectors to board the wreck, but Captain William Park, superintendent of the Clyde Line; William Compton, New York representative of Lloyds, Ltd., and others, had a close view from a patrol boat.

Captain Charles Devereux, who drove the burning steamship 30 miles from the open sea to the Delaware Breakwater, saving all but one of her more than 360 passengers and crew, accompanied the officials on the inspection trip.

A decision as to what is to be done with the wrecked vessel is to be reached in New York.

The theory that the fire might have been due to incendiarism was scouted by Captain Park, who declared that there was nothing to bear it out. "We have found nothing," said Captain Park, "to indicate such a crime."

THREE FISHING BOATS WERE SEIZED OFF BLOCK ISLAND

NEW LONDON, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Three fishing boats, the Hattie T, the Pal, and the Nora, all of New York, were seized off Block Island today by a coast guard patrol boat and brought here charged with violation of the navigation laws. It is claimed that they attempted to get away when ordered to stop. No liquor was found aboard any of the boats and no arrests were made. The boats are now being held by the customs authorities.

EXTRA POLICE PATROL NEW YORK CHINATOWN

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—Police invaded Chinatown in force today on word from Boston that a new war to the death might be expected, this time within one of the tongs.

The cause of the rumored outbreak was said to be that the powerful Chin family was dissatisfied with the penalty paid for the murder of one of their members. Chin Fong, an On Leong tongman, in Boston on August 1.

To the Chin family belonged Chin Jack Lem, whose switch from the On Leongs to the Hip Sings, with $40,000 from the treasury of the former, precipitated the long-drawn out tong war that bothered the police of a dozen large cities. He is now serving time for extortion.

The family demanded more of their tong, and members of the family from Boston, conferred here with tong leaders last night, the Boston message said. But the negotiations were broken off, with the Chin family so disgruntled that they determined to act for themselves.

Through Chinatown's fear of the police the authorities hope to stop the war before it is started. The memory of the wholesale deportations by the government is still fresh here. Because of that the mere spectacle of bluecoats on patrol on Doyers, Mott and Pell streets, is thought to be worth all of the old tong war negotiations that made hostilities intermittent.

The Boston information was received by a high police official. Specifically he was told that the Boston representatives at the tong conference here were likely to attack local tong officials.

GILLETT WOULD RATIFY WORLD COURT TREATY

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—"If we do not ratify the world court treaty, we are discouraging the advocates of peace the world over," said Senator Frederick H. Gillett, of Massachusetts, speaking before the Women's National Republican club on the "World Court."

An earnest advocate of participation in the world court, Senator Gillett declared that the United States should be the first great power to submit all its international cases to the court.

"There are only two ways to settle disputes," Senator Gillett said. "They are fight or arbitrate, and it is one of the American doctrines to arbitrate. We have arbitrated more cases than all the rest of the nations combined. It is now a question as to whether we should not join an agency to settle international disputes by peaceful methods—a small step toward permanent peace.

"The sanctioning of the world court, merely means that the United States will have a vote in the election of judges and that it will pay a just and fair share of the salaries of judges. In joining the court, the United States will insist upon the reservations that the statutes which govern the court cannot be changed without the approval of the United States."

WOULD SEND DISPUTES TO BOARD OF TAX APPEALS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—The board of tax appeals would be made the first agency for hearing all disputed tax cases over which it now has jurisdiction under a provision written today by a sub-committee of the house ways and means committee for incorporation in the proposed new revenue bill.

Tax payers now appealing from assessments by the government are allowed the alternative of going before the board or directly to a federal district court. Cases also may be taken after a hearing by the board before the district court.

The change voted today was in line with another committee provisions which would permit direct appeal of cases from the board to the United States circuit court of appeals in the district in which the taxpayer resides.

The sub-committee also agreed upon a provision to permit hearings of tax disputes by one member of the board of tax appeals, with his decision subject to review by the whole board. This was done, Chairman Green explained, to facilitate the work and provide for hearings away from Washington.

WILLIMANTIC ELKS INITIATED LARGE CLASS

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 19—Eighty-nine candidates, swelling the membership to 650 were initiated into Willimantic No. 1311, B. P. O. Elks last night at the most largely attended initiatory meeting ever held here. Over eight hundred Elks gathered at the state armory. Visitors numbering over three hundred came from Rockville, Middletown, Norwich, Putnam, Meriden, Westerly, R. I., and various other lodges.

A street parade was formed at the Elks' hall on Main street and the hundreds of marchers proceeded to the state armory via Bridge street to music by the B. P. O. E. band. Exalted Ruler Albert J. Fournier assisted by his complement of officers conducted the initiation work. The meeting was also the occasion of the Annual visit by District Deputy Leo B. Santangelo of Middletown who delivered his message to the assemblage and praised the work of the local lodge in swelling its membership and erecting its new home. Acting Grand Esquire James E. Boyand accompanied District Deputy Santangelo. Mr. Boyian also congratulated the lodge on its splendid showing. The visiting Exalted Rulers were called upon for remarks. During the evening Past Exalted Ruler Valentine L. Murphy was given a diamond studded platinum ring as a token of appreciation for his services to the lodge. The presentation was made by Exalted Ruler Fournier on behalf of the members. Superintendent of Schools Egbert A. Case made a fitting response when called upon for remarks as the chairman of the incoming class of candidates. Clements' Entertainment bureau of Hartford furnished the entertainment for the evening with a comedy boxing bout between Chick Pontillo and Kid Perone of Hartford. The bureau presented: Leroy and Appleton, sensational comedy acrobats; Willis & Spencer, in foolishness of 1925; Panetta Bros. musical act; King & McInnis, dancing waiters and Jack Barry in songs. The initiation night committee was composed of Michael J. Farrell, chairman; Wilfred J. Lavaude, Archill J. Vegiard, J. P. Bocash, Charles Palmer, Bert F. More and Thomas J. O'Brien.

Ludwig Rychling, an alien and resident of Westford, town of Ashford, was fined one dollar for breach of the peace and using abusive language and five dollars and costs for illegally possessing a firearm, in the Ashford town court Wednesday afternoon. Justice of the Peace Zachary Bicknell presided over the session which was held at his home. Grand Juror Otto B. Hastin was prosecutor. The complainant in the case was Mike Ostrofski of Storrs who said that on October 26, he entered into an agreement with Rychling to purchase 75 pullets and young hens from the latter. He handed Rychling a check of $5 as a deposit and binder to the deal. Then Ostrofski went to get his cargo of poultry and was informed that Nathan Pollock of Gurleyville had beat him to it. He had driven a long way over country roads and this fact did not go well with his disappointment. He and Rychling had some words. Ostrofski demanded his check and was told that it was in the hands of another party. He later found that immediately after receiving it Rychling had taken the check to Whitehead's store in Warrenville. Ostrofski alleged that during one of the scenes Rychling went into the house and came out with a gun. Ostrofski thought the matter over then applied to Grand Juror Hastin for a warrant. State Policeman Henry Heinold was called into the case and in his investigation he found that Rychling possessed firearms and was an alien. Rychling refused to plead to the charges. He said that he had a right to have a gun to protect his home. The total assessment of fines and costs imposed by Justice Bicknell amounted to $26.80 and Rychling was further sentenced to serve three days in jail.

Success attended the opening of the Mediaeval Market and Pageant at St. Paul's Episcopal church and parish house Wednesday evening. The pageant was in two parts and under the direction of Mrs. F. C. Williams. The first depicted the crusades and the second the building of the cathedral. Rev. F. C. Williams assisted in the presentation. The characters in the pageant appeared in costumes and were: Pages, Laura Syphers, Margaret Foote, Crucifer, Leonard Burr. Choir boys, Hadley Willms, Norman Burr, Norman Fletcher, John Reynolds, Donald DeMontigney, Richard Foote, Lyman Albro. Nuns, Mrs. Gertrude Morrill, Helen Bradshaw. DANIELSON

THANKSGIVING HUNT A DAY AND NIGHT AFFAIR

DANIELSON, Nov. 19.—Due notice is hereby served on the coons inhabiting areas in Brooklyn that there will be something to interest them most profoundly Thanksgiving night, and that if they are wise coons they will get to bed early and stay there late.

The community fox hunt scheduled for Thanksgiving morning under the auspices of members of the Danielson Hod and Gun club is evolving itself into a double-barreled hunt-fest. The fox hunt likely will not last longer than early afternoon, starting is at will at daybreak.

That being the case, husky and active huntsmen would have nothing to do in the late afternoon and early evening but sit by the fireside and pine for action. With this in mind James Moran and John Harrington have arranged for a coon hunt Thanksgiving night. All coon hunters are welcome.

Bradford ledges on the Lester Williams farm in the town of Brooklyn will be the starting point for the coon hunt, as it will also be for the fox hunt. Mr. Moran and Mr. Harrington have secured a sufficient number of dogs for the two hunts to start a bench show. Twenty-seven fox dogs are scheduled to take the trail Thanksgiving morning and there will be at least seven coon dogs available for the coon hunt.

What the foxes and coons over Brooklyn way are going to be thankful for on Thanksgiving is that they have had advance notice of the big hunt, that is if they read the news. If they haven't, they have some real running to do next Thursday. Hunters galore will join in these hunts and expect a humdinger of a time.

OVER 200 ENROLLED AT PUTNAM TRADE SCHOOL

DANIELSON, Nov. 19.—That there may be greater interest locally in the State Trade school at Putnam, a splendid institution, the following statement by its director, H. H. Ellis, is presented here.

In going through the various departments of the State Trade school the interested observer is impressed with the attitude of sincerity, thoroughness and care with which the student apprentice applies himself to the numerous items of instruction which go into the completeness of his trade. As one becomes familiar with the policy of the school and the nature of its instruction the conviction grows that very many elements enter into this form of training which do not appear in the outlined course of study. It is quite necessary in the training of the boy to inoculate along with the subject matter of the trade a nice respect for the value of equipment, materials and time as it enters into his shop work and academic preparation. It is also essential that he be instructed in the desirable habits of industry such as being on time, dependability in performance of his duties, precision and accuracy in statement and work, and the courage to attack new problems as they arise, as well as a good spirit of co-operation in working with his fellow students and the right sort of respect for department organization and authority.

There is a decided tendency in this type of instruction toward the development of character which cannot be too highly estimated or encouraged. This sort of training properly organized can presented can do much to give balance and dependability as well as specific training both of which make for desirable self-respecting citizenship.

Throughout the school in every department the policy of instruction is upon this principal of a definite work for a definite end. Bringing the student apprentice into contact with current problems met with in his chosen calling and above all requiring a degree of responsibility in the performance of his task which makes for pride in accomplishment and the lasting satisfaction that comes from work well done. Every course has its related academic subjects exploited in a manner requiring practical application to specific problems in planning, designing, and building. In this manner the student makes definite use of mathematic principle technical information and trade formula in achieving desired results.

The new boy in coming to the trade school is started upon elementary items of instruction best suited to his particular capacity, and gradually advanced as skill and understanding increase. All instruction is individual and each student is advanced just as fast as his ability permits, the slower boy receiving every attention to facilitate his progress. Upon completing 4,800 hours trade and academic subjects to satisfactory standards the student is graduated as a journeyman in his trade equipped to render useful service to himself and his community.

The Putnam school is one of a system of 10 schools under direction of the state board of education and is free to any boy or girl over 14 years of age resident of Connecticut.

Trades taught at the school include carpentry, machine, cotton manufacturing, electricity, drafting, sewing and cooking.

Instruction is in demand and departments are filled to capacity. Evening classes are conducted for those employed during the day and constitute an important part of the school's work. At the present time well over 200 students are enrolled in this phase of the school's activity.

The funeral of Mrs. Lucia Lantagne was held from her home in Moosup Thursday morning with funeral services at All Hallows' church at 9 o'clock. Rev. Oscar Norman, Rev. R. F. Morrisey and Rev. J. C. Mathieu were officers of the solemn high mass of requiem. Burial was in the Sacred Heart cemetery at Wauregan. Louis E. Reddy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

At the undertaking rooms of L. E. Kennedy, Furnace street, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock funeral services for John Farragut of Brooklyn were conducted by Rev. Chester J. Armstrong of the Danielson Baptist church. Burial was at Brooklyn. The bearers were Andrew Taylor, William Taylor, Charles Pegrum and Dewey Woodson.

Frederick S. Sibley, formerly here, has resigned as vice-president of the Rhode Island Hospital Trust company of Providence and the resignation has been accepted. In a statement he issued he announced that he is to associate himself with the Dutee W. Flint Company, and will be located at New Haven.

Mr. Sibley issued the following statement incident to his resignation: Having received an attractive offer from Dutee W. Flint, Inc., as manager of the business of the company at New Haven, I have accepted the same and have resigned my position as vice-president of the Rhode Island Hospital Trust company.

Mr. Sibley is the son of the late Sheriff and Mrs. Preston B. Sibley. Mrs. Sibley's death occurred here only a few days ago.

Danielson may look for the first movement of football motor traffic this (Friday) afternoon. A great proportion of the cars moving out of Connecticut and from New York for Boston to see the final eastern gridiron classic of the year—the Yale-Harvard game—will be routed through Danielson. The heaviest of this traffic is looked for Saturday forenoon, as was the case two years ago.

Friends here have received postcards out of Miami from Howard A. Elliott, Hartford, who has many friends in this section of the state. Mr. Elliott has obtained a six months' leave of absence from his duties as chief special deputy commissioner of domestic animals.

Pouring of the concrete bridge over the Assawaga river at Main street was not undertaken Thursday, as was expected would be done. If weather is favorable, the work will be done today.

Another large crowd attended the St. James' parish bazaar in the town hall Thursday evening. The booths arranged about the hall and in its center are attractively decorated and the center of special interest for the crowds. New entertainment features were presented Thursday evening.

Thomas Head of Wrasted came here Thursday to visit with his brother, Michael Head, Academy street, who is seriously ill.

It is reported from South Killingly that the Thomas Morse house in that community has been broken into twice recently.

A number from Danielson will attend the Circuit league meeting to be held in Oneco this (Friday) evening.

Numbers of Thanksgiving offerings for the Day Kimball hospital will come this week from residents of this and other nearby towns.

The Interstate Bus corporation has asked the public utilities commission to issue it a permit to operate busses between Hartford and the state line near East Killingly.

Next Thursday, Thanksgiving day, will be observed as a general holiday in Danielson, with practically all business suspended for the day.

I. W. Davis has been at Hartford to attend a conference of investment brokers and bankers at which William H. Putnam, formerly of this town, presided as chairman.

A bus line operating between Boston and New York is contemplating sending its vehicles from Providence to Hartford via Danielson, it was stated here Thursday. A few Boston-New York busses have operated through here recently, but the service has not been regular.

Mrs. J. C. Witter entertained a number of her friends at a whist at her home on Cottage street Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. J. H. Milligan of North Main street had the members of Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R., at her home for a meeting Thursday afternoon.

Warden Walter Anderson has returned from a business trip in Boston and other cities in that section of Massachusetts.

Considerable gains in the reserve water supply have been noted since the recent rains in the storage reservoirs at East Killingly.

Clearing of a "ground" in which a light wire figured in Reynolds street is thankfully acknowledged by radio set owners in and near that area. The reception has been greatly improved.

There was apprehension among many here that Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Young might have been passengers on the burned Lenape, as they sailed from New York on the same day. They were aboard a vessel of another line, however.

A new drop curtain for the stage has been installed this week at St. Alban's parish house.

CHANGING OF ANIMAL SEXES SUCCESSFUL ON NEW SPECIES

PARIS, Nov. 19 (AP)—Experiments in the changing of the sex of various animals, coincident to an attempt to codify the laws governing all animal growth, are now being carried on with success under the auspices of the Paris Faculty of Medicine by Dr. Christian Champy.

Starting some five years ago with experiments on the frog and other amphibians, where the change of sex from male to female was accomplished by an alternative process of starving and then of fattening, Dr. Champy by means of gland grafting has been able to change the sexes of such mamals as the guinea-pig and rabbit. The Russian savant Zavadowsky has performed similarly successful grafting on chickens.

As a result of their combined labors great progress has been made in determining the physical laws governing animal growth, to the point that Dr. Champy hopes that in the not distant future they may be laid down as confidently in the biological field as in physics and chemistry.

The composition of the creative glands of all males and females from the insect kingdom up to that of the higher animals, says Dr. Champy, presents a surprising sameness. The effects which the male and female glands have on the outward growth of any one species—such as horns, hair, shell, and so forth—can now to a certain degree be charted and catalogued.

It is now possible, the French savant points out, to determine the sex of prehistoric animals by the examination of the remains by the application of the general law, and also to compose the picture and calculate the size of the creature of the opposite sex from an examination of any one specimen found.

There is a practical aim behind this studying of the normal laws of growth, Dr. Champy observes. Once they are established, it will be easier to get at the causes of abnormal growths. First among the abnormal growths to be considered will be those of cancer.

PUTNAM

REPUBLICAN TICKET ENDORSED BY DEMOCRATS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Nov. 19—The Democratic cit caucus this evening ratified the entire republican ticket placed in nomination Monday night. This is an endorsement of Victor Chapdelaine for mayor, alderman-at-large, Charles A. Richard, tax collector, Archie MacDonald, Jr., and every other republican candidate. It is the first time in this city that such action has been taken, and it is a question if it has ever occurred before in any city of the size of Putnam or larger. With the exception of Charles Ryan who defeated Eugene Berthiaume as candidate for alderman from Ward 1 in the democratic caucus to make up the roster of city officials for the next two years will be identical to the present administration.

TO FLORIDA TO MAKE MONEY; LANDS AT HOME WITH $2.40

PUTNAM, Nov. 19—A young man whose home is at Woodstock, enthusiastic over the glowing descriptions of Florida and its advantages, resigned a lucrative position and went to Miami. He returned home this week with $2.40 in his pocket. He said that he could easily get a position which would pay him $35 a week but as living expenses would be at least $42 he failed to see where he could gain. He is now shouting "Hurrah for Ole New England" and says "No more Florida for him."

As a result of the recent high winds the house in South Woodstock, known as the Henry A. Potter house is without a roof. The remains of the roof were deposited in the trees about the house and the interior of the house received a thorough drenching. The grand stand at the North Grosvernordale athletic field was also demolished.

At Pomfret and Canal streets at 5 o'clock this afternoon a Studebaker limousine, owned and driven by Chris Kempf of Pomfret and a Ford sedan owned and driven by Annie Roy of North Grosvernordale came together. Both drivers were making the turn to go north on Canal street and Roy, it is said by spectators was too far from his side of the street. A wheel was torn from the Ford car. Otherwise the damage was slight.

Miss Margaret Cotter, a nurse of St. Francis' hospital at Hartford, is spending a two weeks vacation at her home in Pomfret.

Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Keefe of Ring street have gone to Northampton, Mass., called ther eby the very serious illness of Mr. Keefe's sister at her home there.

Capt. James Winslow of Woodstock is making an extended visit with his daughter, Mrs. William H. Mansfield on Ring street.

Rev. C. A. Lindervall, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church at North Grosvernordale, is attended a conference of all the Ne wEngland Lutheran ministers, which is being held at Worcester, Mass.

Everett E. Rhoades of Thompson has gone to Florida for a short business trip.

The Friday Afternoon Bridge club met at the home of Mrs. Howard Shirriffs on Grove street. Mrs. Francis Metcalf was awarded the prize for the highest score. The hostess served dainty refreshments.

The members of the club are: Mrs. Howard H. Shirriffs, Mrs. Nelson Lowne, Mrs. Joseph Michael, Mrs. Joseph Michael, Mrs. Arthur Keith, Mrs. John H. Moss, Mrs. Albert Owles, Mrs. Joseph Schmanska, Mrs. Carl Bloesom, Mrs. Arthur S. Macdonald, Mrs. Karl T. Phillips, Mrs. Frances Metcalf and Miss Sylvia Wheelock. Because of the absence of two of the members at the meeting Mrs. Helen Willey and Miss Constance Russell substituted.

Mrs. Arthur Keith will entertain the club at her home on Fremont street Friday afternoon, November 27.

A souvenir program of the Memorial bridge dedication exercises, containing the names of the service men from Putnam, has been printed and by direction of the committee two copies were allotted to each of the 280 whose names appear there. They have been placed in addressed envelopes and the service men or anyone of their families can secure their copies by calling on George L. Padgett at his office.

The unbeaten Putnam High football team expects to keep up its record for the season though the Killingly High is laying plans for victory when the two teams meet here on Thanksgiving day. The game will be played in the morning on the local school grounds.

There was no session of superior court here yesterday as scheduled. The suits of Walter P. Lathrop, administrator of the estate of Henry Dorrance and of Sarah F. Dorrance against the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Co., assigned for trial, was settled out of court. They were actions for damages growing out of the death of Mr. and Mrs. Dorrance in a crossing accident.

The next case on the docket was Ellen Cooney Callahan's appeal from probate, but because of the illness of one of the attorneys for the plaintiff, the case was continued.

In the case of Martin Kostocich vs. John Jackowich, judgment for the plaintiff to recover $325 for labor performed was awarded.

A continuance was granted in the case of Richard G. Watrous vs. Guilford Smith. This case has been assigned several times and is now in the hands of a state referee.

The case of Henrietta Borgesson et al vs. Frank E. Green was settled out of court.

Because of the Yale-Harvard football game Saturday, train No. 115, which leaves Boston daily at 5:50 p. m. will on that date leave at 6:15 p. m., running 25 minutes later to all regular stops and will be due at New Haven at 10:25 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. William Peck, Mrs. L. B. Fuller and daughter, Mrs. Miller, motored from Haddam, Conn., yesterday and spent the day with Miss Emma Kinney and her brother, Elbert Kinney, at their home on Center street.

Mrs. M. D. Burrill of East Putnam is the guest of her daughter Mrs. Howard Sanborn, of Milldale, Conn., this week.

Mrs. G. M. Burrill of East Putnam has been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Nancy West, at Providence, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Lundstrum and Mr. and Mrs. Swanson of Wollaston, Mass., have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. DeBeradinis on Walnut street.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles Rawley, Grove street.

The Ladies' Guild of St. Philips church held a Christmas sale of fancy articles and also a food sale this afternoon at the Community room of the Putnam Savings bank. Many pretty articles were disposed of and a lot of food was sold.

Mike Zotts, proprietor of the shoe repairing shop on Pomfret street is at the Day Kimball hospital for observation. It is probable that he will have to undergo an operation.

Mrs. C. L. Adams of South Main street is at the Day Kimball hospital where she underwent a slight operation.

Next Monday evening at 6:30 the Hi-Y club will give a banquet to the Putnam High school football team.

Thomas deCoudres and Francis Metcalf attended the New England conference which was held in Worcester. There were more than 600 delegates from all parts of New England present and it is the belief of the council of the seventy-two, named at the separate state meetings, that something of value for all of New England will be accomplished.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a meeting at the home of Mrs. Leon T. Walker on Grove street, this (Friday) afternoon.

Miss Florence Livernois of Southbridge and Raymond Riel of Putnam were married at the Notre Dame church in Southbridge. The bride was dressed in a gown of white canton crepe trimmed with pearl beads and carried a bridal bouquet of white carnations.

Many friends from Putnam, Union, North Grosvernordale, Spencer, Ware, Marlboro, Webster and New York city attended the reception which was given in Rochambeau hall in Southbridge.

The committee of the Woman's board of the Day Kimball hospital, who have charge of the Thanksgiving offerings to the hospital, will be at the vacant store next to Dresser's Drug store on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week to receive any articles or money that may be donated.

FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER OF HER THIRD HUSBAND

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. J., Nov. 19.—(A. P.)—Mrs. Fannie Soper was found guilty of murder in the first degree today by a jury which deliberated one hour and forty-five minutes. Mrs. Soper was accused of shooting her third husband, Deputy Sheriff Henry Soper, in their home on May 23 last. Sentence will be given tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

JEWETT CITY

DEATH OF W. G. BURDICK AT HOME IN GLASGO

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 19—Walter G. Burdick, 55, died Wednesday at his home in Glasgo, after a long illness. Mr. Burdick was the son of Orrin F. and Mary J. Eccleston Burdick. He was born at the Burdick homestead, still in the family, March 3, 1870. He was married to Elisa H. Young, by Rev. D. G. Ashley, November 23, 1898. Mrs. Burdick died in 1920. With his wife he lived on the John D. Eccleston farm until her parents needed their care, and for nearly 20 years they lived at the Young home in Glasgo. Mr. Burdick was essentially a home-loving man, it being said of him that he was rarely away from home over night. But, no call for help in time of sickness or trouble ever went unheeded.

He was a model neighbor. He had a great love for horses, and was so expert a driver in years gone by, that he was always called upon to drive the old town hearse especially on long drives. Of his family ancestry on the paternal side he was a direct descendent from Elder William Brewster, of Plymouth colony. He was an attendant at Bethel Methodist church. He served twice as one of the board of selectmen of the town of Griswold. He is survived by two brothers, Irving O. Burdick, of Glasgo, and Albertus C. Burdick, of Jewett City.

Additional names to membership in Red Cross chapter are: James Q. Dolan, Leon Wheeler, William McKenna, Mr. and Mrs. Alex McNicol, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Robinson, Earl Robinson, Mrs. A. B. Reed, David Durand, Robert McKenna, M. Ponsak, Joseph Manseau, Walter Manseau, Clifford Langlais, Emile Ritchie, H. E. Gray, Mrs. Sarah Finn, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Finn, Mrs. John Harris, Irene Harvey, Ella Oakes, Rosanna Gobiel, Mrs. W. J. Robertson, John Post, Mrs. Fergerson, Mrs. Frank Wilcox, John Oakes, J. F. Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Gilbert, Florence Quimby, Louis Masse, Louis Ongras, Daniel Sullivan, Mrs. Laura Jeddin, Mrs. H. E. Paul, Dorothy Paul, Xavier St. John, John McElligott, Jr., John Mort.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church held the annual Christmas sale in the church vestry on Thursday afternoon and evening. The fancy table was in charge of Mrs. John McBroome and Miss Mabel McBroome. Mrs. Francis Campbell and Mrs Charles Anderson were in charge of a memory table. Mrs. Emma Raney and Miss Clair Wells were at the domestic table. Mrs. A. M. Brown and Mrs. F. H. Gilbert sold candy at a gaily decorated table. A supper of baked beans, salads, brown bread, rolls, cake and coffee was served to a very large number. Mrs. G. H. Prior was in charge and her committee comprised Mrs. E. M. Swift, Mrs. E. E. Scates, Mrs. Sarah Davis, Mrs. William Watson, Mrs. Nelbert Myott and Mrs. N. J. Babcock. Mrs. Lewis Hewlitt was in charge of the waitresses, who were Ellen Prior, Doris Carpenter, Verna Tarbox, Agnes Franklin, Freda Sholes, Violet Harris, Emma and Kathleen Dearnley, Doris Burr, Doris Swan, Beatrice Cathcart, Florence Quimby, Helen Babcock, Arlene Sullivan, Priscilla Tucker and Evelyn Carpenter.

Miss Mildred Gilbert is ill with typhoid fever.

Mrs. Earl Hiscox goes to Hartford and New Britain Friday to spend the week-end with relatives.

Faith chapter, O. E. S., held a whist for the members and families of the Masonic roder Wednesday evening. The prizes went to Mrs. L. G. Buckingham, Mrs. N. B. Parkhurst, Mrs. Abraham eZger and Mrs. Charles Cornell. Cake, tea and coffee were served.

Mrs. James McCusker gave a birthday supper Friday night in honor of the 15th birthday of her daughter, Helen. The supper consisted of salad, apple pie with cream, fruit and coffee.

Miss Helen received a number of nice gifts. Those present were Armand Gilbert, Joseph Duff, Roy Ritchie, Cyril Liberty, Regina Gutnecht, Aldea Christien and Josephine Hourigan.

Mrs. McCusker was assisted in serving by her daughter, Vivian and Helen Bakanowsky.

RED CROSS RETURNS ARE LARGE IN JEWETT CITY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 19—Two hundred dollars has been brought in to the Red Cross rooms on the roll call drive. This is from only nine sections out of the thirty-five districts to be canvassed and only one section has been finished. This is most encouraging news for the Red Cross chapter and speaks well for the interests shown by the people in the work of the order.

SALMON ONLY AN OCCASIONAL ITEM IN DIET OF HAIR SEALS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Hair seals eat salmon extensively, the commerce department admits, but the precious fur seal of the Alaskan islands has an appetite mostly for others of the fish family.

The seal herds, by their increase, are not threatening the continuance of the salmon fisheries, it is shown by two scientists, Dr. Frederick A. Lucas, of the American Museum of Natural history, and Dr. Leonhard Steinegar of the National Museum. They investigated the fur seal's diet and the department declares it considers salmon as "only an occasional item of diet of the fur seal."

Lenathy evidence in the case accompanies the conclusion reached. The fur seal is said to be a deep water animal, while its cousin, the hair or harbor seal, keeps along shore. As the salmon is considered to be a coastal fish, the two most of the time are well apart.

Also on Bering Island, one of the rookeries where the seal gather yearly under government guard, there is a salmon stream, up which large numbers of salmon go every year. The fur seal herds have shown no disposition to interfere with them. Furthermore, in the stomachs of 373 seal opened for examination, salmon was found in but eighteen.

The main article of seal diet is squid, the mortuary inspections indicated, and the department says it remains unproven that the seal here have any appreciable effect on the great runs of salmon which annually enter the streams of Alaska.

An up-to-date woman says that her husband is the very latest thing. Most men have a peculiar way of getting the things they should be thankful for.

DANGER WHEN BURNING LEAVES

There were the days when the thrifty used to gather the leaves for the bedding down of horses and cattle and recognizing that they would make excellent contributions to the fertilizer heap the next spring. That is little done these days. It takes too much time and the benefits are too long in materializing and probably rated as being too small.

The quickest disposition that can be made of the leaves is to burn them and there is a general disposition to do this in the highways when possible. While such destruction has been forbidden on state roads because of the damage done to the pavements, there is another reason why it should be indulged in with great care. This is pointed out by the motor vehicle commissioner when he says, "The rising smoke is a source of danger to the automobile driver when it is so dense that he cannot see through it. He ought to realize that the fireworshipper or one of his friends may be in or just beyond it, but he sometimes doesn't. So also the fireworshipper ought to know enough not to remain hidden from sight by it and in the road but he doesn't, all of which makes for disaster. So this hazard claims its annual victims and frequently, and to state, they are half grown children."

This is of course only another way of pointing out the increased dangers of the highway today in contrast to those of yesteryears. Those who might years ago have been able to keep out of the path of traffic despite the smoke have no such warnings, but are threatened by far more vehicles which approach with less noise and much greater speed.

Burning leaves may not be rated as playing in the highway, but it does mean being in a place of danger when such presence is obscured and it is impossible for a vehicle driver to tell whether there is a person back of the cloud of smoke or for the individual to tell whether a car is coming. Thus like playing the burning of leaves should be superintended from vantage points other than the roadbed. The commissioner does well to direct attention to this matter.

FIGHTING DOPE

It is no secret what the use of habit forming drugs does to humanity. All about it is possible to see those whose lives have been wrecked by dope, those who are still clamoring for it and those who are getting entangled.

The police of Detroit point out that in the past 18 months there have been 2400 arrests for the violation of the anti-narcotic laws, for illegally peddling dope or for being dope fiends. Convictions have not been obtained in all those cases. Many who should have been penalized for their own and the community's good have escaped punishment because of the lack of evidence. In most of the cases there was probably no mistake made but when it came to having those give testimony who could it was a case where they preferred to hide their part in the dope scandal rather than contribute to the protection of others. And yet out of the many arrests the fact that about 2,000 persons were convicted shows how common is the practice and how persistent the determination to continue the shackling and demoralization of humanity.

With such a situation disclosed, it is urged that an extensive campaign of education be conducted for the purpose of keeping the unsuspecting from the clutches of dope. Such may well be done for the value of prevention can be as fully appreciated in connection with dope as well as other things. There is a duty in this respect that falls upon parents and teachers, but in addition that must be a persistent campaign of enforcement of the existing laws and an unrelenting prosecution of those who are in any way illegally contributing to such a deplorable condition. There is of course the great appeal in behalf of the long green, and too many are ready to sacrifice humanity in their effort to get rich quickly and easily. Those who care not what happens to others, when they well know the effect of dope, deserve absolutely no consideration when they are before a bar of justice. If more got what they deserved fewer would be interested in such business.

AID FOR THE PHILIPPINES

No matter how generous the response to the many appeals for relief we never get to the point where the opportunity to contribute to some cause in the interest of humanity does not exist. The solution of one problem offers a suggestion for the handling of another, and as long as we have the poor and unfortunate with us it can be expected that efforts for their betterment will be forthcoming.

One of the latest is by the American Guardian association which is endeavoring to raise two million for the extension of needed assistance to those children of mixed blood in the Philippines. It is pointed out that there are native children of American blood in the islands to the number of 12,000. Because some of these are being properly cared for does not mean that all of them are. The fact is that they are not and this association sees an opportunity for doing something for the future of those who are going to contribute to the citizenship of the islands in which we have been interested for a quarter of a century. By such funds as it is seeking it hopes to provide "a decent moral environment and suitable care for little children; in their youth an education under American supervision, including a trade or an occupation by which an honorable living can be made, with the end in view that they may become self respecting and worthy citizens of the Philippines."

We have done much for the Filipinos in the way of education and government. We are bound to continue our efforts and certainly there is a chance in this direction for rendering needed assistance where it cannot to be of immeasurable benefit to the islands and through the citizenship created to the relationship of the islands to this country. It is something that is being undertaken for the future, an effort for better conditions with full knowledge that without some such influence there is good chance for the development of bad citizenship through neglect. There can be no surprise that the undertaking bears the endorsement of Governor General Wood and ex-Governor General Forbes.

IMPRESSING THE COAL BUYERS

At a time when the fuel situation is strained it is inevitable that attention should be directed to the increase in the price of the different kinds of fuel regardless of what the conditions are that made it possible. At such times there are those that are only too eager to take advantage of the consumer and to profit by the situation which the calling of a strike creates.

Thus when there are complaints against the charging of $14 to $16 a ton for bituminous coal in some places and when the price of coke has been jumped to $18 a ton in others it is natural that there should be charges of profiteering and a feeling that those in the fuel business are doing their best to squeeze the consumer.

It is well known of course that the cost of mining bituminous coal has not advanced, that anthracite which was mined at pre-strike prices hasn't a legitimate excuse for carrying such an advance in price, that it costs no more to make coke now than it did before the first of September.

There are of course the profiteers, the speculators who are quick to get the last dollar possible and yet it is strange that there is not the recognition on the part of most dealers to see the advantage of dissipating the general impression that the coal consumer exists only to be robbed. There is a chance through the maintenance of fair prices, even during periods of shortage, to live down bad impressions which come from past experiences and yet there are too many instances where there seems to be no disposition to improve such an opportunity. If the coal sellers find themselves in a bad position through no fault of their own there are too many instances where they seem to be doing nothing to extricate themselves and create a favorable impression among those with whom they must do business.

SCRAPPING THE SUBS

In the fight that is developing against the submarine it is too much to expect that efforts are to be directed solely upon its elimination without approaching that goal through a possible series of restrictions. While it might be desirable from the standpoint of life saving to have it agreed among the nations that there will be no more submarines, it is known that they play an important part in the matter of defense and that while the loss of underwater boats, here, there and elsewhere creates a reason for asking that they be abolished it is to be realized that the abandonment of such a type would be more quickly approved by some than by others.

There is a general desire because of the great waste of human life that there be no more wars and yet no nation has as yet reached the point where it feels free to disregard all provisions for protection in case of an emergency. There is nevertheless a disposition to strive for peace through different methods than previously adopted. Certain disarmament measures have been adopted and it is not improbable that additions will be made to them. It is entirely possible to restrict the size and cruising radius of submarines without working hardship if all nations comply. Such a move could be a stepping stone to their elimination in time when there has arisen a stronger demand throughout the world for the outlawing of war.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There are but a few more days in which to put forth your claim as a slogan maker.

Anchorage, Alaska, reports some delightful weather but it cannot expect to compete with Florida.

The world might remain at peace if it only acted the way it talks when it is trying to make a good impression.

No one should think that just because a hard winter is predicted that that should stand in the way of using soft coal.

The man on the corner says: It may be hard to tell the male from the female these days, but if it is an old hat it's a man.

Now is the time to be asking the British why they do not maintain the means for raising any sunken submarine any time, and any where.

Some years ago some people used to shudder and hold up their hands in protest when told about Russians or others drinking alcohol. But many of them are drinking the same thing or worse now and paying a fancy price for it.

THE UNCONSCIOUS.

"I don't know what to do!" confided the bewildered waiter to the sympathetic blond cashier. "Those two over there by the window have me up a tree!

"They held the menus I pushed into their hands for five minutes and kept on looking and talking. When I says the filet mignon is fine tonight he says 'all right' before I could stop adding that the Maryland chicken was very fine. She says 'all right' and kept on talking. Then I mentions the baked ham and the fillet of sole and they both says 'all right,' and kept on looking at each other, and when I mentioned the salads, they didn't hear me! Now I ask you!"

The pretty cashier took a good long look and then a dreamy expression came over her face. "Bring 'em anything," she told the bewildered waiter. "You can serve those two boiled cabbage, ice cream and frankfurters and they wouldn't know that they hadn't been dining on mockingbirds' tongues! They've just got engaged, you big goof!

"Maybe 'tis the way here—anyhow it is no recent that the daze hasn't worn off yet and they don't quite realize there are people and trees and buildings on earth. Why, those two might have wandered into a plumber's shop instead of a cafe, sat down by an overturned bathtub for a table and eaten a quart of bolts and fullers' balls and thought they were devouring food!

"Why, there was a couple like that sat down right at this table in front of me that nobody takes if they can help it, because everybody coming up to pay their bill jogging their elbows and steps on 'em!" continued the pretty cashier. "Right away I knew they weren't quite down to earth again and I wish you could have seen them.

"They had that waiter who left last week and who was soured on the human race or something. He said would they have soup or hors d'oeuvre and the man said yes, so they had those set in front of them and the waiter takes 'em away untouched and says will they have steak, chicken, ham or the lamb is very good tonight sir—and they both says yes in an annoyed kind of way.

"He shoved up another table and brought them two of each and they never turned a hair nor noticed everybody sort of looking. So after a while he took away the platters untouched and says how about stuffed tomato salad or maybe lettuce with Thousand Island dressing—or cucumbers and crabmeat, or perhaps a Russian salad? Without looking at him they said yes impatiently and went on gazing at one another and talking.

"So he brought two of each kind and set 'em down and walked around and admired the array and put ice in their glasses and finally he took all those away too, untouched, and began rehearsing apple pie, peach pie, New York ice cream, chocolate, orange ice, French pastry, raspberry shortcake and three kinds of cake?

"He said it twice before the girl looked up at him sort of dazed and then smiled tenderly at him and murmured yes, that would be very nice—wouldn't it, Claude?

"'Whatever you prefer, darling,' Claude beamed, and the waiter brought two orders each of all those things and had to shove up a third table, because the dishes spread out so there wasn't room.

"Then the waiter removed all those and brought them coffee, three kinds of cheese and laid down the check with a bitter light of triumph in his eyes as though he at last had settled a lot of old scores against the idle rich—and when that young fellow looked at it he never turned a hair. The sum was something outrageous for two meals—up in the twenties—but he seemed to consider that was part of the celebration of getting engaged, and he hauled out a lot of paper money, setting it by the touch system, for he couldn't take his eyes off of her long enough to really see it.

"Then when he passed me he smiled at me, such a sweet, adoring smile—couldn't shift to any other sort so quick—and said that it had been a very good meal and delightfully served, and that we had a lovely restaurant! Yes-sir! And I don't know whether he meant to do it, but he tipped with $5!

"Huh?" gasped the bewildered waiter, looking bewildered no longer, but firm and determined. "Excuse me, but I've got a chance to unload all that on those two over there I'd better begin quick before they come out from under the ether! Oh, boy-y-y!"—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Patronizing Home Industry

Mr. Editor:—Some time ago you favored us with space in your paper in regard to the cigar industry in Norwich, which was greatly appreciated so we are again calling on you in behalf of the same industry. At that time we asked for the support of the smokers of Norwich to help boom our trade which had fallen off nearly 100 per cent.

Since that time there has been four occasions where businessmen and societies have used quite a number of cigars and I am very sorry to say that in each instance those cigars were out of town cigars.

These people live in Norwich and expect the people of Norwich, of which the cigarmakers and also the manufacturer are a part, to support their business yet when they have an opportunity to give another industry a lift they refuse. If they would only realize how it would benefit their business to have 100 cigarmakers earning $3,500.00 per week instead of 10 working short time, earning $200. I do not think these things would happen so often.

Some think that we should enlist the services of our friends and refuse to patronize those people who will not patronize us but we feel that such drastic action is not needed. In most cases this evil is brought about by ignorance or not thinking, at any rate we are willing to give them the benefit of the doubt. We feel that if the people of Norwich will get behind a movement of "Patronizing Home Industry," and the merchant will patronize the fellow who patronizes him in a short time they will be surprised how good it will work out for everybody.

The holiday season is near at hand at which time a number of cigars are used and we hope that the people of Norwich will give us what they owe to themselves and the community by insisting on Norwich made products when they make their purchases.

Thanking you in advance for the space in your valuable paper, we beg to remain,

Yours truly

Stories That Recall Others

Polite Society

Earl and Norman were sitting by each other at a banquet recently Earl said: "Please pass the condiments."

"Beg pardon," replied the other, perplexed.

"That's what they say in polite society for salt and pepper," Earl elucidated.

Earl made an etiquette breach a little later which attracted the attention of Normah, who smiled and said: "I don't know what they would call it in polite society, but you are now eating my salad."

It's Brand New

Margaret, when she was a very little girl, went one day with her mother to call at the home of an old friend, who had passed on to another life. Margaret went into the silent room and at once became interested in the coffin. She looked it over from end to end, stooped down and viewed the bottom critically and then whispered to her mother:

"It's brand new."

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

BERMUDA SUCCUMBS TO RAPID TRANSIT

Permission has been granted for the construction of a tramcar line in the next few months. The ban has not yet been lifted on automobiles and motorcycles, so the single motor truck to carry freight remains the only representative of the automotive family.

"Antiquity, even in transportation facilities, is part of the stock in trade of Bermuda," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. "To the visitor this is one of the chief sources of its charm. There are no industries other than agriculture and catering to the tourist trade. The steamboat whistle and the clatter of horses' hoofs on the smooth hard roads are the only foreign noises that disturb the Sabbatical quiet of the island.

"Politically Bermuda is one of the oldest colonies of the British Empire, antedating Plymouth by 11 years. Geologically it has been traced by some authorities to the great eruption along the Atlantic seaboard that gave birth to the Palisades, Mt. Holyoke and the Meriden Hills.

"The islands were discovered by a Spaniard, Juan de Bermudez, in 1515, but it was the shipwreck of an Englishman in 1609 that led to the British claim and their colonization. During the Revolution, although sympathetic with the American colonies, Bermuda remained loyal to the mother country. A shortage of food led to an exchange of large stores of powder, seized in the dead of night from the garrison by citizens, for several shiploads of food supplies from the American Colonies. It was this powder, received at an hour of great need, that the Continental army employed to compel the British to evacuate Boston.

"Not only powder, but salt and other necessaries were sent to America by Bermudians during the Revolution despite the embargo placed on American ports by the King. These acts so incensed the governor of the islands that he publicly upbraided many citizens for treason. Feelings ran high for a time, the governor was removed, but in the end the islands retained their allegiance to England.

"During the Civil war Bermuda enjoyed a brief era of unparalleled prosperity. As one of the chief goals of the confederate blockade runners its main ports, Hamilton and St. George, seethed with continuous excitement and activity. Cotton was worth two shillings a pound at the time and great risks were taken to obtain it. It is said that ship captains received as high as $5,000 for a single successful trip, while others were paid proportionately. Everyone was rich and sympathy for the southern cause was more or less openly expressed.

"Today Bermuda often has nearly as many Americans within its shores as natives. Less than 700 miles from New York, and connected with America's principal port by frequent and speedy steamers, the American tourist has lately supplanted the production of onions, potatoes, and lily bulbs as the principal industry. The islands, of which there are said to be 365 in the group (one for every day in the year,) provide delightful playgrounds dotted with green cedar trees, and with charming combinations of water and shore.

"In many respects Bermuda is an England in miniature. The names of many of the shores and towns are lifted bodily from those of the mother country, without even so much as a 'New' in extenuation. Warwick, Southampton, Devonshire, Watford, Ireland and Somerset are examples. Surface irregularities and hundreds of bays and promontories, with picturesque English houses and little stone churches, help to complete the analogy.

"The resemblance is not quite complete however. There are no lakes, nor streams, nor natural springs. The few ponds are mostly brackish and derive their water indirectly from the sea. Every home has its own water supply tank on the roof, and fortunately rainfall is frequent and abundant. In fact the islands have a reputation as a storm center, many claiming that Shakespeare laid the setting for 'The Tempest' in Bermuda, because of reports, brought back by sailors, of its sudden and violent hurricanes.

"Although no farther south than Charleston, S. C., the Gulf Stream gives Bermuda a tropical climate which is modified by the prevailing trade winds. Nearly 300 different kinds of birds have been identified in the vicinity, while the marine life is of extraordinary variety and beauty.

"Particularly interesting is the plant life, with 61 species that can be found native nowhere else in the world. Coffee, tea and tobacco are of spontaneous growth, while the toad, which as introduced since the discovery of the islands, attains proportions that startle the uninitiated. Red coral-sand beaches, limestone caves of marvelous beauty, sandstone for houses (cut with saws from the backyard,) and unsettled theories concerning the volcanic origin of the islands are among the many things that keep geologists entertained.

"The fight to maintain the time-honored seclusion and repose of the islands has been long and stormy. It has involved many of Bermuda's illustrious visitors. On one of the petitions for abolition of the motor car are the names of Mark Twain and Woodrow Wilson. The late President Wilson wrote the preamble to a list of names that is credited with being partly responsible for the Motor Act of 1908. In this preamble he stated that Bermuda was one of the last refuges from the automobile and from the 'extravagant and sporting set' it attracted. That sentiment has been gradually changing, however, as indicated by the recent failure of a motion to bring the motor car back by the narrow margin of one vote."

A man is always anxious to help another if he sees a chance to help himself.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Robert A. Millikan, whose discovery of a powerful new ray has just been made public, is director of the Norman Bridge Laboratory of Physics and chairman of the administrative council of the California Institute of Technology, in the world of science he is best known as the first to isolate and measure the electron. Dr. Millikan is a graduate of Oberlin college and began his teaching career at that institution in 1891. Two years later he went to the University of Chicago, where he taught physics for twenty-five years. Since 1921 he has been connected with the California Institute at Pasadena. He was awarded the Comstock Prize for Research in Electricity in 1913, and in 1924 he received the Nobel Prize for Physics. In addition, he has received honors from more than a dozen universities and learned societies in America and Europe.

From Small Beginnings

Edwin Hawley, the Great Railroad President

On the streets of New York a boy sold papers. A man came up as if to buy, and instantly, the boy produced the right paper, made the change in a twinkling and put the money in his pocket. Only a newsboy and only a penny or two. But newsboys grow and pennies make the dollars. The hand on the great clock of time turned on a half century and the same boy, now grown into full manhood, bought and sold great railroads as he had bought and sold papers, and he put into his pockets not pennies but billions. When Edwin Hawley, the one-time newsboy, died he left property valued at nearly $26,000,000.

Some men have the power to rise supreme to any fate. Put them any where, in any station in life and they will succeed. Such a man was Edwin Hawley, the railroad magnate.

As a small boy, without any unusual opportunity, he took advantage of the little money and credit that he had and bought foodstuffs that he sold at a small profit. He was no weak dependent. From the very first he relied on himself and his ready intellect.

Some time later, on the streets of New York, he sold papers, saved his little earnings and put them away where he could use them.

When he grew older and stronger, and in a sense richer, he fulfilled his newsboy dream of being owner of a tugboat. What could be more delightful than to churn through the harbor in one's own tugboat; but one boat did not satisfy him. He bought others, and again both made and saved money.

One fortunate day he came to the attention of a great railroad man, Collis P. Huntington, pleased him, worked for him, and thus opened wide the door of advancement. All the thrifty cleverness he had used in selling food or papers, or in managing his tugboats, he now used in railroads as if they were papers, and bought and sold lines of steel with almost as little hesitation as he had bought and sold newspapers. The Central West is ribbed with the great rail systems in which he dealt. He had an uncanny sense of values and a prophetic knowledge of market conditions. At every turn he made money and accumulated more than a score of millions. Look at the next newsboy you meet—he may be the railroad king of tomorrow, for America is the land of opportunity.

NO CLUE TO THE MISSING SMITH COLLEGE JUNIOR

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 18—(A. P.)—James H. Corbett, father of Alice M. Corbett, missing Smith College junior, tonight stated that no new or definite clues had been received about his daughter but hope is by no means abandoned. Mr. Corbett returned to his home today.

"Mental illness," rather than anything else, is ascribed as the cause for the disappearance of the young woman, physicians explain, after examination of a lengthy letter written by the girl to her parents. The $1,000 reward offered by Mr. Corbett has been deposited with the Hampshire County Trust company of Northampton, Mass., according to Mr. Corbett.

CROW'S FEET, WRINKLES AND ENLARGED PORES

Delightful New Vanishing Cream Containing True Buttermilk Makes Many a Woman Look Years Younger

There is no secret about it nor is there any doubt about the result—it's just common ordinary Buttermilk in the form of a wonderful cream gently massaged with the finger tips around the corners of the eyes and mouth.

No matter whether you are troubled with wrinkles, hard little lines around the mouth and eyes, coarse, sallow, faded looking skin, or simply roughness and redness caused by wind and sun, you will find that all these trials quickly disappear with the use of this old-fashioned beauty recipe brought up to date.

To prove this to your complete satisfaction obtain a small quantity of Howard's Buttermilk Cream at any good drug or toilet counter on the money back if dissatisfied plan. The directions are simple and it costs so little that every girl or woman can afford it. Lee & Osgood Co. is selling lots of it.

CHURCH ROLL CALL BRINGS LARGE RESPONSE

The end of the alphabet was reached Thursday night in the series of roll calls at the Central Baptist church prayer meetings, the responses being from those whose names begin with T, U, V, W, and Y. Like the previous roll calls this one was full of interest and the attendance of over 140 filled the room. A number of those who could not be present in person sent messages which were read or given to the meeting by others when the names were called.

The pastor, Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D. expressed his great satisfaction with the wonderfully fine response which the roll call plan had elicited and spoke of a proposed extension of the plan which it is desired to carry on for future meetings.

ADDING MORE LAND TO WOLF DEN PARK

The state park and forest commission has made arrangements for the purchase of a tract of land in the town of Pomfret to be added to the Putnam Wolf Den park, which will increase the size of the park to about 250 acres. At the last session of the general assembly the sum of $100,000 was appropriated to the commission for the purchase of land for state park purposes. The appropriation became available July 1.

The commission has made a number of purchases which have cost in the neighborhood of $75,000. The commission has now a balance of $25,000 to be used in the further extension of the state park system.

FUR COAT THIEF GIVES FICTITIOUS ADDRESSES ON PROVIDENCE STREETS

Gladys Lorraine, 24, of Providence, R. I., was presented before Judge Arthur F. Libby in the city court Thursday morning on a charge of theft of a fur coat, value $500, from the Caron Specialty Shop at 140 Main street. The case was continued until Friday morning in order to give the accused an opportunity to secure a lawyer from Providence. She has already retained Attorney Thomas J. Kelly of this city. She was arrested late Wednesday afternoon after the fur coat was missed from the store. The woman with another woman whom she claims is her sister, had been in the store and left. She was arrested by Officer Luke Riley on Shetucket street a short while later and was wearing the missing coat at the time.

The woman has so far frustrated any attempt to locate her residence in Providence. She gave an address which she said was where she lived and also an address which she said was that of the woman with her at the time of the theft. This woman she has stated was her sister.

Both addresses have proved to be false. In communication with the Providence police Thursday morning Chief George Linton learned that the place where the women said she lived is the site of a big manufacturing establishment and that of her alleged sister is a building connected with a church.

MISSIONARY FROM TURKEY SPOKE AT WAUREGAN

The fall meeting of the eastern Connecticut branch of the Woman's board of missions was held Thursday at the Congregational church in Wauregan with 59 registered delegates from the churches of the branch. Not all those present registered.

Miss Abby G. Willard, of Colchester, the branch president, was in the chair and opened the meeting with a short devotional service.

The recording secretary, Miss Elisabeth F. Pullen, of Norwich, read the minutes of the September meeting, and the treasurer, Miss Anna C. Learned, of New London, reported for her department. Miss Learned also gave some reports from the board treasurer's statement made at the 53th annual meeting of the Woman's board of missions, held last week in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Following this, Miss Amy Coggswell, of Norwich, reported upon two addresses, that of (1) Miss Helen Calder, home secretary of Woman's board, and (2) Miss Jean Gordon, Wal. India.

Miss Mary Lucas, of Norwich, sent a report on the address of Miss Ivy Craig, on work in the Mt. Silinda school in Rhodesia, and some bits about Miss Rigg's work in Turkey.

Mrs. Samuel E. Smiley, of Norwich, followed with some reports of the work of Miss Rena Nutting, Dondiok, China and Miss Florella Pedley, in Kobe, Japan.

A break in the reports of the board meeting was made here that a letter from one of the young missionaries recently gone out, might be read. Mrs Dwight Avery, of Norwich Town, read this letter from her daughter, Miss Gertrude Avery. The morning session was brought to a close with a devotional service led by Mrs. J. Beveridge Lee, of New London, who presented some thoughts from a devotional service at the board meeting, led by Rev. Raymond A. McConnell.

After an enjoyable hour for luncheon and sociability, the meeting again assembled and listened to further brief and interesting reports from the board's annual meeting.

Miss Elizabeth Huntington, of Norwich, gave a resume of the address of Dr. James L. Barton, secretary of the American board of foreign missions.

Miss Helen Eadie, of Hanover, reported two addresses on work in China: Miss Ruth K. Y. Cheng in Peking, and Rev. Isabella Phelps, Paotingfu.

Miss Nancy E. Lucas, Norwich, reported on an address by Dr. Ping-wen Kuo, on "The New Situation in China."

The address of the afternoon was made by one of the missionaries supported by the eastern Connecticut branch, Miss Mary W. Riggs, now of Constantinople, Turkey.

She told most interestingly of working the girl's boarding school at Scutari. She told of the forced removals of this school during the recent troublesome times, and of the handicap of being obliged to work under the numerous restrictions imposed by the Turkish government. Nevertheless the school grows and the boarding department is full (a few of these girls are Turkish) and there are more who wish to attend as day pupils than can be cared for.

Miss Riggs said it had been suggested that it might be wise to Abandon the school for a time because of the fact that religion could not be taught in the school just now; but owing to the fact that no school can be held without a government permit and that no new permits are given it seemed best to hold on to what they had and hope for more freedom in the work later.

Miss Willard spoke briefly of the plans for merging the Woman's board with the American board which plan was accepted at the Brooklyn meeting by the Woman's board.

Mrs. Dwight C. Stone, of Hanover, gave some bits from Mrs. Frank Gaylord Cook's talk, "Close-ups of Your Fields," this being an account of Mrs. Cook's trip as treasurer of the board; and an account of an address by Dr. T. H. P. Sailor, of Columbia university on "Our Responsibility for Knowing All About It."

Mrs. William M. Zumbro, of Norwich, told of the work of Miss Isabella Nugent, of Satara, India; and of the rally for the secretaries of young people's work, held the evening before the beginning of the board meeting.

Miss Helen Eadie, of Hanover, gave some account of messages from the student volunteers and from foreign students under the title "Contributions of Youth to World Peace."

Miss Willard closed the meeting with a few thoughts from an address by Rev. Percival J. Hugett, D. D., of Brooklyn, on "Working in Concert for the Commonwealth."

Those from Norwich attending the meeting at Wauregan were the following: Mrs. A. G. Graham, Mrs. S. H. Howe, Mrs. Samuel E. Smiley, Miss Amy Coggswell, Miss Elizabeth F. Pullen, Mrs. Archibald Mitchell, Jr., Mrs. W. H. Dawley, Mrs. Edward D. Fuller, Miss Nancy Lucas, Mrs. William M. Zumbro and Miss Elizabeth Huntington. The meeting was held at the Congregational church with sessions at 11 o'clock in the morning and 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

STATE KINDERGARTEN MEETING AT MERIDEN

The third annual meeting of the Connecticut State Kinderkarten association is to be held in Meriden, Saturday at the Washington Senior High school. The Meriden Kindergarten club will be the hostess club. At 2:15 p. m. Dr. David Gibbs, superintendent of schools in Meriden, will deliver an address of welcome, following which two solos will be sung by Miss Genevieve Barry, accompanied at the piano by Miss Edna Dooley. Dr. Arnold Gessell of Yale University will speak on "The Mental Hygiene of Young Children." Tea and a social hour will follow the business meeting.

Methodist Men for Social

Men of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church will be at the parsonage on Williams street this (Friday) evening, for a social conducted by the men's class. A general invitation has been extended to the men of the congregation.

An honest enemy often proves to be a man's best friend.

ENDING LAWSUITS IN INTERNATIONAL SILVER CO.

According to an Associated Press dispatch from Meriden, the home office of the International Silver Co., which has one of its factories at Thamesville, officials of the International Silver company, and the committee of stockholders which has been acting against them in certain matters, have agreed upon a plan of adjustment, which if approved by a majority of the voting power of the company at a special meeting of stockholders to be held on December 9, will mean the termination of all lawsuits now pending. It will include the payment by the company of nearly $1,400,000 of deferred preferred stock dividends and preferred stock dividend, which has been outstanding since 1903; the increase by more than $2,000,000 of the cash working capital of the company and the commencement of payment of 6 per cent. dividends upon the common stock of the company.

A circular, announcing this plan to the stockholders of the company, is being mailed by the American Exchange National bank of New York, transfer agents of the company, by order of the board of directors of the company, by George Rockwell, secretary.

Under the proposed plan of adjustment the company is to offer to its common stockholders, at the price of $75 per share, 51,445 shares of its common stock now held in the treasury, at the rate of 5 1-2 shares for each one now outstanding, and is to issue to its common stockholders transferable warrants to represent their rights to purchase stock in accordance with this plan. These rights will expire unless exercised before 1 p. m., December 30, 1925.

Messrs. Lazard Freres, Lehman brothers and Simon Borg & company, bankers of New York city, have agreed that if this plan, and the agreement be approved by the majority of the voting power of the company, and the warrants are issued in accordance with the proposed plan, they will underwrite said offer of shares of common stock, and will purchase from the company for $75 per share, all of said shares which the holders of the warrants do not elect to purchase in accordance with the plan, and will pay the purchase price therefor on December 31, 1925, upon the delivery of the stock.

The company has agreed that, if the plan and agreements are approved and the agreements carried out, it will pay to these bankers a commission for their services, will make application to list its preferred and common stock upon the New York stock exchange, and will not, before the end of 1926, sell, or otherwise dispose of any of its common stock now held in its treasury without the approval of these bankers, except the shares to be offered in accordance with this plan. The stockholders' committee and other plaintiffs in the suits brought to set aside the purchase by the company of the Colt Arms company property, and to restrain the company from selling shares of its common stock, have approved this plan, and agreed to vote 54,476 shares of common stock of the company held by them in favor of the approval and ratification of this plan and the agreements mentioned herein, and of the purchase by the company of the Colt plant, provided enough other shares are voted to constitute at least a majority of the voting power of the company. The holders of record of these 54,476 shares agree to withdraw all charges and release all claims made or asserted, and the company has agreed, in the event of the approval of the plan to pay to the committee the amount of its obligations and expenses.

The right of the holders of warrants to purchase stock will be contingent upon the payment by the company of all dividends accumulated and unpaid upon its preferred stock and all its preferred stock dividend scrip and company will pay all such dividends and scrip on December 31, 1925, upon the payment by bankers of the purchase price for the stock, if any, which they become obligated to purchase.

The company expects to commence the payment of dividends upon its common stock at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, such dividends to accrue from January 1, 1926, and first dividends of 1 1-2 per cent. to be payable on April 1, 1926.

NORWICH MUSICIANS ON STORRS RADIO PROGRAMME

Arrangements for a Norwich programme over the Storrs radio station, WCAC, for Thanksgiving eve at 7.45 have been completed by the Norwich Radio club in cooperation with Professor Noble, manager of the broadcasting station at Connecticut Agricultural college. Those to furnish the programme are Miss Eunice Taft, J. Warren Kane and Prentice Chase with a Norwich orchestra. The programme will be one of classical and semi-classical music.

The arrangements have been made by a committee of the club consisting of Charles E. Coleman, Jean Kieffer, Frank Goring, Albert Martin, and Elmer Jewett. Because of this Norwich broadcasting programme, the meeting of the club next week will be held on Tuesday instead of Wednesday evening.

CALLED TO PASTORATE AT ELMWOOD CHURCH

Rev. Charles K. Tracy, pastor of the Congregational church at Collinsville, has been called to the pastorate of the Community Congregational church at Elmwood this state, to succeed Rev. James F. English, now pastor of the Second Congregational church, Putnam.

Rev. Mr. Tracy, who married Miss May Sherman of this city, has spent a number of years in the mission field in Turkey, before returning to America and assuming pastorates here.

Fitchville Farm Bureau Group

The next meeting of the farm bureau group in Fitchville is to be held today (Friday) at the residence of Mrs. E. Rana Barber. Miss Gladys Stratton will act as instructor and plans for future work will be discussed.

REFERS THIBEAULT DIVORCE TO WINDHAM COUNTY

Demurrer to the complaint has been overruled by Judge Simpson of the superior court in Hartford in the case of Dorilda Thibeault of Greeneville, N. H., against Joseph Thibeault of Hartford, an action to set aside a divorce obtained in 1923 by Thibeault in the superior court for Windham county.

Judge Simpson said the allegations of the complaint are a proper subject on inquiry by the court, but he points out that the divorce was granted in Windham county and unless the present suit is transferred it should be erased from the docket.

From the complaint it appears that Dorilda Bassett and Joseph Thibeault were married February 10, 1896, and resided for a time in Killingly, where they had three children. It is alleged that in July, 1917, Joseph deserted his family, but Mrs. Thibeault remained in Killingly a year thereafter, and then moved to Pawtucket, R. I., where they resided until April 1922, when Mrs. Thibeault went to Greenville, N. H. She says that in September, 1924, Thibeault came to Greenville to attend a funeral, saw her on the street, and knew that she lived there. The following month he instituted divorce proceedings in Windham county, alleging the whereabouts of his wife were unknown to him; notice of the suit was by publication in a Windham county newspaper, and Mrs. Thibeault knew nothing about it. He alleged desertion on her part, in January, 1917, and also charged intolerable cruelty. The suit was uncontested and Judge L. P. Waldo Marvin in the Windham county court on October 19, 1925, granted Thibeault a decree.

Mrs. Thibeault asks that the decree be set aside as she alleges that the allegations that her whereabouts were unknown were false and that the allegations of desertion and cruelty were untrue.

OBITUARY

John W. Bogue

At the age of 80 years and following an illness of about four months' duration, John W. Bogue died Thursday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Henry Briggs, in Yantic. Mr. Bogue had been in poor health for a number of years and his condition took a change for the worse about four months ago, and he continued to fail since that time. He had for years resided in Montville, but for the last four months had lived with his daughter, Mrs. Briggs.

Mr. Bogue was born in Salem, June 3, 1845, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Tillotson Bogue. He received his education in the Salem schools. About 70 years ago he was united in marriage with Mary Jane Chapman. Shortly after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Bogue removed to Montville, where he conducted a farm for years.

Enlisting in Company A, 26th Regiment, Connecticut Volunteers, Mr. Bogue served during the Civil war. He held the rank of sergeant and was mounded at Port Hudson, Md. Bogue was a successful farmer and was widely known throughout Montville and Norwich.

He is survived by three sons, Charles R. Bogue, of Montville; Lewis H. Bogue and William F. Bogue, of this city and two daughters, Mrs. Alma Bogue Smith, of Meriden, and Mrs. Henry Briggs, of Yantic.

Mrs. Samuel Thornton

The death of Mrs. Adeline Thornton, widow of Samuel Thornton, occurred in Norwich, Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock, following only about twenty-four hours of critical illness, although she had been in poor health for more than a year due to hardening of the arteries. Mrs. Thornton was able to be up as recently as Sunday last, but on Tuesday her condition became alarming due to heart affection and she failed rapidly until the end.

She was born in the town of Lisbon May 2nd, 1848, the daughter of James M. and Emily E. Crandall Bennett, her father being a member of Governor Buckingham's regiment during the Civil war. Her grandfather Crandall served in the Revolutionary war.

In Norwich, April 2nd, 1870, she was united in marriage with Samuel Thornton a master mechanic, the ceremony being performed by Dr. Graves. For many years Mr. and Mrs. Thornton resided on Boswell avenue, near what was then known as Treadway Hill, now Platt avenue. The family also for a number of years were residents of Sprague.

Mrs. Thornton had for the past six years made her home in Norwich, residing on Mount Pleasant street at the time of her death. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Herbert A. Wheeler, of 21 West Town street, Norwich Town, a son, Lewis W. Thornton, of East Norwich, three grand children, Herbert Wheeler, William and Evelyn Thornton, two sisters, Mrs. Mary Evelyn Maine of South Windham and Mrs. Frances Warner, widow of Joseph Warner, the noted artist of Holland. Mich., and the following nieces and nephews: Miss Mary Maine, Miss Iva Adams, Mrs. Ida Carl, James Maine and John and James Adams, all of South Windham, Miss Carrie Adams, Mrs. William Lathrop and Edward Adams of East Great Plain and Harold Adams of Greeneville, besides several cousins in Norwich. Years ago Mrs. Thornton was a member of the Baptist church of Sprague, being a great worker in the church. For the past twenty-eight years she had been identified with the Congregational church.

She was a loyal friend and neighbor, her many kind acts being unlimited, and her helpful deeds and ministrations to the sick and needy were often sought in times of distress, as she never faltered when there was an opportunity to do good to others.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

W. Tyler Olcott has returned, following a week's stay in New York.

Mrs. Edward Sprague has left for her home in New York, after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Francis Gilman, at Lowthorpe, Washington street.

Friends continue to hear favorable news from Miss Margaret Fuller, the writer, who is in Paris with her sisters, Mrs. Charlotte Fuller Eastman and Miss H. Louise Fuller.

Thursday afternoon, Miss Butts and Miss Adelaide L. Butts gave an informal tea at their home on Washington street. Mrs. Charles R. Butts poured, Mrs. William W. Leonard assisting.

Mrs. Edward Whiting Johnson, who has been with the Misses Hyde since returning from three months' stay at Nantucket, is to leave Wednesday next for her third year at "Three Oaks," Augusta, Ga.

The Wednesday Afternoon literary club was entertained by Miss Elizabeth Selden, at the home of Miss Elizabeth B. Huntington, at Norwich Town. The paper was prepared and read by Miss Selden.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Story, of Laurel Hill avenue, are to motor to Holden, Mass., this (Friday) afternoon, to the home of the former's brother, Dr. Theodore L. Story. All will attend the Yale-Harvard game at Cambridge, Saturday.

Samuel Johnson, of Lincoln avenue, celebrated his 80th birthday Tuesday at the home of his son, Henry D. Johnson. Friends and relatives called to extend greetings and he received many cards and tokens from out of town friends. Chauncey W. Johnson, his brother, from Nyack, N. Y., now in his 93rd year, has been visiting him the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Fellows, of Norwich Town, gave a dinner party of twelve, Tuesday evening, anticipating the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. Fellows' father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Fellows. The exact date is Nov. 24th. The decorations and favors were in yellow, the wedding cake which was a feature of the feast being decorated in the [illegible] golden tint.

Mrs. Oliver L. Johnson attended Tuesday the semi-annual meeting of the Connecticut Society of Colonial Dames held at the Lawn club in New Haven, with Mrs. John C. Wilson presiding. The business meeting in the morning, when reports were read by committee chairmen, was followed by luncheon, which was in charge of the New Haven social committee. Mrs. Eliot Watrous, Mrs. Edward Bliss Reed, Mrs. Charles M. Blakewell, Mrs. Thomas W. Swan and Mrs. George Lewis Sargent. Chapman of Hartford, and the report of the committee on publicity for the Webb House in Wethersfield, written by Miss Katherine Gallaudet of Hartford, was read by the recording secretary, Mrs. Henry Gilpin. Mrs. William H. Williams, Jr., and Mrs. Morgan G. Bulkeley, both of Hartford, reported on the furnishing of the Webb House.

Anniversary Mass

Thursday at 8 o'clock, in St. Patrick's church, the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May sang the first anniversary high mass of requiem for Mrs. Maurice Welch, relatives and friends assisting at the services.

FARMS INCREASE BUT ACREAGE DROPS IN STATE

Connecticut now has 585 more farms than in 1920, but despite this the land in farms has dropped over 60,000 acres, according to figures issued at Washington Thursday by the bureau of farm census, department of agriculture. The average value of farm land and buildings in Connecticut has risen about $200 per farm, or about $10 per acre. The average acreage per farm last year was 78.8, as compared with 83.5 acres five years ago.

The total number of farms in Connecticut at the beginning of this year was 23,240 of 1,832,110 acres, as compared with 22,655 of 1,892,980 acres in 1920. The average value of farm land and buildings rose from $6,399 in 1920 to $8,736 this year, while the average value per acre increased from $100.20 to $110.69.

The number of farms operated and run by the owners has increased decidedly, rising from 19,666 in 1920 to 21,258, while those run by tenants—8.5 per cent. in 1920 and 6.4 this year—dropped from 1,919 to 1,488. Manager-operated farms in Connecticut fell from 1,070 to 494.

Farm land in Connecticut is valued at $92,986,358, and buildings at $110,709,412, while five years ago the values were $101,187,125 and $89,083,712, respectively.

Connecticut's farm land last year was made up of 534,354 acres of crop land, 784,779 acres of pasture land, 373,271 acres of woodland not pastured, and 139,706 acres of all other land.

Livestock on the farms has fallen off decidedly, horses dropping from 88,125 to 84,060; cattle, from 173,744 to 165,285; and swine, from 61,071 to 37,005. The only increases were in the number of mules, from 869 to 883, and dairy cows, from 112,622 to 113,866. The corn, white potato and tobacco acreage in Connecticut was less last year than in 1920, while the acreage in hay and corn silage had increased.

WILLIMANTIC WOMAN AT NAT'L W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

DETROIT, Nov. 18.—Delegates of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union are attending the 51st annual convention held in Detroit, Michigan, from November 11-19. Connecticut is represented by the state president, Mrs. Hattie M. Newton, Durham; Mrs. Mary E. Wailes, recording secretary, of Hartford; Mrs. Mary Lewis, Seymour; Mrs. Mabel Presser, Waterbury; Mrs. Dora E. W. Spratt, Clinton; Mrs. Birdella Clark, East Hartford; Mrs. Mary L. Stearns, Willimantic; Mrs. Elizabeth Hirsch, Wilton; Mrs. Mary J. Tuttle, Meriden. Besides the many well known speakers who have made their reputation as workers in the National W. C. T. U., there are many famous men and women on the programme who represent other organizations that stand with the White Ribboners in their efforts for the good of humanity. Among them Dr. G. G. Atkins, president of the Council of Churches; Dr. A. G. Studer, general secretary of Y. M. C. A. Frank Cody, superintendent of Detroit schools; Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who is now working as hard for the cause of peace as she formerly labored for votes for women; Judge Florence E. Allen, Ohio supreme court; Rev. F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of Anti-Saloon League of America; Miss Belle Kearney, state senator from Mississippi; General Lincoln C. Andrews, the new head of the law enforcement officers; Mrs. Sara Rowell Wright, president of Canadian W. C. T. U.; Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, World League Against Alcoholism.

At the get-together banquet held at the Statler hotel, each delegate found an automobile at her plate to remind her of the fact that this is the Automobile capital of the world. "Youth's Night" and the World's W. C. T. U. were held in the great auditorium of the Cass Technical high school. White Ribbon speakers occupied many of the Detroit pulpits on Sunday. Since the beginning of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union—51 years ago—more than 51 other women's organizations, from many different countries, have fallen into line and have adopted the white ribbon bow as their badge; so the desire of their great leader, Frances Willard, to "Wind the white ribbon around the world" is coming to pass. Miss Anna Adams Gordon is presiding for the last time as national president; for when she

YALE, LAFAYETTE AND FORDHAM ARE FAVORITES IN SATURDAY'S GAMES

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Form and record, untrustworthy barometers even in a season which have produced fewer upsets than this one, have made Yale, Lafayette and Fordham favorites over Harvard, Lehigh and Georgetown, respectively, in outstanding football games of the week-end.

The uncertainty of the gridiron game magnified by the element of traditional rivalry, draws an atmosphere of doubt around all three contests, however, which gives followers of opposing teams much hope.

This is particularly true at Cambridge, where Harvard, pointing to the smashing reverse suffered by Yale at the hands of Princeton last week, has been decidedly encouraged in its attempt to finish off a rather disappointing season with a redeeming triumph over the Blue-jerseyed boys.

Georgetown, recalling its string of four victories over Fordham prior to 1924, entertained ambitions of wiping out the New York eleven's 9-6 triumph last year, to take from the metropolis the chief claim to the Catholic college championship of the east.

Lehigh, crippled by the loss of many players through injuries, points to remarkable fights by supposedly weak teams in the past, particularly that of 1922, when Lafayette's powerful eleven barely gained with a three-point victory.

All six teams have had their final workouts. All have listened to words of exhortation from their coaches and from the captains of former great teams. All have been stirred by rousing student rallies. Physically and mentally, the warriors are charged with the spirit which has made these three classics among the choicest morsels of the season's menu.

Indications today were that Yale and Harvard would both use Saturday substantially the same lineups as last week. The right side of the Blue line, which crumpled before the rushes of Jake Slagle and Joe Prendergast in the Princeton game, has given way to Webster and Butterworth, respectively.

Harvard took increased hope today over the possibility of the team's star quarterback, Jake Stafford, starting against Yale. With Stafford, who has been recovering from injuries suffered in the Brown game, back at his position, the Crimson will have practically the same team which defeated Brown, although Kilgour probably will be used at left guard in place of Tripp, who held that position a week ago.

Crimson hopes also have been buoyed by the knowledge that the Yale defense has failed to stop opposing backs except in the Middlebury game—the only contest in which the Blue was not scored upon. Georgia, Brown and Army each made one touchdown, Pennsylvania beat Yale with 16 points, Maryland crossed the New Haven goal line twice, while Princeton capped the climax with four touchdowns.

The meeting here of Fordham and Georgetown at the Polo Grounds brings the best defensive teams in the east. The New York eleven, which is unbeaten and untied, has permitted opponents only 12 points in seven games. While Georgetown is not far behind, only 18 points having been scored by its foes. Three of these were scored by Bucknell, the only team to beat Georgetown.

Fordham has had difficulty this week solving the Georgetown attack as put on by a scrub team, the bewildering double and triple passes of the Capital eleven proving troublesome. Both teams are credited with having strong lines from tackle to tackle, while the backfields will have powerful backs in Cassidy and Hagerty to offset the rushes of Graham and Manning of Fordham.

Lehigh will endeavor to break Lafayette's string of six consecutive victories—the longest record of triumphs in their series. Lehigh's crippled force faces heavy odds against Lafayette whose impressive record includes a victory over Pittsburgh and a tie with Colgate.

STUDENT BODY SEES SQUAD IN LAST PRACTICE

CAMBRIDGE, Nov. 19—A. P.)—The Harvard football team today ran through its next to last practice of the year in preparation for the Yale game here next Saturday under the eyes of 1,000 undergraduates who marched to the stadium to cheer the players and coaches. Owing to the condition of several men on the injured list, Coach Bob Fisher would forecast no probable lineup for the game.

After practice the entire squad went to the Belmont Springs Country club for supper and 20 of the first string men remained over night. They will return for classes and practice tomorrow, it was said, after which the varsity will go back to the club, remaining until time to start for the field on Saturday.

The final practice will end at 5:30 tomorrow afternoon after which the squad will disband and the stadium will be turned over to the Yale players for their last workout. The varsity lined up today with Eagles at left end, Cassidy, left tackle; C. Bradford, left guard; Turner, center; Kilgour, right guard; Linder, right tackle; E. Bradford, right end; Captain Cheek, quarterback; Crosby, left halfback; Zaresky, right halfback; Miller, full back.

The cripples, Hoague, guard; Maher, halfback, and Stafford, quarterback, who started the Brown game and received a wrenched leg, all appeared on the field. Maher was the only one in uniform, working with Team E., and Stafford limped down on crutches. Dr. T. K. Richards, team physician, said that Stafford "might play" but that his condition precluded any possibility of being in top form.

Harvard supporters drew a measure of comfort from the report that Leo Healy, 190-pound guard who has been practically lost to the team for two seasons because of a recurring knee injury, has rounded into good condition and may possibly see action for half the game. It is believed that Daly's addition to the outer defense will strengthen materially both the offensive and defensive power of the team.

TOUGH GAMES FOR N. E. CONFERENCE TEAMS

STORRS, Nov. 19—The triple tie now existing between New Hampshire, Maine and Massachusetts Aggies, the three teams at the top in the race for honors in the New England Conference, may be broken Saturday. Massachusetts Aggies meets Tufts at Amherst, Mass., and in order to retain its present ranking, must turn in another victory. New Hampshire, earlier in the season, defeated Tufts 9-6.

Maine and Rhode Island have already finished their schedules for the season, and two more Conference elevens will complete their schedules Saturday. New Hampshire meets Brown at Providence in a contest that will in all probability dumble the Granite Staters from the ranks of the undefeated teams of the country. Connecticut Aggies will play Rensselaer at Troy, N. Y. The Massachusetts Aggies will not wind up their season until Thanksgiving Day, when Springfield college is met at Springfield.

PROFESSIONAL CONTRACTS BAR ATHLETE FROM FOOTBALL

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 19—A college football player who signs a contract to play professionally automatically loses his amateur standing. This was the ruling laid down today by Major John L. Griffith, western conference commissioner relative to reports that Harold "Red" Grange had agreed to play professional football after winding up his college career in the Illinois-Ohio State game Saturday.

Major Griffith said that the conference had no official rule on such an eventuality but asserted that the conference board of directors had ordained that in the case of baseball a player who signed a professional contract automatically lost his amateur standing. He said this rule would apply to football, basketball or any other sport.

The commissioner said he was positive that Grange had signed no contract to play professional football. He said he had investigated reports to this effect before he left the middle west to come here to make a number of addresses.

In case Grange has signed contracts for the use of his name commercially, Major Griffith said he could make no ruling. The board of directors of the conference, he said, will have to meet and decide whether such action constitutes professionalism.

GRANGE AGAIN DENIES SIGNING A CONTRACT

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 19—The latest denial of "Red" Grange to charges, insinuations and affidavits that he is tainted with professionalism came tonight after the famous red head had tried to hide from reporters all day.

After remaining in seclusion during the morning, Grange evaded reporters and hurried to the football field to practice for the first time in three days. There, a representative of the Associated Press found him on the field to show him an affidavit attested by E. P. Albertsen of Kokomo, Ind., to the effect that he had seen Grange's signature to a contract, with C. C. Pyle, Champaign theatre manager, making Pyle, Grange's agent.

Thereupon, Grange, in desperation issued one more denial of professionalism as follows:

"They have nothing on me. I have not received a penny. I have not signed a contract. If Pyle were asked the same question he would give the same answer. I am getting sick and tired of these constant rumors about my signing contracts to do this and the other."

Dr. George Huff, athletic director, and Coach Zuppke both said that they expect Grange to be in the lineup next Saturday against Ohio State.

HARRY MILLS SELECTED AS BEST PITCHER IN LEAGUE

Harry Mills who pitched 10 games for the East Ends in the Norwich Twilight League, has been chosen by the committee to award the prizes as the best pitcher in the league. The committee neglected to name the best pitcher at the first meeting but a recent meeting was held.

Mills pitched in 10 games, won 5 and lost four. Included in his wins was a no-hit, no-run game against one of the strongest clubs of the league. Mills pitched 55 innings, the most of any pitcher in the league, and in these 55 innings allowed but 47 hits. He fanned 43 batters and walked 21 and allowed only 10 earned runs.

There were other pitchers who lost fewer games but who had not pitched in the required seven games to make them eligible for a prize.

YALE SQUAD HAS LONG DRILL IN FUNDAMENTALS

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 19—(A. P.)—The final workout of the Yale football team today in preparation for its game with Harvard Saturday, consisted of a long signal drill and practice in fundamentals. Three of the regular backfield men were taken out before the drill had progressed far. It is not likely that Phil Bunnell, quarterback, who has an injured ankle, or Dan Allen, fullback, who is suffering from a bruised shoulder, will be able to play for more than a period against the Crimson. Bunnell was relieved today by Fishwick and Jerry Wadsworth took Allen's place.

The student body plans to give the team a big sendoff in front of the Y club tomorrow morning. The squad of forty-five men will leave New Haven at 10:30 o'clock and will have a workout in the Harvard stadium tomorrow afternoon.

ERROR GIVES WORCESTER A TIE INSTEAD OF LOSS

CLINTON, N. Y., Nov. 19—Clean sportsmanship scored again today when the Hamilton college undergraduate association announced correction of an error in the officiating of the football game here October 10 with Worcester Polytechnic Institute. Investigation showing that a play ruled a touchback was a touchdown instead. The result is that instead of Hamilton victory 12-6, as previously announced, offtcials of the local institution have changed the score to read 12-12.

A letter, explaining the situation, has been sent to the Worcester athletic officials by Hamilton. The decision makes the final record of the Hamilton team for the year, two victories, two ties and four defeats.

AGGIES LEAVE FOR TROY GAME TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 19—With the team slated to leave for Troy, N. Y., tomorrow noon, the Connecticut Aggies held their final practice for the Rensellaer contest here this afternoon. It will be the ninth and final contest of the year for the Aggies. Nanfeldt, who has been out with a bad ankle, will start at his regular tackle berth, though Schofield, regular quarterback, will be unable to play because of a knee injury.

Connecticut's kicking and passing game received attention this afternoon, Dole putting his punters and dropkickers through their paces first. This was followed by a long drill on the forward pass plays, after which the afternoon's work was wound up with an hour of snappy signal drill.

FINNEGAN GETS VERDICT OVER BILLY KENNEDY

WATERBURY, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Honeyboy Finnegan, of Boston, Mass., won the referee's decision over Billy Kennedy, of New Orleans, here tonight in a 12-round bout.

Kennedy surprised the new sensation of the featherweight division in the early rounds by counting with hard rights to the body and face of Finnegan, who was scoring points by leading with his left hand. The second round found Finnegan on the receiving end of a right punch to the chin that sent him down for the count of two but he rose readily and rallied to battle on even terms with his opponent, until the ninth.

In the ninth round, in a fast exchange of blows, Kennedy dazed Finnegan but the Boston boxer came right back and surprised the New Orleans battler by sending a left hook to the jaw that staggered him. The bell saved Kennedy in the closing rounds of the bout, both boxers worked on even terms. The decision was a popular one.

Eddie Lord, of Waterbury, won the referee's verdict over Red Garren, also of Waterbury in an eight round preliminary.

Pop Humphries, of England won the decision from Willie Shugrue, of Waterbury in an eight round bout.

Wop Mamoleum, of Boston, won the referee's decision over Willie Devlin, of Putnam in the eight round preliminary bout.

CHAPMAN TECH PLAYS AT WESTERLY TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 19—Chapman Tech will settle the question as to what position it is going to finish the season in the league with by the outcome of its game with Westerly High school tomorrow at Westerly. Tech has had hard luck this year and consequently has not found the securing of the championship as easy task.

Tomorrow's lineup will find Kopp at center with Caron and Knox at guards with Woodworth and R. Phillips ready to sub. The tackles are likely to be White and Borges. The end positions have several candidates with Borges and either Saechaletic or A. Aquillo ready to start. Montgomery and R. Aquillo are ready to play if needed. Everts as usual at quarterback with Morris Brown next in line, halfbacks John Brown and Captain Khnnanberg, with Miller finishing the backfield at fullback. Hewitt and Seagrave may play part time as backs.

WINDHAM WILL HANG UP THE MOLESKINS SOON

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 19—A policy of "watchful waiting" has been adopted by Coach Thomas Callaghan and his Windham school football eleven as the hopes for a post-season game in this city Saturday are being shattered or at least rudely jolted as each day passes.

No response to the telegram sent the Torrington High school authorities has been received.

According to Coach Callaghan's announcement yesterday afternoon, the members of the squad will turn in uniforms today if no reply is received from Torrington or if no other satisfactory overtures are received.

MASS. ROADS WILL BE PATROLLED SATURDAY

BOSTON, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—At a conference today between Capt. Beaupre, of the state constabulary and Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles, it was decided to patrol the roads leading to Boston from Providence, Springfield and the north on the day before and the day of the Harvard-Yale football game.

Because of the number of accidents in former years, it was announced orders will be issued to the state constabulary and inspectors of motor vehicles to apprehend anyone who is found driving in a manner to endanger the lives of the public.

NUTMEGS AND TIGERS COME TO TERMS FOR SUNDAY GAME

Sunday afternoon on the J. B. Martin field in Taftville the Nutmegs and the Greeneville Tigers will battle for the football championship of the city of Norwich. Both teams have practiced long and hard in preparation for this contest and the football fans in and around Norwich are assured that one of the fastest games ever seen in these parts will be played.

The lineup for the Greeneville Tigers will be the same as that that appeared against the Speedboys last Sunday in Jewett City. No lineup for the Nutmegs will be given out until directly before the game.

Whelan to Resign

BOSTON, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Dr. Charles Whelan, head coach of the Boston university football team, announced today that he would resign his position after the season's final game with Holy Cross next Saturday. He said he would give up coaching altogether to devote his full time to medicine.

SAM WILCOX BREAKS ALLEY RECORD AS RIVERVIEW DOWNS JEWETT CITY

Sam Wilcox in leading the Riverview Bowling Five to a three string victory over Joe Faber's Jewett City team at the Riverview alleys Thursday evening broke the alley record in the second string of the match. Wilcox's string was 152 and shattered the record held by Harry Mills at 175.

In piling up the record total Sam showed almost perfect control and in the ten boxes made the most of his breaks. He started off with a spare, the next three boxes were strikes and the fifth brought him a seven pin spare. The sixth box was one of two boxes in which he did not get a mark but did get ten pins. In the seventh he got an eight pin spare, two nine pin spares followed this but in the tenth box he missed an opportunity to make a spare as his ball missed the lone pin.

The Riverview team piled up the large score of 1761 pins for a total for three strings while the visitors were only able to topple over 1534 of the maples. The scores:

INDOOR LEAGUE WILL OPEN ON NOV. 30TH

At the meeting of the Indoor Baseball league at the Armory Thursday evening the following schedule was drawn up by the managers of the four teams: Nov. 30, 6:30, Nutmegs vs. Tigers; 9:30, Battery B vs. Faber's All Stars; Dec. 7, 6:30, Battery B vs. Nutmegs; 9:30 Faber's All Stars vs. Tigers; Dec. 14, 6:30, Faber's All Stars vs. Tigers; 9:30, Nutmegs vs. Battery B; Dec. 21, 6:30 Tigers vs. Battery B, 9:30 Faber's All Stars vs. Nutmegs; Dec. 28, 6:30, Nutmegs vs. Tigers; 9:30 Battery B vs. Faber's All Stars; Jan. 4, 6:30, Battery B vs. Nutmegs, 9:30 Faber's All Stars vs. Tigers; Jan. 11, 6:30, Faber's All Stars vs. Tigers, 9:30 Nutmegs vs. Battery B; Jan. 18, 6:30, Tigers vs. Battery B, 9:30, Faber's All Stars vs. Nutmegs.

The above schedule is subject to change and therefore cannot be considered as final. It will be noticed that the schedule is divided into two halfs the first beginning Nov. 30 and ending Dec. 21. The second half begins Dec. 28 and the league will probably wind up Jan 18.

All games will be played Monday evenings. There will be two games in the evening, one beginning at 6:30 and the other beginning at 9:30 P. M.

There is no reason why this league should not be a success as many fast players are signed up on all four teams.

QUALIFYING RULE FOR AMATEUR GOLF ADOPTED

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Adoption of the sectional qualifying plan for the national amateur championship tournament has been taken under consideration by the United States Golf association.

Claiming that this innovation looms as the best solution of problems which were not satisfactorily handled last summer at Oakmont by a reduction in the number of qualifiers from 32 to 16, well informed officials here said today that they would not be surprised to see a recommendation for the adoption of this method presented to the annual U. S. G. A. meeting in Chicago January 9.

They pointed out that the sectional idea not only would enable the association to qualify the leading players of the country, but also would make possible the elimination of congestion at the tournament proper without depriving match play of many outstanding stars, such as occurred last summer as a result of the cutting of the qualifying field in half.

ACADEMY HAS LAST HARD PRACTICE OF SEASON

The Academy are nearing the end of their week's preparation for Saturday's game with Stonington, and it looks as though it would take a college team with Grange in its lineup to stop them. Following their lay-off Monday afternoon Coach Whitney has kept the entire squad busy practicing until late hours every day.

In their last contest these two teams battled furiously to a scoreless tie. The local boys are out to prove that they are able to send Stonington home defeated. No changes of importance have been made in the N. F. A. lineup and it is expected that the team that sant Chapman Tech home last week on the tail end of a 19 to 0 score will take the field against Stonington Saturday afternoon.

Horton Elected Green Captain

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 19—N. M. Horton fo Peekskill, N. Y., a Dartmouth junior, was today elected captain of next year's varsity football team. Horton played full back for the green this season. Last year he won his letter by relieving Leavitt at fullback in the game with Cornell in New York City.

MANAGING EDITORS ARE CONTROLLING PLAYER-WRITING

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Managing editors, and not baseball authorities, control the matter of player-writing in the opinion of Commissioner Landis.

"If the player's contributions are not up to the requirements of a paper it is for the managing editors of those papers to curb the market," the commissioner said while passing through New York on his way to Washington. "I don't see where either myself or the Baseball Writers' association has anything to do with whether or not a player contracts to write articles.

"It is not for me to say to the players that they shall not write for publication any more than it is for me to say that they shall not have gardens in their back yards."

The question of player-writing arose when Roger Peckinpaugh and other members of the Washington Americans appeared before the commissioner during the world's series following a statement which appeared under Peckinpaugh's name criticising an umpire for a decision at second base.

ROCQUE WILL COACH HOCKEY AT B. C. AGAIN

NEWTON, Mass., Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Fred Rocque, former Boston College and Boston Athletic association hockey coach, will coach the Boston College sextet this winter, it was announced today. Rocque, after developing championship teams at B. C. and the B. A. A., went to Minneapolis where he has been coaching that city's amateur team for the past two years.

Corn Husking Contest

BURGESS, Ill., Nov. 19.—(AP)—Illinois today won first and second places in the interstate corn husking contest here. Elmer Williams, Toulon, Ills., was the victor, husking 2,504.2 pounds of corn in one hour and 8t minutes or an average of 250 bushels for a ten hour day. Walter Olsen, Knox county, was second.

Sport Notes

Jack Slagle, Princeton halfback, who raced 82 yards to a touchdown through the entire Yale team Saturday, has not retired from football although the schedule has ended. He will play a forward position in the soccer contest with Pennsylvania this week. Gates, a tackle on the gridiron, will be alongside him.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

Isadore Seidler of New York, has been elected captain of the city college football eleven for 1926.

Reports from financial circles make Yale a two to one favorite over Harvard Saturday despite the defeat at the hands of Princeton.

The college of the City of New York has scheduled fourteen games for its baseball season. McGill University of Canada is one of the opposing quintets.

The victories of the Dominion Professional Hockey League defeated the Canadians of Montreal Wednesday night in an exhibition game, 5 to 3, scoring four goals in the last period.

Alf Goulet, reported to have retired from bicycle racing last season, has been paired with Cecil Walker, for the six day event which starts in new Madison Square garden November 23.

Twenty four members of the Amherst's football squad, champion of the "Little Three," have been awarded insignia and gold footballs by the student council. Last year only 16 men were recognized.

Tex Rickard has sacrificed capacity for comfort in the new Madison Square garden. Seats will be wide enough for even some of the large spectators. Leather cushions, 18 inches wide, will grace the ringside chair.

Any chance that Columbia had of winning the annual intercollegiate cross country run in New York Monday appears to have disappeared with the edict by the I. C. A. A. A. officials that Schmid and Theobald cannot participate on account of the three year rule.

Washington "Goose" has run afoul of ducks. Leon Goslin, leftfielder of the American League champions, suffered a lacerated hand while wielding a gun in the meadows of New Jersey Wednesday, "Im off hunting for the rest of my baseball days;" the slugger said after the accident.

BOY SCOUT PRESENTED HONOR MEDAL FOR BRAVERY

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—George Dickerson, fourteen, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Dickerson, 235 Smith street, second class boy scout of Troop six, was presented with the honor medal of the Boy Scouts of America tonight in recognition for his bravery last February when he saved Robert Phalen, eight, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Phalen, of 104 Jefferson street, from drowning in Johnson's creek, when the young boy had fallen through the ice. Dickerson, when he went to rescue the boy was forcibly held back by older men on the shore, but he finally broke away.

Young Dickerson had been spearing eels through a hole in the ice in Johnson's creek on February 17 this year. The Phalen boy had been playing out on the ice about 100 feet from shore. As the young boy broke through the ice, cries from others on the shore attracted his attention to the strugglings among the ice cakes. Dickerson ran to the nearest spot on the shore from where the Phalen boy was floundering in the ice water.

Jumping ice cakes on his way out, he plunged into the water with all his clothes on and caught the Phalen boy, swimming with him to a place on the ice where it was sound enough to land. Pushing the young boy on the solid ice he himself clambered over and started to drag the half unconscious form to the shore. After having gone a few feet the ice again began to give away and quickly shoving the boy to safety, he himself was once more precipitated into the icy water. He managed to get upon the ice again and this time was successful in reaching the shore, where he and the youth whom he had saved were taken care of.

Beyond the shock and exposure neither of the boys suffered any ill effects from their ducking.

Difference of opinion is the greatest common divisor.

DWELLING HOUSES MENACED BY FIRE IN BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Fire of unknown origin breaking out in a storage shed of the [illegible] and R. Paper company, owned by Samuel Herncovitz and located on the original Tom Thumb property on Tom Thumb street, shortly after 6:30 this evening, threatened an entire block of dwelling houses before it was subdued by the firemen, after a second alarm had been sent in.

The fire was confined to a storage shed, work shop and garage owned by the paper company, while the Coachman's house of Tom Thumb, which was slightly damaged. The mansion of the late P. T. Barnum, king of drawls, which is located at the corner of North avenue and Main street, was saved by the firemen although a huge elm tree in the rear of the house burned like a torch. Firemen were obliged to play streams of water continually on the mansion and four other houses located near the fire area.

After an hour's hard work, which was praised by Henry N. McCatherson, president of the board of fire commissioners, who was present at the fire, the firemen had the blaze under control. The buildings, which were wooden, contained much paper stock. The storage shed, garage and workroom were burned to the ground, with a loss of over $10,000.

COURT DENIES EDNA B. HAWLEY A DIVORCE

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Edna B. Hawley, Shelton, is not entitled to a divorce from George H. Hawley, Jr., formerly associated with the American Brass company, Ansonia, and now a resident of Kenosha, Wis., it is determined by Judge Newell Jennings in a memorandum of decision filed this afternoon in superior court.

Mrs. Hawley, who was married on November 3, 1914, and who has two sons, eight and six, testified in court several weeks ago that her husband was cold toward her and lost interest in his home and family. Her physician said he would recommend to her that, for the sake of her health, that she not take up her home again with her husband.

"A careful examination of the testimony in this case," says Judge Jennings, "has confirmed me in my opinion that it falls short of establishing intolerable cruelty on the part of the defendant within the meaning of our statute."

DEM. MEDIATION COMMITTEE TO MEET IN WATERBURY

HARTFORD, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—The mediation committee appointed by the democratic state central committee to try to arbitrate internal differences as to a proposed reorganization of the party in this state will meet at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon in the law office of ex-Mayor William E. Thoms, of Waterbury.

The committee is understood to stand deadlocked with regard to a choice of candidates for chairman of the state central committee and member of the democratic national committee. Mayor David E. FitzGerald, of New Haven and Comptroller Peter FitzHenry, of Waterbury, are opposing candidates for the former office, and Thomas J. Spellacy, the democratic organization candidate for national committeeman, is opposed by the reorganization group within the party under the leadership of Dr. Edward C. Dolan, of Manchester. An effort has been made to induce ex-Congressman Augustine Lonergan to become a candidate against Spellacy for the national committee seat. Minor offices in the democratic party are also to be acted upon, among them that of vice chairman of the state committee, and secretary.

NEW HAVEN WELCOMES DR. WILFRED T. GRENFELL

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, of the International Grenfell association, was welcomed to New Haven today and in an address at the United church parish house, told of his work in the north.

"Labrador," he said, "is a country of great natural resources. This country which is one of the richest fishing places in the world, lacks only publicity to open up roads to development of the resources that are idle only because they are unknown to the majority of men. In spite of the smallness of the area, it is even now a competitor of the Norwegian fisheries and it is accepted fact that the Labrador salmon are the fattest and the finest in the world.

"The country is still in a very primitive state although since I first went up there thirty years ago great progress has been made, both in the living conditions of the people and in the state of industry in the country."

MORE STOCKS TO PAY CHRISTMAS DIVIDENDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Wall street today received news of eight more "Christmas dividends" representing increased or extra distributions of about $2,500,000 in cash payable around the holiday season.

Directors of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad declared an extra dividend of 1 per cent. on the common stock in addition to the regular semi-annual rate of 3 1-3 per cent., making total distributions for the current year of 9 per cent., the largest since 1906. The extra dividend is payable out of non-operating income.

The New England Telephone & Telegraph company announced a quarterly dividend of $2, restoring the stock to an $8 basis the last two quarterly payments have been $1. An increase in the company's capitalization from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 also was approved.

An extra dividend of $2, in addition to the regular quarterly payment of $2 was declared on the common stock of the Railway Steel Spring company. Directors also recommended that the present 435,000 shares of common stock of $100 par value be increased to 405,000 shares of $50 par, two shares of the new to be exchanged for one of the old, and that in addition a stock dividend of 50 per cent. be paid on the new stock.

The Texas Gulf Sulphur company declared an extra dividend of 75 cents on the common stock.

The Florsheim company declared an initial dividend of 40 cents a share on the class A stock and 25 cents a share on the common stock.

Directors of the Electric Investors, Inc., declared a stock dividend of 1 per cent.

The Chesebrough Manufacturing company declared an extra dividend of 62 1-2 cents on the common stock and the regular quarterly payment of the same amount.

Odd Court Cases in 1656

A page from a Massachusetts court docket for the year 1656 reveals that Henry Walton was fined for saying that he had an leave hear a dog bark as to hear the Rev. Cobbell preach; that Robert Edwards was fined for excess in apparel in wearing sleeve lace and gold buttons; that John Soudy was fined for stealing his master's ox and selling it to him and that Sarah Collins was fined for railing at her husband.—Detroit News.

Palace Theatre

In these days of stupendous and hurried effort on the part of producers in the studios, a motion picture of ten parts written, directed and produced by one man at his necessary leisure constitutes a distinct novelty.
Such a production is "The Gold Rush," Charlie Chaplin's new feature length comedy-drama of Alaska, coming to the Palace Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday under a United Artists Corporation release.
Chaplin started filming the picture on February 7, 1924, after months of preparation, and the final scenes were taken on April 16, 1925. Many feet of film was used in the making, and the task of cutting and editing, the synchronization of scenes and action, said to be one of the secrets of Chaplin successes, required months more.

Broadway Theater

The management of the Broadway theater praised his program for the last half of this week very highly, but from all indications it was not praised nearly enough. This reviewer claims it to be absolutely the best program that ever came to this city.
We should class every act as a feature for a distinct hit was scored by each individual act and again it must be said that there is nothing like Keith vaudeville.
You'll see comedy, singing, dancing, music in that extraordinary feature, with eight people. Dainty June Howick's Musical Revue, featured in the biggest vaudeville houses in the country.
Sammy Clark kept all in hysterics with his Klean Komedy Kapers.
John Gans, the singing minor with the silvery tenor voice, assisted by Viola Allen, was as fine a singing act as anyone would want to hear.
Don Romaine and and William Castle brought down the house with the comedy and yodelling finish.
Fred and Hazel Gardner's Maniacs is a novelty for young and old. We advise all parents to take the children along.

Palace Theatre

Hadji Ali was a sensation at the Palace last night. As he baffled and mystified several doctors at the Waurega hotel yesterday so did he mystify and baffle his audience all day yesterday at the Palace. In full view of the audience Hadji Ali drank two gallons of water and topped this off with two quarts of kerosene then proved where he got the name of the human volcano by igniting the kerosene as it left his lips and then quenched the fire with the water he had previously drank. It is without doubt one of the most unusual performances ever given in Norwich. The Rose Marie Revue with nine girls and two boys received several encores. Carter and Cornish opened the bill with some fast stepping that called for two encores and several curtain calls. Francis Brisk a little lady all by herself followed the big revue and held up the most difficult spot on the bill. Garron, Storr and Chris two clever boys and a girl kept the audience well entertained with their song numbers and their comedy skit. Sydney Olcott who directed Little Old New York has given us another bright story in The Best People. Its Cabaret night tonight. All the acts are joining in one big act after the regular show so the patrons will see a double bill of vaudeville tonight.

Bread Theater

William Fox has too sure a finger on the pulse of the public not to have realized that the time was ripe for another great American epic. Accordingly, with that in mind, he began months ago, to gather material for the production of The Iron Horse, story of the first transcontinental railroad. The finished picture has been playing at the Bread for the past week and has created much favorable—even enthusiastic comment from all who have seen it.
John Ford, who directed it, displayed a most happy faculty for combining, in just the right proportions his elements of comedy, pathos, patriotism and romance. It never drags for a minute. The interest is sustained to the end.
The story begins in Springfield, Illinois, where Abe Lincoln lived and where a man named Brandon dreamed of iron rails which should connect the east and the west. With his son, Davey, he set out one day to find the best trail for those rails to follow, and was murdered by hostile Indians. Years later, Dave, who had become a pony express rider, escapes from a band of Indians who had shot his horse from under him, by leaping to the platform of a train. It was the first train to cut its way through the western wilderness. Construction on the railroad had started at Omaha, working west, to meet other rails which had started at Sacramento, working east.
It took three years to complete the William Fox photoplay. The Iron Horse, including the time spent in research work before the actual filming of the story. Members of the cast and five thousand extras spent many rigorous months on the Nevada desert and in the Sierra range living in tents and lean-to shacks. During the winter months they endured the same hardships so far as the elements were concerned, as those experienced by the transcontinental pioneers they portrayed.

CROSS-EXAMINATION WILTS RHINELANDER

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 19—(A. P.)—The Rhinelander annulment trial, thus far filled with one sensation after another, took a sudden turn today when an early adjournment was taken until tomorrow, under unusually dramatic circumstances.

Introduction of one of the "mystery" letters that Leonard Kip Rhinelander wrote his negro bride, Alice Beatrice Jones, from whom he now seeks freedom, precipitated the adjournment. After subjecting Rhinelander to a steady line of intimate questions as to his premarital relations with Alice, Lee Parsons Davis, handed him the letter and said: "Read that." When Young Rhinelander had finished Mr. Davis requested a recess during which Justice Morschauser, Mr. Davis and Isaac N. Mills, counsel for the plaintiff, went into the judge's chambers. Fifteen minutes later Justice Morschauser resumed the bench and announced adjournment until tomorrow, although it was not yet 3 o'clock.

The buzz of astonishment among the spectators, which arose during the recess, was redoubled and the crowded courtroom slowly emptied amid excited comment. Mr. Mills, asked if the cause had been withdrawn, replied:

"There has been no withdrawal of the case and there will not be."

Although Young Rhinelander had taken the stand this morning refreshed after his ordeal of yesterday when he twice complained of fatigue, he wilted rapidly again today and by the time adjournment was taken again was wan and haggard. Several times in the midst of the sharp cross-examination, Mr. Mills came to his aid with objections to the repetition of certain questions put by Mr. Davis. "He's trying to break him down physically with these questions," Mr. Mills complained but Justice Morschauser overruled him.

It was the afternoon cross-examination that fatigued Rhinelander. Mr. Davis took up the question of the week in December, 1921, when Alice and Leonard remained at the Hotel Marie Antoinette in New York as man and wife. One question after another brought violent blushes to Young Rhinelander's face while the courtroom occasionally gasped. In the midst of it, Mr. Davis produced the "mystery" letter. What was in this letter was not made public, but from the line of questions preceding it, it was indicated that it contained information which Mr. Davis believes unusually sensational.

Yesterday he showed one of these "mystery" letters to Young Rhinelander and then asked him if he wanted to go on with the case. To this, Rhinelander said, "yes."

While it was said in court that legal procedure would not permit withdrawal of the suit at this time, it was believed an attempt might be made to exclude some of the testimony through an agreement of counsel.

During the morning session Rhinelander testified that he thought George Jones, Alice's father, an Englishman suffering from jaundice. He denied that Mr. Jones had told him he was a mulatto and again insisted that Alice had assured him she was white. Grace Jones, Alice's sister, was asked to rise in court, and Rhinelander said he had not suspected she was a negress when he first met her. He told again the story of how he and a friend had met Grace, when their automobile broke down, and revealed that at first he had gone out with her and given her a ring. Later he transferred his affection to Alice, he said.

In an effort to refute the contention of the plaintiff's lawyers that Young Rhinelander was hare-brained and so easy prey for a designing woman, Mr. Davis brought out that Leonard had graduated at the head of his class in school. He showed that Rhinelander had been editor of his school paper, had written humorous poetry and was active in the athletic life of the school.

At one point of the cross-examination, Rhinelander said that even now he could not see traces of negro blood in the Jones family although it has been admitted that Mr. Jones is part negro. He had seen Mr. Jones in a bathrobe, he admitted, but never suspected his colored blood.

Mr. Davis brought out that Rhinelander had lived with Alice after their marriage almost a week, even though the newspapers were filled with accounts of his marriage to a negress.

"I had my doubts on November 12," he testified, "but when she told me her side, I decided not to leave her."

"Did you doubt her on the succeeding days until the 20th when you left her?" asked Davis.

"I believed her when she told me she was white," the witness responded.

Because of the nature of testimony yesterday, today's crowd that stormed the courtroom was unusually heavy and by 8 o'clock this morning, two hours before court opened, the room was filled and the doors shut. One of the late comers was the Rev. Lavinia Verrill Howe, daughter of Professor A. E. Verrill of Yale university, who succeeded in getting a place when she sent a note to Mr. Davis. The note said that she was writing of the trial for a religion magazine and needed to study "the mental reactions of humanity," for the work.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Coming to the Breed

Id Corinne Griffith's forthcoming First National picture, The Marriage Whirl, which will be seen at the Breed theater Sunday, the entrance to the cafe is designed, to represent or symbolize the Temple of Jazz at which the present generation is so apt to worship. Its walls are somber, almost sinister, and its doorways are gaping mouths suggestive of the slogan, so familiar about "Those who enter here leave hope behind."

One by one the characters in The Marriage Whirl are swallowed up by this monster to the tune of syncopations suggestive of barbarous cannibals, furnished by negro musicians. In this Parisian cafe is enacted much of the most dramatic action in this production.

Schwartz Bros. Opening Toyland

Saturday morning Schwartz Bros. will open to the public the largest and finest toy store in eastern Connecticut. Recognizing the fact that there has for a long time been a strong and popular demand for a store in Norwich exclusively for toys, Schwartz Bros., decided that Norwich should have such a store. They have taken over the store formerly occupied by the F. A. Wells company, next door to their large furniture establishment and have filled the entire store with a $25,000 stock of toys of every description. The store will be known as Schwartz Bros.' Toyland, and will be conducted under the management of C. M. Brown, with a force of six clerks. Nothing will be on display in the entire store but toys, the only exclusively toy store in eastern Connecticut.

Men have been at work all this week arranging the large and varied assortment of toys and the store will be ready to open for business Saturday morning. As a matter of fact Toyland was practically ready for its opening day Thursday evening.

If Santa Claus should happen to pay a visit to Schwartz Bros. Toyland, and he would be heartily welcomed if he should happen to put in an appearance, he would probably come away with the idea that Schwartz Bros., had transported his entire Christmas stock of toys from his workshop in the far north to the Main street store. And when the thousands of boys and girls in eastern Connecticut visit Toyland they will find themselves in a veritable fairyland.

There is everything imaginable in the store that the youthful generation could want. There will be on display, for instance, a varied line of doll carriages, from the smallest to the largest and from the lowest price to the highest price. In this display there will be 300 doll carriages alone. In addition there are complete toy bed room suites, parlor suites, and various complete room outfits, in fact everything to furnish the modern girl's playhouse.

To interest the boys there are numerous tri-cycles, automobiles of all makes and models, fire department autos, runabouts, touring cars, sedans. Then there will be electric trains, various sized engines and cars, the famous Flexible Fliers, complete golf outfits, practical pool tables standing three feet in height with pool balls and cues complete, all sizes of tool chests, trunks, express wagons etc. And then for the smaller children there are all kinds of kiddie carts mechanical toys, etc.

Everything on display is practical as Schwartz Bros. have adopted a policy of not cluttering up their space with worthless articles. The window displays are unusually attractive.

Demonstrated Magee Ranges

A demonstration of the Magee range which was given Thursday in the window of the Gilbert Furniture company's new store on Broadway, drew an interested crowd. Mrs. J. A. Carlson, of Waterbury, was in charge, cooking a number of different articles in the range which gave visible proof of its fine quality.

COLUMBIA

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Carver have returned from their wedding trip, and are now at home to friends at their home at Columbia Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Brown left on Monday morning for Dade City, Fla., where they will spend the winter.

Mrs. Carleton Davenport and two children of Shelbourne Falls, Mass. are spending a week with Mrs. Davenport's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Porter.

Several Columbia residents felt the jar of the quake on Saturday morning.

Word has been received here of the death in Manchester of Mrs. Martha Holbrook, widow of George Holbrook, aged 90 years. Mrs. Holbrook was a resident of Columbia for many years moving to Manchester about eight years ago. She is survived by her daughter Miss Ida Holbrook. The funeral was held from her late residence in Manchester and burial was in the Columbia cemetery.

Mr. George Pinckney and son of New Haven were callers on Sunday at the home of Mr. Pinckney's sister, Mrs. Howard Rice.

The following circular has been issued by the state in connection with the Well Child conference which is to be held at Columbia town hall on Tuesday afternoon, November 24th from 2 to 4 o'clock.

The mothers in Connecticut who have been taking advantage of the Well Child Conferences have learned the value of giving their little children the right food. They have even had it brought to their notice that adult food, such as fried food, rich pastries, tea and coffee, partaken of by their little children, will keep them underweight, in a highly nervous condition, fretful and unmanageable.

All this has been called to their attention by those who are in attendance at the Well Child conferences. After the doctor has examined the children, the nurses advise the mothers about the child's hygiene, and make a special point of the value of choosing the right food. Often a dental hygienist is also present to instruct the mother in the care of the teeth. Mothers are beginning to realize through this advice that the constant care of the teeth is of great importance in the later health of the child. They have learned that each child should have its own tooth brush, and sould be used regularly. It has also been called to their attention that they should watch for the development of the six year molar, as this is the first one of the permanent teeth. By cleaning the teeth thoroughly each day, and by choosing foods which are rich in vitamines and mineral elements such as are found in whole milk and in vegetables, and by the use of stale bread which must be chewed thoroughly, children will soon develop sound teeth.

Admiral in Dilemma

Two English cruisers recently visited Varna, Bulgarian port on the Black Sea. A banquet at which King Boris was present was given on one of the cruisers. Great excitement prevailed as the king stepped on deck and the Bulgarian national anthem was played. All British officers and sailors were told to stand at attention and so they did until Boris started walking. The puzzled British admiral was in a dilemma whether to honor the hymn or run after the King. He chose the latter.

GALES FERRY

Noyes B. Allyn, promoter and collector of a permanent fund for the Methodist church, of Gales Ferry, for the past 20 years, reports to November 17, the amount collected by him was $4,103. The banner year has been 1925, when nearly $700 has been given.

Rev. George Smith Brown attended a conference of ministers held at the M. E. parsonage, Norwich, with Rev. J. Harlow Graham, Monday evening. The purpose of the conference was to consider the federation of Men's Bible classes. Those in attendance were District Superintendent Rev. Myron E. Genter, of Norwich; Rev. M. S. Stocking, of Westerly; Rev. J. W. Carter, Jewett City; Rev. H. H. Conklin, of Baltic, and Rev. Charles Smith, of Uncasville. Later Rev. and Mrs. Genter and son and daughter with Rev. and Mrs. Brown and young son, Jarvis, and Rev. Mr. Carter, of Jewett City, were guests at supper of Rev. and Mrs. Graham.

The Ladies' Aid society of the M. E. church, and the Long Cove auxiliary held an all-day meeting at the vestry Thursday, eighteen members were present. The work was on luncheon sets, outlining for quilts, and reed work in baskets, and table mats. At 1 o'clock, a luncheon of cold ham, potato salad, sandwiches, olives, cake, grapes, brownies and tea was served. The luncheon committee was Mrs. Delphine Fish, Mrs. Charles A. Roy, Miss Susan Mathewson. A business meeting of the society was held later in the afternoon, the vice president, Mrs. Nelson Parker, presiding. A committee, appointed to fix prices on articles to be entered at the Christmas sale, is Mrs. R. Irving Hurlbutt, Miss Sarah T. Latimer, Mrs. Henry W. Hurlbutt and Mrs. Fish. The society voted to discontinue furnishing refreshments at the Sunday evening services. Plans for a chicken pie supper were discussed, and solicitors were appointed as follows: For Gales Ferry, west of the railroad bridge, Miss Susan Mathewson; east of bridge, Mrs. Nelson Parker, north of Gales Ferry, Miss Mabel Smith; Long Cove, Mrs. Fred W. Turner, Mrs. Fred E. Richards and Mrs. James A. Stoddard; Lester district, Mrs. James S. Abbott, Allyn's Point, Mrs. P. L. Norman, Mrs. Amos Main; Stoddard district, Mrs. Avery Main.

Local people who attended the production of "Princess Bonnie," at the Broadway theatre, Norwich, Tuesday evening, were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Edmund Norman, Mrs. Nelson Parker and daughter, Margaret Parker, Mrs Delphine Fish, Mrs. Mary C. Watrous, Miss C. B. Freeman and Walter M Buckingham.

The Long Cove auxiliary of the Ladies' Aid society of the M. E. church, held its Wednesday afternoon meeting at the home of Mrs. John McGuire, with a large attendance. The work was on quilts. Mrs. McGuire, assisted by her daughters, Mrs. Aubrey Baxter, and Miss Laura McGuire, with Mrs. Sidney Sawyer, of Pequonoc Bridge, a guest, served refreshments.

Miss Caroline B. Freeman is leaving Saturday, to spend the winter with friends in Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Mrs. J. A. Birch was a visitor at the home of her sister, Mrs. Monett A. Lawson, at Long Cove, Thursday.

LOWEST TIDE IN 12 YEARS NOTED DURING THIS WEEK

(Special to The Bulletin)

GALES FERRY, Nov. 19—Late Tuesday afternoon, between 4 and 5 o'clock, the lowest tide in the Thames river, that has been witnessed since January 4, 1913, twelve years ago, was noted. What is known as the middle grounds, between the little channel on the extreme right side of the river running near the shore at Gales Ferry, and the main channel, starting at a point below the Yale quarters, and extending south to a point above Brown's Crossing, was entirely bare, a long tract of land, which looked dry, had the appearance of new territory and caused much wonder. Some of the residents never having seen this effect before, the unusual phenomenon impressed them. The extremely high tides and the strong west winds for several days, produced this condition.

THE SEA WIND.

Speed through the closing gates of the day,
Winnow me through with thy keen, clean breath,
Wind with the tang of the sea!
Find me, and fold me; have thy way
And take thy will of me!

Use my soul as you used the sky—
Gray sky of this sullen day!
Clean its doubts as you sped its wrack
Of storm-cloud, bringing its splendor back,
Giving it gold for gray!

Bring me word of the moving ships,
Halyards and straining spars;
Come to me clean from the sea's wide breast,
While the last lights die in the yellow west,
Under the first white stars!

Batter the cloud-doors of my heart
And set my spirit free!
For I stifle here in this crowded place,
Sick for the tenantless fields of space,
Wind with the tang of the sea!

The woman who finds it something of a task to dress twice a day may find consolation in the statement that there is at least one woman who has been obliged to change her dress 126 times every week for several months on end. This is the record of a prominent actress appearing in a recent successful play on the New York stage. Her part required her to change her costume twelve times at each performance which with the change into street costume meant fourteen times a day, and double that number on each of the two matinee days—a total of 126 changes in the course of the week.

France has taken steps to protect the prehistoric art of the caveman from damage by vandals. Dr. C. E. Resser, geologist of the United States National Museum, who has recently returned from the Dordogne cave region of southern France, reports that the government now requires that the caves be locked to prevent unauthorized visits of sightseers who have formerly frequently written or carved their names and initials on the paintings and drawings made probably 20,000 years ago by primitive artists as part of religious rites. In the principal caveman shrine containing colored animal pictures, the low, narrow galleries in which the cave artist worked by the dim light of his lamp, electric lights have now been placed to avoid the damage from the smoking candles.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Lightfoot the Deer Has a Scare

With not a thing to fear in sight.
Some folk will run in sudden fright.
—Old Mother Nature.

Have you ever seen Buster Bear run? Buster looks to be so clumsy that it isn't easy to imagine him running very fast. But when Buster is in a hurry he can get over the ground at surprising speed. Buster was in a hurry when he left that hunter who unknowingly had treed him there in the Green Forest, and whom he had surprised and scared by dropping down beside him without warning. Yes, indeed, Buster was in a hurry. I doubt if ever in all his life he had been in more of a hurry. He was down that hill and out of sight amongst the trees before that hunter really understood what had happened. And that was a good thing for Buster for that hunter had a terrible gun and he had gone to the Green Forest for the special purpose of shooting Buster Bear. By the time he had recovered from his scare enough to remember that he had a gun in his hand, Buster had disappeared.

Yes, Buster was in a hurry when he left that hunter. There was but one thought in that black head of his and this was to get away from that terrible gun as quickly as he could. He didn't think of where he was going or what others might think who saw him running. He didn't care. So he plunged headlong through brush and over logs and between trees and kept right on this way long after he was far beyond all danger from that hunter with the terrible gun.

Now it happened that Lightfoot the Deer was lying down in a thicket drowsing. He was lying in such a way that the wind blew in his face so that if it carried the scent of an approaching enemy he would be sure to get it. His big ears kept moving to catch every little sound. You see, Lightfoot knew that the season of dreadful fear had come, the hunting season. So, though he drowsed he drowsed lightly and his nose and his big ears were constantly at work.

A crash in the brush brought Lightfoot to his feet like a flash and there he stood motionless, his great soft eyes wide with fear, his ears forward, his legs set for a quick spring. Out from among some small spruce trees and straight into that very thicket plunged Buster Bear. With a snort of fright Lightfoot bounded away in another direction, bounded as if there were great springs in his legs. His first thought had been that Buster Bear was after him. But, when after the first few bounds he found that Buster was running in quite another direction, he began to wonder.

Buster was in a hurry

"Buster Bear was frightened. Yes, sir, Buster Bear was frightened, as frightened as ever I have been in all my life," said Lightfoot to himself as he stood in a distant thicket looking and listening. "Now, what could have frightened him like that? He wasn't after me at all, but was running away from something. I don't know of anything that could give great big Buster Bear such a scare as that excepting a hunter with a terrible gun. That must be what it was. It must be that Buster saw a hunter. If that is so I must be on the watch. That hunter probably is looking for me. I wonder just where he is. It is a lot easier when one knows just where danger is. My, I fear I will not get over it all day. I certainly won't until I know what frightened him."

Meanwhile Buster Bear had gone crashing on, frightening half to death all the little people who happened to be within hearing of the noise he made. So, by the time he stopped to get his breath and anxiously look back all that part of the Green Forest through which he had passed was holding its breath, so to speak, and wondering what dreadful danger was abroad. You know how when you throw a stone in water the little circles keep widening and widening and going farther and farther in all directions. Well, it was just that way with the fear that that hunter started when he frightened Buster Bear. For some time all was so still over there in the Green Forest that had you happened along there you wouldn't have known that there were any little people anywhere about.

Oliver Woodhouse lodge, Knights of Pythias, held a special meeting in Pythian hall Thursday evening. The rank of esquire was conferred on a class of three pages. Two applications were received. After the work of the evening an entertainment and lunch was provided, by the entertainment committee. The lodge during the past year has lost several members who left town because business has been very slack. It is hoped and members have promised that the loss will be made good and a gain shown at the end of the next term, July 1st, 1926. Plans are being made for a big night when the candidates now going through receive the rank of knight. Wauregan lodge of Norwich, has a class of ten candidates and it is expected they will bring them here for the rank of knight. The degree team will meet for rehearsal during the intervening time.

UNION

Harry Eaton Young, whose serious illness was reported last week died on Wednesday, November 11th, at the Wesson Memorial hospital, Springfield, Mass. Although he had been suffering more or less for several months, his last illness was of short duration and he lived not more than three days after his arrival at the hospital. He was born in Holland, Mass., May 31, 1899. About 15 years ago he came with his parents to Union. His school life, which started in Holland, continued at the Masbesaux school, where he had excellent training under the veteran educator, W. P. Breeding. At various times he had been employed as lumber surveyor at the sawmill of Thomas Harmon. Previous to his last illness he was in the employ of the Quinebaug Forestry company.

He was married Oct. 5, 1925 to Miss Martha Rice Howlett of Holland, Mass. Besides his wife, he leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Young, and four sisters, Mrs. Raymond Hathaway, Mrs. Harold Gilbronson and Miss Bernice Young of Union and Mrs. Russell I. Harmon of Stafford Springs.

The funeral was held at the Congregational church at Union Center, Saturday, Nov. 14th, at 2 p. m. The church was filled with relatives and friends—many coming from Stafford, Southbridge, Holland, Wales, Eastford, Hartford, Springfield and New York city. The bearers were six brothers-in-law, Russel L. Harmon of Stafford Springs, Raymond Hathaway and Harold Gilbronson of Union, Lemuel, Leonard and Leavins Howlett of Holland, Mass.

The casket and altar were laden with beautiful flowers, roses, carnations and many lovely ferns. The sad but beautiful service was one never to be forgotten. The pastor, Rev. Henry A. Coolidge, who so few short weeks ago had performed the marriage ceremony for Harry and his bride, gave generous tribute to the character of the deceased, mentioning some of the attributes that made him loved and trusted by so many friends. "Sometime We'll Understand" and "Abide With Me" were sung by Mrs Dudley Clark and Mrs. Richard McAllister of Southbridge. Interment was in the Center cemetery.

ANDOVER

There will be a public whist this week in the town hall the proceeds to be used for the town hall repairs. The committee in charge comprises Mrs. A. H. Benton, Miss Gertrude White, Miss Olga Lindholm, John Allen and John Jewett.

The weekly choir rehearsal was held Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Emily Cobb. Miss Helen Jewett is director of the music.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Thompson and daughter, Irma, and Mrs. J. C. Pelton, all of Springfield, Mass., were at the home of Mrs. Thompson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Thompson, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Earle W. Stone of Hartford spent the week end with Mr. Stone's aunt, Mrs. William Thompson.

Mrs. Lionel Faulkner returned Monday, to New Jersey, after spending some time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Faulkner.

H. N. Bartlett, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Miss Mabel Farrar, of New York city, relatives of G. M. Bartlett, were guests at his home over the week-end.

WESTERLY

WESTERLY PEOPLE HAD RELATIVES ON THE LENAPE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 19—Mrs. Evelyn A. Potter, wife of Rhodes Potter, who has passed almost all of her life in Shannock, R. I., and for some time past has been housekeeper at Alvin S. Kenyon's, 3 William street, Pawcatuck, was a passenger booked from Westerly on the ill fated Clyde line steamship "Lenape" which caught fire when 8 hours out from New York and bound for Jacksonville, Fla., and which was consumed by fire when a point back of the Delaware Breakwater was reached early Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Potter's daughter, Mrs. Cora Greene, wife of Herbert H. Greene of 145 Main street, Westerly, anticipates a letter from her mother to the effect that she has continued on her way to Jacksonville, Fla., where she has visited with relatives in Florida for several seasons past. Mrs. Potter left Westerly on Tuesday morning for New York and sailed with the steamship later in the day.

Another daughter, Jennie, wife of Harry Drew of Pawtucket, R. I., telephoned to Westerly relatives on Wednesday when she heard of the steamship's burning to make certain that her mother left Westerly in time to take the steamer.

Miss Mildred Judd of Derbery Line, Vt., who was a passenger on the steamer with address given as Boston, Mass., was a Westerly visitor the first of the week at the farm of John L. Kenyon on the Shore road, where she had worked as a bookkeeper two years ago. The stop over in Westerly was made en route from her home, and rather than miss her boat go Jacksonville, Fla., she was brought to Westerly to take the 8 a. m. Quaker express for New York, to make sure of passage. In New York she was to be joined by a girl friend and Miss Judd was to go to Orland, Fla., where she was to be employed in a hotel, having been in Florida for the winter previously. She was among the steamer passengers who reported that her hand baggage had been ransacked when the first alarm for fire called her to the steamer's deck, finding that condition on a hurried return visit to her stateroom.

A large delegation from the First Baptist and Calvary Baptist churches of Westerly will attend the union mass meeting to be held in the Cranston Street-Roger Williams church, Providence, Sunday afternoon Nov. 22d. The speaker choden for that meeting is the Rev. J. Whitcomb Brougher, D. D., preacher, lecturer and humorist, of Los Angeles, Cal. On Monday, Nov. 23d in the First Baptist church, of Providence, there will be a Rhode Island Baptist Ministers' conference in which the Rev. Byron U. Hatfield and the Rev. Lewis A. Walker, local pastors, are planning to take part.

Connecticut automobilists, passing through Westerly and the state of Rhode Island en route to the Yale-Harvard football game in Cambridge, Mass., next Saturday, will find themselves lined up with Rhode Island automobiles bound for the Yale-Harvard football game in Cambridge and may travel the entire route under convoy of state police, with troopers in the van setting a pace of from 30 to 33 miles an hour and troopers riding the road beside the convoy. Special arrangements will be made for the passage of the convoy through cities and towns en route and to prevent its being held up by other traffic along the way as far as possible.

Announcement of the plan was made Thursday by Col. Everitte St. J. Chaffee, superintendent of the Rhode Island Mounted Police. The arrangements were made, Col. Chaffee stated, at the request of Lieutenant Governor Nathaniel W. Smith.

The Rhode Island contingent will form at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning on east roadway of Blackstone boulevard, with head of the column at the junction of the boulevard and Hope street.

Successful tests of the scheme of conveying automobiles to football games have been made in Connecticut at the Yale games by the Connecticut state police, resulting in the saving of about 2 1-2 hours time in reaching the games. Accidents were eliminated.

Those that go in the convoy leaving Providence will not be permitted to cut out of the line to the left to pass other automobiles in the convoy.

On Thursday the condition of Miss Eunice B. Nichols, who was struck by an automobile of parties unknown, and possibly pushed against the automobile operated by Fred E. Clark of 141 High street, while she was crossing from the High street railroad bridge to the Atlantic & Pacific Tea store on the corner of Oak and High street Tuesday evening at about 5:45 o'clock, was reported as a little more comfortable, although she was still confined to her bed at her home, 7 Dixon street. Following the accident Miss Nichols was taken to a physician by Mr. Clark, who was almost certain that his auto hit her. Miss Nichols was so equally certain that another auto which proceeded from the scene without stopping was responsible. The passengers of the bus returning from Bradford to Westerly arrived on the spot in time to see Miss Nichols as she lay in the roadway. Both the spot and the one where Edward McKernan was fatally injured when run over by the automobile of Henry F. Narone at about the same time that evening, are reported by autoists as dimly lighted ones, where a better illumination would tend to prevent such occurrences.

Percy Kingsley, graduating from the Westerly High school class of 1924, a sophomore at Brown university, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett A. Kingsley of Westerly, is a member of the second year class debating team, which meets the Freshman debating team in Providence this (Friday) evening. The question to be considered is a resolution have an aircraft member in the president's cabinet. Mr. Kingsley is a candidate afor the college debating team which will meet teams of other colleges and universities at a later date.

Mrs. J. Lee Brown of Oakland, Cal., is the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Edward W. Pitcher, and family in Westerly, on an extended visit east before returning to her home in California.

The "Erie" steam shovel which has been used in sewer main installation on certain streets in Westerly, was moved Thursday afternoon from High of Dixon street. The work of excavating the sewer trench toward Railroad avenue will be started this (Friday) morning.

MYSTIC

Funeral services for Jack D. Smith were held at his late home Wednesday afternoon. The house was well filled with relatives and friends who gathered to pay their last tribute of respect to one who was universally liked and will be greatly missed in the village and the church. Rev. Johnathan G. Osborn conducted the service, paying a splendid tribute to the young man, who had been active in the church among the young people and the Bible school. He closed with a poem. There were many beautiful floral pieces. Interment was in Elm Grove cemetery. The bearers were two brothers, Orville Rector and Harold Palmer Smith, Harold C. Main, and Cecil Eastwood Biddles, a cousin from Wickford, R. I.

FROG STEALS ROMEO'S STUNT IN WOOING MATE FROM POND

LONDON, Nov. 19.—(AP)—The love song of the frog is rendered much after the fashion, Romeo employed in enticing Juliet to the balcony. Shifting the scene to most any pond or marsh, the principals strive for the same effect.

A fine young bull frog "who would a-wooing go" squats in a clump of reeds or on a bank. Dr. Kinsley Noble, the American scientist, told the London Zoological Society, and dates his throat until it resembles the dew-lap of an operatic tenor.

"The song works like magic," the scientist said. "Within a short time the lady frog appears and will approach the source of the enchanting melody, as if trying to pretend that it was all because of idle curiosity. But if the singing ceases, the lady frog stops perfectly still. More bull frog music will lure her on once again."

Damp and patient night vigils in swamps and marshes of New Jersey and New York convinced Dr. Noble of the part the voice of the bachelor frog played in his courtship.

COOLIDGE WARNS THAT GOVERNMENT SHOULD NOT to be, for those who have the greater authority ought to have the greater knowledge.

"But it is my even firmer conviction that the welfare of our country could be very much advanced through a better knowledge by both of those parties of the multifold problems with which each has to deal."

Emphasizing the "desirability of the largest possible independence between government and business," the executive expressed the opinion that "each ought to be sovereign in its own sphere." When government comes unduly under the influence of business, he added, the tendency is to develop an administration which "closes the door of opportunity; becomes narrow and selfish in its outlook, and results in an oligarchy."

With a declaration that real and solid progress has been made in the development of American business, particularly in its relation with the government, the president said there was need for further improvement in transportation facilities by development of inland waterways; need for railroad consolidations; need for improvement of railroad terminals for more economical distribution of commodities in congested centers; need for still greater extension of electrification; need for reorganization of government, and need for further effort against "all categories of waste which the Department of Commerce has enumerated and so actively attacked."

The American policy toward business, Mr. Coolidge asserted, has been to cherish the general structure of business while holding its avenues open to the widest competition so its opportunities and benefits might be given the broadest possible participation.

"While it is true that the government ought not to be and is not committed to certain methods of acquisition which, while partaking of the nature of unfair practices try to masquerade under the guise of business," he added, "the government is and ought to be thoroughly committed to every endeavor of production and distribution which is entitled to be designated as true business. Those who are so engaged, instead of regarding the government as their opponent and enemy, ought to regard it as their vigilant supporter and friend."

In his discussion of the foreign debt problem, the president reaffirmed his conviction that loans should not be made by the United States or by American bankers when the money advanced is used for maintenance of great armies and navies.

"Loans," he contended, when used in ways that are not productive, like the maintenance of great military establishments or to meet municipal expenditures which should either be eliminated by government economy or supplied by taxation, do not appear to serve a useful purpose and ought to be discouraged."

"Our bankers," he continued, "have a great deal of responsibility in relation to the soundness of these loans when they undertake to invest the savings of our country abroad. I should regret very much to see our possession of resources which are available to meet needs in other countries be the cause of any sentiment of envy or unfriendliness toward us."

Near the end of his prepared address the president touched on the World Court issue with this statement:

"With our already enormous and constantly increasing interests abroad, there are constantly accumulating reasons why we should signify our adherence to the Permanent Court of International Justice. Mindful of our determination to avoid all interference in the political affairs, which do not concern us, of other nations, I can think of no more reassuring action than the declaration of America that it will wholeheartedly join with others in the support of the tribunal for the administration of international justice which they have created.

"I can conceive of nothing that we could do, which involves assuming so few obligations on our part, that would be likely to prove of so much value to the world. Beyond its practical effect, which might be somewhat small, it would have a sentimental effect, which would be tremendous. It would be public notice that the enormous influences of our country were to be cast upon the side of the enlightening processes of civilization. It would be the beginning of a new world spirit."

HOW MRS. COOLIDGE SPENT THE DAY IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—(AP)—Mrs. Coolidge passed a busy afternoon upon her arrival in New York today with President Coolidge, the shopping tour, which it has expected she would make being crowded off the program by a visit to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and a tea at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow.

Tonight, while her husband was attending the banquet of the New York State Chamber of Commerce, Mrs. Coolidge was guest of honor at a private dinner at which Mrs. Fred Ecker, wife of the president of the Chamber of Commerce, was hostess. Mrs. Coolidge arranged however, to hear the president's address after the dinner from a box in the grand tier of the Waldorn-Astoria ballroom.

The visit to the Metropolitan Museum apparently was hurriedly arranged immediately after the presidential party arrived at the Pennsylvania Railroad Station. Mrs. Coolidge entered the automobile of Mr. and Mrs. Morrow, who made the trip with the Coolidges from Washington, and drove off ahead of the president's party.

The departure was in the midst of a bit of confussion while automobiles were being assigned to the party and destinations being learned. President Coolidge appeared to be slightly nonplussed at the sudden departure of Mrs. Coolidge, but in a few moments the long line of motors was in motion, escorting the chief executive to his hotel.

While the president was including in his customary afternoon nap at the hotel Mrs. Coolidge was inspecting exhibits in the American wing of the Metropolitan Museum after a roundabout [illegible] through the city. Those with her were Mr. and Mrs. Morrow and Mrs. Cornelius N. Bliss, society matron of New York. Nearly an hour was spent in the museum after which the party left for the hotel, stopping enroute at the Morrow residence for tea.

Guests at the dinner for Mrs. Coolidge included: Mrs. Morrow and her daughter and the daughter of Mrs. Ecker; Mrs. George B. Cortelyou, Mrs L. B. Ashforth, Mrs. Adolph Ochs, Mrs Owen D. Young, Mrs. William L. DeBost, Mrs. Charles P. Gwynne.

PENALTY THAT GOES WITH DECREASE IN PLAIN COMMON SENSE.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

"And Nathan said unto David, Thou art the man."

The fathers and mothers and the grandfathers and grandmothers of the on-coming generation are very free with their criticisms of its laziness and latitudinarianism; its preference for "soft snaps" over duties; its love of luxury and distaste for labor; its too prevalent willingness to steal its meals rather than earn them.

"It wasn't so in our days," they wail.

Well, why wasn't it?

There is one reason which any old veteran who was reared in "those days" whereof they talk must be stone blind not to see.

That reason is that the forefathers and foremothers who bexat and bred those earlier generations had more common sense than their immediate descendants show.

I don't mean that they were more intelligent or wiser or more learned, for they weren't a single one of these things.

But they had, or at least they used more plain common sense than the fathers and mothers of the now younger generation showed. They didn't spoil their own offspring, as the latter have done.

I am always tempted, when I hear one of the survivors of those more rugged days mourning over the flapperishness or dudishness of their young 'uns to shout at him or her Nathan's blunt asseveration, "Thou art the man."

For it is as clear as the nose on a pig's face that a very large if not a major proportion of the sappiness and softness and shirkiness which characterizes the boys and girls of today is the direct and logical and almost necessary result of the treatment those boys and girls have had at the hands of their fathers and mothers. If the harvest is poor it is because cultivation and fertilization were lacking.

Most of us who were born 50 or 60 years ago were born into an atmosphere of plain living, hard work, and a sense of our own responsibilities. It wasn't long after we were big enough to know our right hands from our left before we were made to understand that they were meant to use in at least helping to earn our own living. It was early impressed upon us that people had to earn their dinners before they could eat them. And it speedily became known to us, also, that it took about all we had in use to earn pork and potatoes. It was made absolutely clear that if we wanted turkey and pie, we had got to work extra hard and overtime. If we were unusually good and energetic, we got an orange Thanksgiving day and as many penny sticks of striped candy as we were years old on our birthdays. Beyond those our dreams of luxury seldom went. I have known men who went barefoot till they were 21, and who never tasted ice-cream till after they were 50.

"The deestrick schule" taught the three R's and the value of honesty. The home taught simplicity and thrift and industry and loyalty and responsibility and at least some deference to God. Bigotry hadn't yet discovered that a daily reading from the wonderful story of the Gospels endangered anybody's future. There was but one reputed millionaire in the country, and he wasn't generally regarded as an entirely respectable man. None of us were taught to fall down and worship him, nor was he held up as an example for us to imitate.

Let it be frankly admitted right here, that most of us who were brought up that way, in that atmosphere and under those conditions, didn't wholly and completely enjoy them. We thought we were being treated rather hardly,—as we were,—and that the world used us a little unfairly,—as it did and always has and always will. We liked candy and would rather munch it than bread and butter, cut thick. We considered oranges much better than apples and wanted them more often than we got them. We didn't love to get up at daybreak to drive the cows to pasture or work after dark by lantern light to finish up the chores. We didn't like coarse "kin" boots and linsey-woolsey dresses. We wanted sweeter tidbits as a regular ration, and more play and less work as a steady thing.

Well, by and by when we had got through our childhood and become men and women ourselves, with children of our own, we said, "My children shall not go through what I had to. Little, innocent, joy-loving creatures, they shall not be forced into barness and work. They shall be given a good time so long as I can give it to them. If I have to work my own fingers to the bone to spare theirs. They shall have a chance to do the things they like, they shall be given to eat the things they like, they shall be defended from hardship and acrimoniousness, they shall have a better chance than I had."

And the fathers and mothers who felt and acted that way actually patted themselves on their own backs for their greater kindness and vision.

When they were really doing the unkindest and most irremediable injury they could possibly inflict.

They utterly ignored the inexorable law of all nature that only through hardship comes hardihood. That only through struggle comes achievement. That the tallest tree owes its stability to the extent of its rootage in the black common dirt. That the proudest palace is foredoomed to fall unless its rough foundations are laid deep and wide. That only practice makes perfect. That the thews of victory are never nourished on a diet of ice-cream and candy fed to weaklings lapped in cotton-wool.

Old Sam Johnson once brusquely said that "Hell is paved with good intentions." Good intentions alone, unguided by reason or its work-a-day sister, common sense, make too flabby a diet to raise men and women on. Usually, too, unless thus guided, they lead to the broad and easy downward path, not the strait and narrow upward climb.

Preachers and teachers, statesmen and sociologists, all seem to agree that the root of the present recklessness and shiftlessness, and lawlessness is found in the failure of home-training. One prison official, whose duties throw him into daily association with the criminal classes, frankly declares that most of the victims under his ward were started thitherwards in their childhood homes. In face he says in so many blunt and passionate words, that "The American home has gone plumb to hell."

We've always heard and accepted as one of the plainest and least questionable truths that "As the twig is bent the tree's inclined." And we've also always understood that the impressions of childhood are the deepest printed, the nearest indelible, the most lasting and most effectively controlling. The propagandists of one widely held creed are credited with the assertion that, if they can be given the guidance of a child up to eight or ten years, they are sure of him for life. It is in those early years, when the mind is growing and plastic, that its tendencies and capacities are largely shaped, if not actually determined.

Of course, not all parents are moved by the desire to shield their boys and girls from the asperities of the world. Some are simply too lazy or too indifferent or too unmitigatedly selfish to care are much for their children's welfare as for their own comfort. There is nothing whatever to be said in behalf of such monstrosities. They are not fit to have children, and in an ideal state of society, would be forbidden to reproduce their own kind or perpetrate callous enormities on the developing souls of their progeny. But society is not yet ideal, nor will it be in your day or mine. We must take it as it is.

And, thus taking it, the fact becomes daily clearer that, for a considerable part of the evils which today afflict those in their teens or twenties, the unwise, self-blinded, sentimental overkindness of the parents has been and is responsible.

It is, of course, arguable that the times have changed, and that many of the things which our parents and grandparents regarded as luxuries have now become common "necessities." It is also quite possible to reason that many of the youthful hardships to which we were subjected were due to the environment, to the prevalent lack of conveniences and comforts to the coarser habits of a sterner age.

Granting all that, it does not touch the real question. The children of those days were home-trained, rather more than school-taught. Even if they were reared in Spartan simplicity and with something of Spartan harshness, they were morally as well as physically and mentally shaped in the home. It is quite possible that the strap and the ferule were too indiscriminately used. Even so, they served as effective deterrents of milksoppery and flapperishness.

I am not writing this to urge harsher treatment of budding youth, nor sharper criticism of its foibles and faults. My object is quite different. It is, indeed, to suggest greater charity in our dealings with them,—since those foibles and faults are plants grown from seed of our own sowing.

We have been so concerned to rive our children an easy road that we have quite overlooked the much more imperative necessity of starting them on the right road,—and seeing that they followed it.

When any one of us is inclined to wax angry over the too manifest and too heinous derelictions of the youth of today, and to wonder what can possibly be the cause of them, he might better plant himself before his mirror and address the image he sees in Prophet Nathan's direct and forceful language.

The chances are more than even that he won't be traducing any innocent man.

THREE SUSPICIOUS CRAFT SEIZED BY PATROL BOATS FROM NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 19.—For the first time in many weeks a capture of alleged rum runners was made today by crews of patrol boats stationed at the United States Coast Guard sectional base here, for three fishing sloops were seized and their masters held on the charge of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws. The boats seized are the Hattie V., Pal and Nora, all hailing from New York.

During the forenoon while the boats were patrolling the Connecticut-Rhode Island shore, the three fishing boats were observed endeavoring to establish communication with the master of one of the rum-supply ships between Block Island and Montauk Point. When the patrol boats attempted to question the fishing boats, the masters of the craft attempted to speed away. The patrol boats were the speedier craft and the fishing craft were finally overtaken and brought into port, where they are moored at the state pier. No liquor of any description was found aboard the seized craft.

While there was but a single drunk at the police station at 12 o'clock last night, the midnight hour increased the number to four. They were all there this morning when the court opened and they were given a chance to relate their experiences. Of course the stories varied in circumstances, but not one of the accused said he was guilty. Leo Burke, a sailor in the coast guard service and stationed at the local East New London, said a man couldn't get across the Winthrop bridge with his vessel, so he left it and could not rise. Then a policeman found him and rowed him to the landing where he spent the rest of the night. "It's the same old story," told Judge Prince. "I've tried to determine the presence of rum, and found it where I didn't look for it. I don't see much of it." Burke was fined $5 and costs, and Lebone had drills on it.

William Kelly showed up after absence from the courts during the past two years, being as a professional. He had a number of shoe strings for sale and was reminded to get enough [illegible] that he did his work. He also had a small bottle of [illegible], such as is used in the motion moves. Kelly admitted he had been consumed, and asked the court to believe he had [illegible] to banish alcohol. Judge Prince smiled as John in a way that was sympathetical and which indicated that the story was not accepted as [illegible] them were heavy. He pleaded [illegible] allowed to get out of town and [illegible] he would not come back. [illegible] agree to stay away longer [illegible] have remained out of this [illegible]. I will give you a chance." [illegible] the judge, and he gave John the [illegible] eating his Thanksgiving [illegible] way from jail.

An automobile truck owned by the S. N. Hills company and operated by Fred J. McLaughlin, 2 Union street in backing from an alley on Golden street this afternoon, struck an automobile owned and operated by George Mallech, 25 Garfield avenue. The latter machine was damaged.

Frank Rogers claiming Providence as his home, was found at 2 o'clock this morning roaming around along the railroad tracks at Hallam street. That was not the place for a drunken man so he was arrested. He said he would prefer Providence to jail so he was allowed to stay for the former place, agreeing not to stop till he got there.

A case against James Daniels, which, by the way struck the people of the accused, was settled. He parked an automobile on the east side of Bank street, but that was when an officer told him it was his privilege to park there. Sergeant Smith declared he would send the law to the policeman and acquaint him with his duties as a policeman.

Notwithstanding that more than half the buildings erected in New London of late have been for use as garages there is declared to be a scarcity of places for the storage of automobiles.

In the New York papers Thursday, Rev. Mother M. Alphonsa Lathrop, O. S. D., made a telling bid for interest in and aid for her wonderful work for incurable cancer patients. Rev. Mother Lathrop was Rose Hawthorne daughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne America's great novelist. After her marriage with George Parsons Lathrop their home for a time was in New London. On becoming a widow, Mrs. Lathrop devoted herself to various lines of welfare work, finally being touched by the pathos of the condition of the cancerous poor, with no refuge and no solace. Almost without capital, she bravely opened Rosary Hill home, at Hawthorne, Westchester county, N. Y. It was hard sledding for many hopeless sufferers sought shelter and cure; but generous friends have helped the benign work, so that Mother Lathrop has been enabled to [illegible] now she and the devoted Sisters of Charity who are associated with her stand badly in need of a fire-proof house for their charges, to replace the original wooden building. Although Mother Lathrop is a convert to the Roman Catholic faith, she and her nurses welcome patients of all creeds and devote their lives to making the last days of the afflicted mortals as comfortable as possible. Many wealthy men and women in and about New York have already remembered this great charity in their wills, and the faith of the founder of the home continues strong in the belief that aid will come to her, day by day.

In response to a request for bids for operating the ferryboat Mohican between this port and Groton, City Purchasing Agent John W. Sheedy received but one bid yesterday afternoon, that bid being made by David Sheehan and George Crandall, present captains and lessees of the boat. Captains Sheehan and Crandall submitted a bid for $6,700 and agreed to pay this amount in instalments of $475 each month. The bid is the same that the lessees submitted a year ago and will probably be approved at the regular meeting of the city council to take place next Monday night.

Conductor F. P. Finn, Mansfield, Mass., and J. A. Magee, Boston, conductor and flagman respectively of a west bound freight train en route from Boston to New Haven, were slightly injured this forenoon, when the brakes of the train were applied with such suddenness at Midway that both Finn and Magee were thrown violently against the side of the caboose. The two victims were brought to New London and after [illegible] injuries consisting of bruises [illegible] concussions had been dressed by a railroad physician, they resumed the run to New Haven.

Announcement is made of the marriage the 16th inst., of James M. Barrett, Jr., Wilson; Minn., and Miss Helen M. Touchette, daughter of John H. Touchette, 71 Pequot avenue. The wedding was solemnized by Rev. J. Beveridge Lee at the parsonage of the Second Congregational church. The groom is a warrant officer attached to the United States Coast Guard service. Mr. and Mrs. Barrett have taken up their residence for the present in [illegible]

Frank A. Meyers has returned to his home, 25 Pearl street, after having spent several days in New York.

An Elcar automobile was discovered apparently abandoned just off the city line on Bank street extension this morning by Patrolman George Perkins. The machine was taken charge of by state police, Groton, and is being held pending being claimed by its owner.

Mrs. Harriet Phillips, 86, wife of Herbert G. Phillips, died late yesterday at her late home, Butlertown, Waterford. Mrs. Phillips, who had been a resident of Butlertown many years, had been ill many weeks. She is survived, besides her husband, by three sons, all of whom reside in Waterford.

The continued case of Charles Williams, stage hand employe, of 102 Golden street, who was taken into custody several days ago, charged with attempted robbery and assault upon Philip Seller, Bank street merchant, as he was entering his home, 43 Golden street, last Tuesday night, is scheduled for hearing in the police court tomorrow morning. The police are still working on the case in an endeavor to fasten the crime upon Williams, but it is doubtful if they do so. It has become known that the authorities have practically abandoned the theory that Williams committed the attack upon Seller and are now endeavoring to locate a local young man with a reputation of beating up pedestrians, who has but recently returned to New London after having served a sentence in a southern city on a theft charge. Since the return of the young man, whom the him narrated to keep away from the police, who desire to give him a thorough questioning, Seller is still a patient at Home Memorial hospital as a result of the beating he received and the taking of six stitches in his scalp where he was beaten with the butt of a revolver.

Health Officer Benjamin N. Pennell was absent from the municipal building today, being in New Haven where he attended the annual meeting of the Connecticut Public Health Association. He returned to New London in the evening.

Martha Torrenel, a young girl, residing on Stoney Hill, was struck by an automobile, owned and driven by Martin L. Marshall, 153 Genesse street, New Bedford, Mass., on Main street early this evening.

The girl was walking along Main street, and at a point between Crystal avenue and Stoney hill attempted to cross the street. As she stepped to the highway the girl walked directly in front of Marshall's machine. The driver attempted to bring the car to a stop, but was unsuccessful and the girl was struck with considerable force and hurled to the pavements. Marshall took the girl to the office of a physician where her injuries were diagnosed as severe bruises and contusions and were dressed, after which she returned to her home.

G. Tather Sheperd, Bank street, complained to the police late this afternoon of the mischievous conduct of youths residing in the vicinity of Bank, Coleman and Spring streets. Mr. Sheperd stated that his aunt, Mrs. Chapman, owned a dwelling house at the corner of Bank and Spring streets and that the owner had caused the house to be painted within a few days. The youths going and coming from Nameaug school have delighted in disfiguring the newly applied paint with the result that the property has been damaged and the owner put to an additional expense.

Romeo Limiere, a youth residing at 71 Peckham street, New Bedford, Mass., and a runaway, was taken into custody late this afternoon. Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield will see that the runaway returns home.

PLAUT-CADDEN CO. STORE ENDANGERED BY BLAZE IN CAN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 19—The Plaut-Cadden company's plant, a four story brick structure on Bank street, was threatened with serious damage by fire early this morning and but for the timely discovery of the blaze the interior of the structure, together with its contents would undoubtedly have been badly damaged. As it was, the fire was subdued with damage of little or no consequence.

Patrolman Michael Corcoran was making his final rounds through Bank street, shortly after 4 o'clock and as he was about to pass the structure he noticed flames leaping in back of one quarters of the Allen Hook and Ladder of the front windows. Officer Corcoran was but a few feet away from the order company, where Box 53 is located. An alarm was sent in and five minutes later several of the city's pumpers and the aerial truck had pulled up in front of the building. The blaze was then leaping high in back of the window in the upper story and a ladder was raised to one of the other windows and through this the firemen entered. The blaze was located in a galvanized iron can used for holding waste material and was flaming so close to fixtures that within a few minutes these would have been ignited and a most serious fire started. Lines of chemicals were stretched to the top floor, but the blaze was held in the iron receptacle and the huge can was thrown from the window.

The building was entirely gutted by fire a number of years ago at which time the New London department had one of the worst fires in its history to combat.

MISSING PALMERTOWN GIRL FOUND AND TAKEN HOME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 19—Nellie Rinkovitch, 16, daughter of Stephen Rinkovitch, who ran away from her home in Palmertown Sunday and for whom Rinkovitch requested the New London police last night to institute a search today is back home with her father. Following Rinkovitch appearing at the police station, Patrolman Frank Philopena ascertained that the girl was stopping at the home of Mrs. Emma Chapel, 84 Winthrop street. About 1 o'clock Patrolman John Foley was instructed to go to the Chapel woman's home and if the girl was found there to take her into custody. Officer Foley found the girl at the Chapel house and escorted her to the police station where she was taken in charge by Policewoman Jane Cassidy. The latter caused the girl to be placed in a private house until this morning when she was taken to the home of her father.

GERMAN PREMIERS APPROVE SECURITY PACT

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—(A. P.)—The treaties of security and arbitration initiated by Chancellor Luther and Foreign Minister Stresemann at Locarno were approved today by the premiers of the German federated states.

The cabinet immediately convened and approved the draft of a law empowering its representative to formal-ly sign the treaties at London December 1. This law will be presented to the reichstag next Monday. It involves no change in the constitution of the reich and compromises two paragraphs authorizing the signature of the treaties and Germany's application for entry into the league of nations.

40TH ANNIVERSARY OF PRINTING BIBLE IN ENGLISH

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 19.—(A. P.)—Commemorating the 400th anniversary of the printing of the Bible in English, today, Yale university paid tribute to the memory of William Tyndale, characterized by Rev. Dr. Charles A. Dinsmore of Yale, as "the only man who has left the stamp of his individuality on the English Bible."

Speaking of the work of Tyndale, the Rev. Mr. Dinsmore, lecturer on spiritual content literature in the Yale graduate school declared that "a hundred years before Shakespeare, Tyndale proved the capacity of the English language to express the profoundest, sublimest truths in the simple tongue of the common people."

"Our religion and our literature owes to him a lasting debt, the speaker continued. He gave to England the first vernacular translation of the New Testament from the original Greek, and the Old Testament from the Hebrew. He domesticated Hebrew idioms in the language of today. To him we owe such expressions as 'to die the death,' 'a man after his own heart,' 'stick unto death,' 'he smote them hip and thigh,' 'to hack his face.'

"He set the standard of style which has made the English Bible a study to our language, and influential in moulding the best tradition of English literature."

FIRE DAMAGE AT ELLINGTON MAY REACH OVER $350,000

ELLINGTON Conn. Nov. 19—(A. P.)—An inventory made today at the scene of the fire here last night when a large tobacco warehouse and sheds owned by Max Lavitt were destroyed indicated that the first estimates of the loss were placed too low and that the damage may reach more than $350,000. Mr. Lavitt places the loss on the tobacco at $240,000 and on the building at $40,000.

The warehouse held 1,700 cases of tobacco valued at from $200 to $250 a case. Four or five big lots were ready for shipment E. S. Folk, of New York, had 25,000 pounds of shade grown tobacco ready for shipment and the Connecticut Valley Tobacco association had 400 cases of Havana seed tobacco and broadleaf tobacco. Six tobacco owners used the warehouse and sheds.

WATERTOWN WOMAN FATALLY INJURED BY AUTO

WATERTOWN, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—Mrs. Johanna Syssa, of the Oakville section, was fatally injured when she was hit by a small truck driven by Allerton Willis, of Bantam, in front of D. G. Sullivan's drug store here at 4:14 o'clock this afternoon. Mrs. Syssa received a severe fracture of the skull and died in the Waterbury hospital tonight.

Leaving Sullivan's drug store with a companion, Mrs. Syssa hurried across the street to get the trolley for Oakville. They paused in front of two autos parked before the store. These cars shut off the view of Mr. Willis, who was driving towards Oakville. Mrs. Syssa's friend crossed in front of the car but she herself was hit and knocked to the concrete road. Several witnesses of the accident are reported to have said that Mr. Willis was not to blame.

Mrs. Syssa was taken to the Waterbury hospital. A severe laceration of the skull was sustained and an operation could not be performed. She is the mother of two small children.

PAINLEVE URGES ACTION ON FRENCH FINANCES

PARIS, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—"Tragic circumstances," said Premier Painleve in the financial debate in the chamber of deputies today, forced on him "the thankless task of asking parliament to vote bold measures" whereby he proposed to provide a sinking fund for short-term debts.

M. Painleve declared there was no more time to be lost, and the government placed before the chamber its responsibilities and asked it to decide now definitely between a daring policy, and positive action.

"The question," the premier added, "is whether we shall allow our money to go on depreciating or whether we shall take preliminary steps toward stabilization. The first of those steps is to renovate finances and provide for debts, so as to give the money a stable value at home. Then through international accords we can stabilize it abroad."

The debate had previously become extremely confused, each speaker presenting a different thesis. The premier's intervention was in the nature of a plea, rather than a technical argument and threw little light on the issues. An attempt to shorten the discussion and reach a vote on the articles tonight failed and the debate will be resumed at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon.

FELLOW OFFICIALS PAY TRIBUTE TO LIEUT. GREEN

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Nov. 19.—(A. P.)—While investigation into the death of Lieutenant Nathan Green of the destroyer Moody was being continued today, his fellow officers of the destroyer squadron met to pay their last tribute to the officer, whose body was found Sunday on the bay shore in circumstances which navy officials believe indicated foul play.

The navy court of inquiry met again today on the destroyer tender Mobile. Several witnesses were heard. Among those who have been examined are several officers and their wives, who attended a dance with Lieutenant Green the last Saturday evening.

Lieutenant Green's body was attended at the funeral services this afternoon by an escort of ninety-six men commanded by Lieutenant Commander R. H. Wentworth of the U. S. S. Henderson, the detail representing all the ships of the destroyer division to which Lieutenant Green's ship belonged. The pall-bearers were six members of his class at Annapolis. The funeral procession went to the union station, where the body will remain until tomorrow morning, when it will be sent to Lieutenant Green's home, Lebanon, Tenn.

BOY IN NEW BRITAIN STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

NEW BRITAIN, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—John Barnes, the six-year-old son of Lester Barnes, of the New Britain fire department, is in New Britain general hospital in a dying condition as the results of injuries received when he was struck by an automobile operated by Merwin A. Kechneer. According to the latter, the boy stepped from behind another machine. No arrests were made. The boy is a grandson of First Deputy Chief Eugene F. Barnes, of the fire department.

DIRECTORS OF CONN. C. OF C. TO MEET IN NEW HAVEN TODAY

HARTFORD, Nov. 19—(A. P.)—The board of directors of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce, will meet in executive session at the Hotel Taft, New Haven, at noon tomorrow to decide on the adoption of the chamber's policy concerning the co-ordination of railroad, bus and truck transportation facilities in the state. Several viewpoints of the transportation question were presented to the board at a meeting in New Haven, two weeks ago and the policy of the chamber will be based on the board's opinion of the data received at that meeting and on a number of reports that have been made by the transportation committee which has been studying the problem for the past four years.

The transportation committee is composed of Harrison B. Freeman, E. G. Mooney, H. H. Sherritt, Arthur M. Colleau, of Hartford; L. G. Carmalt, E. G. Buckland, Benjamin I. Spock, Le Grand Cannon, of New Haven; Samuel Russell, Jr., of Middletown; John D. Hafferman, of Waterbury, and John T. Chadsey, of Bristol.

Death of Dr. C. W. Deane.

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 19.—(A. P.)—Dr. Charles W. Deane, for 21 years superintendent of Bridgeport's public school system, died early this morning in Orlando, Fla., at the age of 68 years. Widely known in school circles a decade ago, Dr. Deane had been inactive in educational circles since his retirement from office in 1915.

TEACHING THE THEORY OF COMMUNISM AND LENINISM

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov 19.—Communist schools, teaching the theory of communism and leninism, are being organized in a number of cities in the United States, communist leaders here declared tonight.

C. A. Hathaway, northwest organizer of the Workers party, established the school here under direction of the central executive committee in Chicago. The school opens tomorrow to run for 20 weeks.

"Young workers," the juniors communists, are being supplied with literature for distribution in the city's schools, aimed to offset American education week in the public schools.

"We want education for action, not abstract education," Mr. Hathaway said. "We are teaching our young people that the constitution of United States is the bulwark of class rule and that the workers must promote the needed change."

In New York and Chicago schools were in operation to teach the instructors for the communist schools in various parts of the country. The movement was affiliated with the Third Internationale of Moscow.

TO CONSIDER ADVICE OF REVISING MORTALITY TABLE

HARTFORD, Nov. 19—As the result of a speech by Actuary William M. Corcoran of the state insurance department before the national convention of insurance commissioners at San Antonio, Texas, several weeks ago, condemning the mortality table now used by most insurance companies, a committee appointed by the convention will meet in New York, Thursday to consider the advisability of a change.

The meeting which will be at Hotel Astor at 10 a. m. will be open to all interested. Consideration will be given to making the American men's mortality table a permissive legal valuation standard, in his speech, Actuary Corcoran declared the present table obsolete and inadequate for present day requirements. He advanced the more modern American men table as a substitute. Legislative enactments in most states will be necessary before the latter table can become a legal standard.

HISTORIC CHURCH OF HAWAII TO BE MADE SAFE BY REPAIRS

HONOLULU, Nov. 19. (AP) Hawaihao—the Westminster Abbey of Hawaii for the last 83 years and the first stronghold of the missionaries who came to the islands from New England more than a century ago—has been declared unsafe.

Insidious white ants, wood borers, have invaded the floor beams, girders and columns, eating away the inside and causing danger that the structure might collapse. The building has been closed and will not be opened until steel and concrete are substituted. A reconstruction committee estimates that repairs may cost $100 000.

The church was designed in 1826 by Hiram Bingham, one of the missionaries and forefather of Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut. The building was completed in 1840. It has been the scene of many incidents in Hawaiian history.

CHILD OF SOVIET PROBATION MARRIAGE HAS NO RELIGION

MOSCOW, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Children born of parents wedded on "probation," a ceremony authorized under the latest Soviet marriage code, are presumed to have no religion until they are 16, when they may choose any form of worship or none at all.

This is another offspring in the freedom and ease with which matrimony and divorce can be effected that is attributed largely to the separation of the church from the state and to the government's desire to give both sexes absolute equality in all activities of life.

MARKET WAS SPECULATIVE

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—(By the A. P.)—Speculators for the advance remained in control of the price movement in today's stock market despite a renewal of selling pressure against the motor shares in the early trading. Rails were again in the forefront of the advance with a seven point jump in Chesapeake and Ohio, which established a record high for all time at 139 3-4, as the outstanding individual feature.

Uneasiness over the money rate situation was reflected in the rediscount volume of trading. An increase from 3 1-2 to 4 per cent. in the Philadelphia reserve bank rediscount rate was announced after the market closed, but the governors of the New York federal reserve bank, who met today, voted to continue the present three and one half per cent., rate.

Operations on the long side were aided by another series of favorable dividend announcements, including an extra dividend of $1 on Atlantic coast line common, an extra divided of 75 cents on Texas Gulf Sulphur and an extra dividend of $2 on Railway Steel Spring common with a proposal to split up the present stock on a virtual three-for-one basis. Heavy accumulation of the railroad shares reflected, in part, the extensive switching of speculative accounts from certain industrials to the rails on the theory that the latter offered the better market possibilities for the immediate future. New high records in the rail group were established by Pere Marquette, "Nickel Plate", Erie common and "Soo" common and preferred, the gains running from 1 to 3 points.

In all, nearly 2 score rails closed 1 and 3 and one half points higher. The list included Atchison, Atlantic Coast Line, Baltimore and Ohio, St. Paul preferred, Rock Island, Great Northern preferred, Louisville and Nashville, New York Central, New Haven, Norfolk and Western, Northern Pacific, Reading, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway and Wabash common and preferred A.

Motors were bid up 1 to 3 points in the early trading, broke 1 to nearly 6 points from their early highs on a renewal of selling pressure and then made irregular recovery under active covering by bear traders. Chrysler showed a net decline of over 3 points at 127 7-8 and General Motors yielded fractionally to 125 5-8 but Hudson, Mack Trucks, Studebaker and White closed 1 to 2 points higher. Willys-Overland preferred advanced nearly 3 points to 119 3-8, a new high record.

Strong buying support developed for the standard industrials. American Can soared 8 points to 250 and then eased to 249; Baldwin closed nearly 6 points higher at 126 and U. S. Steel common showed a net gain of over 2 points at 132 1-4. New peak prices in the industrial group were attained by May Department Stores, American Brake Shoe and Foundry, Air Reduction, Calumet and Arizona, International Nickel common and preferred and U. S. Distributing common and preferred, the last named jumping 32 points to 216.

Revival of activity and strength in Pan-American B reflected the receipt of dispatches announcing the completion of another Mexican well, flowing one hundred thousand barrels of oil a day, in a new section of the company's Tierra Blanca property. Other oil shares were mixed, with most changes of a fractional character.

Call money renewed at 4 3-4 per cent, and then dropped to 4 1-2. Time money rates were quoted at 4 7-8 to 5 per cent., instead of on a flat 4 7-8 per cent., basis and prime commercial paper held steady at 4 1-4 per cent.

Foreign exchanges displayed a firm tone, demand sterling being quoted at 4 84 1-8 and French francs at $3.96 1-2 cents.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 19—(By the A. P.)—The rallying power displayed by railroad liens imparted a firm tone to bond trading today although general buying was restricted by the uncertainty over the New York and Philadelphia rediscount rates which was not cleared up until after the market's close.

A spectacular rise of more than 8 points in Chesapeake and Ohio convertible 5s to a new high price for the year, based on a corresponding advance in the company's shares, was the principal feature of trading. Reports that a favorable decision on the "Nickel Plate" merger was in sight stimulated a demand for all the so-called Van Sweringen issues, including the Erie convertible 4s. Total transactions in the Chesapeake and Ohio bonds exceeded $500,000.

Other semi-speculative rail obligations also found favor with buyers. St. Paul issues were active and higher in anticipation of a reorganization compromise and substantial gains were recorded by Denver and Rio Grande Western 5s, Chicago and Eastern Illinois 5s, Chicago Great Western 4s, Long Island 4s, Boston and New York 4s, New Haven 4s, and Frisco Income and Adjustment 6s.

Constructive operations also were effective in oil, copper, rubber and sugar liens. Gains of 1 to more than 2 points included Skelly, Sinclair and

GREENEVILLE

The Greeneville Congregational church Sunday school opened their winter musical course Wednesday evening in the church parlors with an entertainment given by the Crawford Adams Company of Boston. The personnel of the company was as follows: Crawford Adams, violinist; Miss Clara A. Wood, reader and Charles LaPierre accompanist. The program was opened by a piano solo by Mr. LaPierre who rendered the quartette from Rigoletti. This was done in a masterly manner, and he was forced to play an encore. Miss Wood had the audience in fits of laughter with her readings, especially the one entitled Mamie Learns to Roller Skate. Crawford Adams received an ovation when he appeared and he has endeared himself to the Greeneville audience. His playing was exquisite and he is certainly a master of the violin. His request numbers were a feature of the evening and the audience was loath to let him go. These concerts seem to have appealed to the community of Greeneville and it looks as if they will continue for many years. The committee in charge is Alex Finlayson, chairman, Mrs. Harry Bowden, Miss Viola Levitsky and Mrs. Fred A. Fox.

Sale of aprons, fancy articles, candy, etc., in St. Andrew's Guild room today from 5 to 7 p. m. Supper 35c.—adv.

TAFTVILLE

A pleasant surprise party was held Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watts and family, of North Third avenue. Friends from Norwich, Baltic and Taftville attended. A delicious chicken supper was served with interpretive dancing.

The new road over Merchants avenue, to Norwich Town, was opened to traffic last week and Thursday was treated to a coat of tarvia by the state highway department. Many of villagers are already using this road for running into Norwich as well as to reach points farther north like Willimantic and Hartford.

THURSDAY PINOCHLE CLUB MET ON LAUREL HILL

The hostess this week for the Thursday Afternoon Pinochle club was Mrs. Milo H. Waters of Laurel Hill avenue, whose score 7,870, was the highest for the afternoon's play.

Mrs. William S. Murray scored second highest 7,200, while Mrs. Charles Wright had the lowest score, 4,790.

Refreshments were served at the close of the play.

Mrs. Albert Johnson of Oneco street is to be the hostess next week, Friday afternoon, owing to Thursday falling on Thanksgiving Day.

TRINITY MEN'S CLUB HELD MONTHLY MEETING.

With the usual attendance the Men's Club of Trinity Episcopal church held its monthly meeting Thursday evening in the school rooms. The session was in charge of the president, L. L. Brewer, and introduced as the speaker, H. C. Adams, who gave a short talk. Preceding the brief remarks by Mr. Adams a committee was appointed to arrange for a chicken pie supper to be given some time this winter. Refreshments were served.

Irish Free State Legation.

Norwich visitors to Washington of late find that the Irish Free State, which has established its legation at 1600 Connecticut avenue, now has a woman on its diplomatic staff. She is Mrs. R. T. Macfeat, second secretary. Mrs. Macfeat, who is a war widow, gained more than a year in America, acting as passport officer in New York.

Sleeps Like a Child

Thanks to New Harmless Treatment.

We all remember how soundly we slept as children and how we bounced out of bed in the morning, bright, refreshed and ready for the day's play.

And you can do the same thing now if you will follow the example of thousands everywhere—take just a short treatment with the wonderful new preparation called Neura.

Neura is an easy-to-take pink pellet that does not contain any opiates or harmful habit-forming drugs of any kind. Yet the very first treatment usually gives wonderful results. So remarkable have been the results from Neura that it is now being dispensed by Lee & Osgood Co., and all good druggists with an absolute guarantee to return your full purchase price if the very first package does not give you deep, restful sleep. Don't toss and turn for hours. Get a good night's sleep by taking Neura today.

LEFT $300 IN WILL SHE SUES FOR COMPENSATION FOR 6 YEARS SERVICES

Now suits which are returnable in the superior court in December were filed as follows Thursday at the office of Judge George E. Parsons, clerk of the court in this city:

Julia A. McGregor of Norwich has brought suit for $10,000 damages against the estate of the late Eliza T. McDonald, who lived on Cliff street, this city, and of whose will William H. Shields is executor.

Mrs. McDonald died Jan. 10, 1925, and it is alleged in the complaint that on or about Nov. 5, 1918, she requested the plaintiff to come and stay with her to act as a companion and to care for her in her declining years and to care for her house and furnish board and food.

In compliance with that request, the plaintiff claims that she stayed at the home of Mrs. McDonald from Nov. 5, 1918, until Dec. 13, 1924 when Mrs. McDonald was removed to the hospital. In that time she acted as companion to Mrs. McDonald, as well as housekeeper and cook, and furnished board and gave her all the care and attention she required to the entire satisfaction of Mrs. McDonald. Such services the plaintiff claims, which continued for 319 weeks were worth $25 a week, a total of $7,975.

To induce the plaintiff to render such services without immediate compensation, it is claimed that Mrs. McDonald represented and promised that the plaintiff would be well paid and that she would make suitable, reasonable and adequate provision for the plaintiff in her will. The plaintiff relied upon these promises in rendering the services, but the McDonald will left her only $300, so that the claim is made for $7,675 from the estate. This claim has been disallowed by the executor.

SALE OF WILSON COINS BRINGS TOTAL OF $26,385

Because the late W. W. C. Wilson married Miss Millie Marx, sister of Mrs. William L. Cook, of Broadway, there is local interest in the following from a New York paper of Thursday:

The final sale yesterday at the Anderson Galleries of the numismatic collection of the late W. W. C. Wilson of Montreal netted $11,464.50. The grand total for the three sessions was $26,385.75.

An original gold medal presented to Andrew Jackson on Jan. 15, 1828, brought $450 going on "order." It is an 1826 medal in honor of the completion of the Erie Canal. A 1789 Society of Tammany Columbian order gold medal also went on "order" for $300.

The American Numismatic Society paid $360 for a 1765 medal with a view of Manhattan Island, found near Niagara Falls by Ezekiel Jewett, a post trader, in 1840. For a Victoria 1876 Indian treaty, No. 6, silver medal the society paid $160. It also paid $205 for another Victoria large size medal with head of Queen with titles, Prince of Wales plumes and 1860 engraved on the obverse. For a 1789 Washington medal of the president of the United States, the Numismatic Society paid $210. It also paid $170 for a peace meyer medal, 1943, St. Louis, with head of Washington.

K. P. Painter bought a Charles I Oxford three pound piece, 1643, for $160. B. M. Mehl paid $170 for a Mexican Ferdinand VII gold proclamation peso. B. G. Johnson paid $155 for a Lion and Wolf silver medal.

VERDICT FOR $7,136.99 AGAINST NEW LONDON

After being out about 55 minutes the jury in the superior court in this city returned a verdict Thursday for $7,136.99 for Miss Johanna Keating of 312 Huntington street, New London, in the suit against the city of New London for breaking her hip in a fall on Huntington street on the night of Feb. 10, 1923. She sued for $35,000 damages. In the course of the trial of the case her attorneys brought out that she had expended $630.99 for medical and hospital attendance so that it is figured the jury verdict is for $6,500 damages plus her medical expenses.

Judge C. L. Avery charged the jury when court came in Thursday morning and their verdict was returned to the court by Foreman S. Clinton Rogers shortly after noon.

A motion to set aside the verdict and for a new trial was filed by the attorneys for the city, Charles B. Whittlesey and Frank L. McGuire. They had made a motion to direct a verdict for the defendant in court on Wednesday but this was opposed by counsel for Miss Keating, Attorneys Perry Hollandersky and Arthur M. Brown and it was denied by Judge Avery.

NURSING EDUCATION LEAGUE TO MEET AT HOSPITAL

Two sessions are to be held by the Connecticut League of Nursing education when it holds its meeting on Saturday of this week at nurses residence of the William W. Backus hospital.

In the morning at 10:30, an executive committee meeting will be held, which will be followed at 11, by a forum meeting at which the leader will be Miss McConnell, of Hartford hospital, and the subject will be, Institution of Punishment for Misde-

At 2 in the afternoon, a business session will be held. This will be followed at 3:30 by an address and discussion upon "The Dispensary as a Training Field for Student Nurses." The address will be by Professor Amelia Grant, of Yale School of Nursing, and the discussion will be led by Miss Jeannie Heppel, superintendent of the Waterbury dispensary.

Given Surprise Shower

A very pleasant surprise shower was given at the home of the Misses McIntyre, Broad street, in honor of Miss Molly Driscoll, whose engagement was recently announced to Percy Waldo McMaster, of Worcester, Mass.

The gifts were miscellaneous and attractive. About twenty-five covers were laid, and a dainty luncheon was served. The table decorations and favors bespoke the Thanksgiving season.

Miss Mary Brennan entertained with piano selections, and the evening passed quickly for all.

RED CROSS GAVE AID TOWARDS CHILDREN'S HEALTH

The recent announcement in the local press relative to the splendid physical condition of the children in the public schools was a source of great gratification to the citizens of Norwich and they were proud of the fact that Norwich stands first in the state. Norwich Chapter, American Red Cross, has taken a great interest in this work and last year $300 was given to the town health department for the nurses department connected with the schools, $50 was spent for milk for undernourished children, and $80 appropriated for dental work for boys and girls of school age. In addition $340 was voted to the United Workers for home service work among the sick and disabled veterans. This latter amount was not sufficient to carry on this splendid work for the veterans and their families.

The total amount of contributions for memberships last year was $2,019. Fully that amount for 1926 will be required. For the patriotic societies Sedgwick Camp, Sons of Veterans, has made the first contribution of $5 and it is hoped by those conducting the campaign that the various business, civic and fraternal societies will follow.

The sum of $38 more was added to the roll call by the responses that came in Thursday, which brought the total to date up to $835.50.

The roll call will continue until Thanksgiving day, which gives almost a week more in which the citizens can give their assistance to the local branch of the Red Cross by sending in their memberships.

The following are the latest memberships received:

David S. Gilmour, Mrs. David S. Gilmour, Miss Jane Bill, Mrs. Fred Hudson, Mrs. W. K. Tingley, Squire Gregson, Mrs. Squire Gregson, Charles S. Holbrook, Mrs. Charles S. Holbrook, J. P. Holloway, Mrs. Emma Hewitt, William C. Bode, Mrs. William C. Bode, Miss Mary A. Aiken, Miss Laura M. Baer, John H. Barnes, Mrs. John H. Barnes, Miss Annie C. Lyons, Miss Etta W. Sayles, Mrs. Benjamin F. Lewis, Frank W. Brewster, Dr. E. C. Kirby, Mrs. Archibald Mitchell, Dwight W. Avery, Edward W. Jewett, Mrs. Edward W. Jewett, John A. Moran, Mrs. Amos A. Browning, Joseph A. Donnelly, Louis L. Gotthelf, Mrs. Carrie E. Gotthelf, Miss Martha A. Leffingwell, Timothy C. Murphy.

STATE BUILT 8 BRIDGES AT COST OF $148,473

Eight bridges, constructed at a cost of $145,473.76 were built in Connecticut during the last fiscal year, the state highway department shows in a statement issued Thursday, which is part of the department's annual report being prepared for the governor.

The structures varied in cost from $8,792.02, in Guilford, to $24,874.79, in Easton, and $25,645.53, in Canton. The contracts were located in all parts of the state, the following list showing the names of the streams crossed by the new bridges, the type of construction, the contractor doing the work, and the cost of each contract:

Easton, Mill river, reinforced concrete T-beam, Leverty and Hurley, $24,874.79.

Guilford, West river, steel pony truss, C. A. Sibley Co., $8,793.02.

Milford, Indian river, reinforced concrete girder, Lathrop and Shea, $19,238.19.

Oxford, Little river, reinforced concrete slab and T-beam, F. B. Hastings, $17,241.45.

Putnam, Little river, reinforced concrete T-beam with bituminous macadam, The Holbrook Co., $19,754.08, and the Peckham Road Construction Co., $873.05.

Canton, canal, reinforced concrete girder, L. Suzio Construction Co., $13,-328.47.

Seymour, Bladden river, reinforced concrete T-beam, T. J. Fleming, $19,-726.18.

M. H. DONOHOE'S FAMILY RESIDING IN MIAMI, FLA.

M. H. Donohoe, the Baltic mill owner, his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Conway and his son Joseph are passing the season in Miami, Fla., as in former years.

A member of the family writes to a Norwich acquaintance: "We are very comfortably situated on Fourth street and are mighty lucky, for houses are at a premium here. Business is active and from all indications the coming winter will see the greatest amount of business yet. It is amazing, to say the least. One cannot believe it all without seeing it.

"There is no shortage of food, but we have found all food products very high, with the exception of meat. I really think a couple of good restaurants would make a big clean-up, as it is hard to get waited on in the ones here; and really, I don't think any of them can compare with ou Northern ones.

"Of course the hotels are very fine; but when one is shopping, or when men are in town for business, they enjoy a restaurant better.

"Holywood is a wonderful place; we go up there for bathing, as the beach is beautiful and the casino very attractive. It is especially nice for the children, as they have a swimming pool for them.

Nature supplies all her children with brains, but it is evident that she cannot compel them to use them.

Says Ed is Skinniest Man in Town

Cheerup, Ed—things aren't as bad as they look to you right now. Many hundreds of skinny, gaunt, emaciated men looked even worse than you do till someone told them about McCoy's, Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets (the new way to take Cod Liver Oil) and how it would put pounds of good firm, healthy flesh on their bones in just a few weeks.

Nothing like these health creating, weight producing tablets for skinny, underweight men, as thousands can testify. Start to take them today—60 tablets—60 cents at Lee & Osgood Co., or any druggist anywhere.

And listen: if they don't put 5 pounds of good flesh on you in 30 days, your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.

That's fair enough, but be sure—very sure that you get McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—the original and genuine.

SCHEDULE SHOWS GILPATRIC'S DEBTS TO PUTNAM BANK

A schedule in complete detail was filed Wednesday, in Hartford, with George M. Coffin, receiver for the First National bank, of Putnam, in which it was shown that the former cashier of the bank and treasurer of the state of Connecticut, Harold Gilpatric, is in debt to the bank to the total amount of $637,411.

LIONS SEE REMARKABLE EXHIBITION OF SWALLOWING

The Norwich Lions club held their regular weekly meeting and luncheon Thursday noon at the Wauregan house, with President William A. Anderson presiding. The song leader was Earl Taggert. William H. McCrory, director of Princess Bonnie, the American Legion show staged Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at the Broadway theatre, entertained with two of the songs from the musical programme. Dr. Kopeland Markoff won the weekly attendance prize which was donated by Thomas Savard.

The Lions were given an unusual entertainment by Hadji Ali through the courtesy of Manager McAvoy of the Palace theatre. Ali inhales the smoke of eight cigarettes and exhaled it all at one time after carrying on a conversation. He swallowed 30 hazel nuts and one almond and then brought them up again, the almond coming eighth as called for by one of the Lions. He swallowed three colored handkerchiefs and brought them up from his stomach as the colors were called for by the audience. He drank two large pitchers of water and then a pint of kerosene. Then he squirted the kerosene at the lighted candle and afterwards extinguished the blazing kerosene by the water he had swallowed.

The club voted to hold next week's meeting Tuesday noon and each Lion is to take a poor boy for the club's Thanksgiving dinner. After dinner the boys will be taken to the Palace theatre to see Charlie Chaplin. The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

To Feature American-Made Laces.

Eighteen lace manufacturing firms and four department stores will exhibit jointly at the "Made in U. S. A." lace and fashion show to be held in New York December 1 and 2. The show will be held under the auspices of the American Lace Manufacturers' association and is the first event of its kind to be given. The stores will display lace gowns on living models at the afternoon and evening sessions of both days. In addition, several fashion creators will show their newest designs in both lingerie and dresses, also employing mannikins. The purpose of the show is to display the merits of American-made merchandise and to combat the "tradition of superiority" of the foreign laces.

MISS PATRICIA BROWN ENGAGED TO L. P. MOORE

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Brown of No. 16 Prospect street, New London have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Patricia Brown, to Leonard P. Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Moore of East Orange, N. J. Since her graduation from Smith college in 1923, Miss Brown has been living in New York, where she is associate editor of The Designer. Mr. Moore is a graduate of Amherst college and of Columbia Law school and is a member of Theta Delta Chi fraternity. At present he is associated with the law firm of Zabriskie, Sage, Gray and Todd of New York.

Passengers to Game.

According to the official report of the New Haven railroad it carried 21,934 people to and 23,086 from the football game on Saturday. The total is below the number for previous football games with Princeton.

Fortunately the tax assessor is unable to list our hopes.

Whole World Contributes to Medicine

Ginger from India—Iodine from Chile—Olive Oil from Italy—Epsom Salts from England—Menthol from Japan and roots and herbs from almost every country in the world contribute their share towards alleviating the ills of the race. No other medicine, however, compounded from roots and herbs has ever attained such a marvelous record for success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For over fifty years it has been overcoming some of the most stubborn ailments of womanhood, and is constantly growing in popularity and favor. nov20d

FAVOR HIGHWAY BUSSES BY THE NEW HAVEN RAILROAD

Vote Passed by Board of Directors of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce at a Meeting Held in New Haven Yesterday—Would Prevent a Reckless Duplication of Service That Imposes a Serious Burden Upon the Public—Vote Holds Pending a Referendum of the 1,000 Chamber Members.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—The recent and rapid growth of motor bus and motor truck transportation in Connecticut has brought about "an acute and disturbing condition," according to a vote passed here today by the board of directors of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce. The vote states that this "reckless duplication of service imposes a serious burden that must be spread over the entire community affected."

The directors met today for the purpose of formulating the position of the chamber with respect to the bus development program recently launched by the "New Haven" road. The directors obtained data from a round table discussion of all interests two weeks ago. That discussion together with that of today convinced the directors that the proper development of bus transportation is of such basic, state-wide importance that it necessitated a referendum of the 1,000 chamber members, rather than simply a vote of their own.

The view was expressed that when the chamber finally took its stand, as between the "New Haven" road and the independent bus interests, this stand should have the full weight of the entire membership behind it.

However, the directors today took advantage of the emergency powers given them by the chamber constitution by authorizing an officer of the organization to appear before the public utilities commission at bus hearings and state that "in general" the directors favor the operation of highway motor busses by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company." This authority holds only until the result of the referendum is ascertained which will probably be within about two weeks.

President Rogers appointed a special committee from the directors today which drew up the foregoing vote. It consisted of Charles A. Pease, of Hartford, George S. Hawley, president of the Manufacturers' association of Bridgeport; E. K. Root, president of the New Haven Clock company; Alton T. Miner, of New London and P. L. Gerrity, secretary of the Industrial Association of the Lower Naugatuck Valley. They ote follows:

Resolutions Passed

Whereas, at the invitation of the board of directors of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce, the plans and policy of New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company in operating highway motor busses in co-ordination with and supplementary to its passenger operations by railroad in this state, and the attitude of the railroad and the existing independent motor bus operators in relation thereto, have been fully set forth at a joint session with this board, and

Whereas, after thorough consideration of said matters, the directors are of the opinion that the welfare of the citizens, and of the commerce and industry of this state, will be better conserved and fostered by the opetation of such highway motor busses in general by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company (either directly or through the agency of the New England Transportation company) and

Resolved, that, pending the taking of a referendum this day ordered the executive vice-president or other representative of this chamber designated by the president, be and hereby is directed to appear before the public utilities commission of Connecticut at hearings upon the applications of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company and or the New England Transportation company for

Italy Bans Secret Societies

ROME, Nov. 20—The bill abolishing secret societies in Italy, already approved by the chamber of deputies was adopted by the senate today, 182 votes to 10, the voting was preceded by a lengthy discussion, with Premier Mussolini as the final speaker. He refuted the assertions of previous speakers that the fascist campaign against Free Masonry was tending to isolate Italy from the civilized nations. Mussolini declared he would favor the abolition of Free Masonry even if this were true, but the fact that only today hundreds of American bankers were offering subscriptions to millions of Americans for a loan of $100,000,000 to Italy.

FRENCH GOV'T WINS POINT IN CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES

PARIS, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—The government has weathered another storm in the chamber of deputies—in connection with Premier Painleve's measures for the financial rehabilitation of France—this time raised by the socialist allies of the government.

The debate on the financial measures was going along today in accordance with schedule, when Leon Blum, leader of the socialists in the chamber, delivered an ultimatum upon learning that the government was faced with the necessity of asking for 6,500,000,000 francs more paper money. Instead of 1,500,000000 because of unexpectedly heavy demands for repayment of national defense bonds. He insisted that M. Painleve must give assurance that the 1,500,000,000 provided for in the bills would be the last call the government would make on the bank of France, otherwise he would be obliged to vote against closure of the general debate and the motion to take up debate on the bills article by article.

M. Painleve declared this was utterly impossible in view of the constantly changing financial conditions. As neither would yield, a recess was taken to consider the situation. After due reflection, the socialists decided it would be wise to backwater and continue at least for the present, to support the government. The decision by the socialist group was by a vote of 38 to 15.

When the chamber reassembled closure of the general discussion was voted by a show of hands, and a motion to take up the financial measures article by article was adopted, 294 to 250. The socialists, however, made it clear that by voting for the government on this motion they did not commit themselves to support it in the subsequent stages of the debate or on the final vote.

The house was called upon to decide whether, as the government desired, there should be an all-night sitting to debate on the articles. Again the premier had his way, the motion being adopted 287 to 267.

The debate which is expected to bring many other battles, more sharp than those of today and tonight, then began.

FILM ACTRESS PEGGY UDELL SUES FOR $501,000 DAMAGES

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 20.—(AP)—Peggy Udell, film actress and former "Follies" girl, today filed a $501,500 damage suit here against B. P. Fineman and the F. B. O. studios, of which Fineman is general manager, charging two attempts at criminal assault and one of false imprisonment.

The actress asked $100,000 actual damages and $100,000 exemplary damages on the attack charges; $150,000 actual damages for alleged false imprisonment, $100,000 exemplary damages on this charge; $50,000 for "loss of earning capacity," $1,000 for counsel fees growing out of the false imprisonment charge, and $500 for medical services.

Fineman is alleged to have attempted to become familiar with the actress during business interviews in his office, where he also is accused of detaining her with the aid of a detective on the occasion of the second visit.

Fineman referred all inquiries to his attorney.

THE ITALIAN LOAN WAS HEAVILY OVERSUBSCRIBED

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—Heavy oversubscription of the $100,000,000 Italian government currency stabilization bond issue was announced today by J. P. Morgan and company, who headed the nationwide banking syndicate through which the bonds were sold. Subscriptions books were closed less than two hours after they had been opened and while no detailed figures were available, it is understood that orders exceeded $200,000,000.

The bonds were admitted to trading on a "when issued" basis on the New York stock exchange today, selling between 94 1-2, the subscription price and 94 7-8.

Italian Finance Minister Volpi who made arrangements for the loan as well as for the funding of the Italian debt to the United States, sent the following letter to J. P. Morgan and company.

SHEEP GROWERS OF NEW ENGLAND TO ORGANIZE

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—(AP)—Preliminary steps towards the formation of a federation of sheep growers of New England to be known as the New England Sheep Breeders' and Wool Growers' association were taken at a meeting that the number of sheep is decreasing everywhere and that there are great opportunities for development of the industry in this section.

The proposed federation, it was said, will combine in co-operative effect the Maine Sheep and Wool Growers' association, Inc.; the Vermont Sheep Breeders' association; the New Hampshire Sheep Breeders' association; the Rhode Island Sheep Breeders' association; the Connecticut Sheep Breeders' association; and the Massachusetts Sheep Breeders' association.

HENRY D. WEBER HAS BEEN GRANTED A DIVORCE

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 20—Henry D. Weber, Greenwich, vice president of the Zimmer and Dunkak Company, inc., New York city, wholesale butter and egg dealers, was granted a divorce by Judge Newell Jennings this afternoon from Laura Weinke Weber, St. Paul, Minn. Desertion was alleged. The decree was granted upon the recommendation of Edward P. Nobba, superior court committee, before whom evidence was presented.

Weber, formerly associated with a railroad company in Minnesota, removed to the east in 1916. His wife, it is said, returned to St. Paul a year later, firing of residence in the east. The couple were married on October 22, 1901, and have a daughter, twenty, and a son, twenty three. Both children are students in the University of Minnesota.

England Grieves For the Queen Mother

Alexandra Died Bequeathing Memories of a Lovable Character—Lived Long and Happily.

SANDRINGHAM, England, Nov. 20—England's "fairy queen" is dead, stricken with heart disease yesterday morning almost on the eve of her eighty first birthday, Queen Mother Alexandra passed away at 5.25 o'clock this afternoon with her son, King George V, Queen Mary and sorrowing members of the royal family at her bedside.

Thus died the radiantly beautiful Danish princess who captivated England 62 years ago when she came to be the bride of the then Prince of Wales, and who held the empire's love and reverence through three generations as the Princess of Wales, as Edward the Seventh's queen and then as the queen mother.

There was a poignant note of tragedy in the final drama of Queen Alexandra's long life, for her favorite grandchild, the Prince of Wales, was not among those at her death bed. His special train, feeling its way through the fog, which knows no respect either for princes or paupers in England, arrived at Sandringham a few minutes after the end came. The heir to the throne never saw his grandmother alive after the visit he made to greet her just after his return from his South African and South American tour.

The grief stricken prince, accompanied by his brother, the Duke of York, went from the little station master broke the news to him, to the royal house of mourning. Sandringham house, which a heavy pall of fog had wrapped in a melancholy shroud.

Tonight the villagers of Sandringham and its adjoining hamlets and the country folk of the royal estates are lamenting the death of the womanly queen who endeared herself to her subjects in her adopted country in a measure unprecedented in English history.

Once she was a poor little princess, as princesses go, but she loved the fair stories of her native Denmark and her life was much like one of them. She grew to be a most beautiful young girl and was romantically wooed and wed by a prince from England. And in the fullness of time the "sea king's daughter from over the sea," as Tennyson sang of her, sat on the throne beside her king.

She lived long and happily, and died bequeathing memories of a personality as fragrant with lovable qualities as that of any queen in history.

It was the second heart attack this morning that proved too much for Queen Alexandra's enfeebled constitution, she weakened gradually in spite of the administration of oxygen. At the end she died as peacefully as she has lived in recent years in her beloved Norfolk country home, where it is said here, she expressed the desire to be buried.

BELL OF ST. PAUL'S TOLLED KNELL FOR QUEEN MOTHER

LONDON, Nov. 20—Just as the populace was hurrying home from the day's labors, the news of the death at Sandringham of Queen Mother Alexandra reached London. The evening papers were on the streets quickly with mourning borders. Official bulletins were posted at Mansion House and Marlborough House, so the whole city was soon acquainted with the sad news.

The great bell of St. Paul's tolled for an hour—from 8 to 9—tonight. This bell is only used on the death of royalty, the last occasion being the death of King Edward.

Parliament had already adjourned before word arrived of the dowager queen's passing. Many official and private functions were abandoned tonight, but the news came to late to arrange for closing the theatres. There will however, be a general closing on the day of the funeral; arrangements for which will not be decided until the king has been consulted.

The lord chamberlain's department is responsible in these matters. There is no modern precedent for the funeral of a mother of a reigning British monarch. For an exact parallel the lord chamberlain will have to go back to the death of Catherine of France, mother of Henry VI, in 1438. It is expected, however, that the ceremonial observed at the funeral of Queen Adelaide, in 1849, Queen Victoria, her niece, was on the throne, will be followed, that the body will be brought to London, with lying in state and a funeral procession.

The body will then be taken to Windsor, and placed in the royal vault beside King Edward, in St. George's chapel. This has been the burial place of the royal family for the past 150 years, the only exception being Queen Victoria, who rests beside the prince consort, in Frogmore mausoleum.

King George may decide to omit the lying in state, it is believed that in a general way the London ceremonial of the funeral of King Edward will be followed, but without the military accompaniments.

Thefts of Public Funds in Bay State

Shortages in Municipalities Leads Gov. Fuller to Declare Prosecutions Will Follow.

BOSTON, Nov. 20—Widespread revelations of shortages in the funds of municipalities in Massachusetts led Gov. Alan T. Fuller today to declare that town officials in the future "are going to be prosecuted as if they were not city or town clerks and had no influential friends." The governor described the situation which has resulted in thefts of public funds totalling at least $600,000 in some 50 municipalities since 1910 as "intolerable," and said that he was contemplating the appointment of an assistant to the attorney general whose duty it would be "to put these city and town officials behind the bars."

Within the past year audits of town books have revealed discrepancies aggregating fully $150,000 in various communities. One town treasurer recently received a two year sentence. Another whose shortage totalle d$60,000 was sentenced to serve from 8 to 12 years. A third, Harris Dudee of Charlton burned his books and committed suicide. An audit showed a $23,000 shortage.

But in the 60 cases that have come up, the governor said there have been not more than a dozen prosecutions by district attorneys.

In explanation of this lack of prosecution of defaulting officials the governor said:

"I'll tell you why. They belong to a 'preferred class' in these communities, the class which seeks to dictate all the local affairs. If any effort is made to prosecute them their friends jump to their assistance and shout: 'Don't touch our crowd or you'll get into trouble.'

"We're going to make a change," he asserted in announcing his intention of pressing prosecutions. He named Robert T. Bushnell, assistant district attorney of Middlesex county as the man whom he had under consideration for handling such cases.

The governor praised Theodore N. Waddell, director of the state division of accounts, through whose department many of the discoveries of shortages were made.

DETAILS OF SUICIDE OF DEAN GEORGE L. STARR

BOSTON, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—Details of the suicide of the very Rev. Dean George L. Starr, of St. George's cathedral, Kingston, Ont., who according to a medical examiner took his own life yesterday in the Deaconess hospital, were known tonight only to the authorities, who declined to reveal them. All that was known was that Dean Starr suffered from a chronic ailment and had been a patient at the hospital since Oct. 24.

Dean Starr was senior chaplain of the Canadian expeditionary forces during the World war, with the rank of major. He was a member of the Provincial and General synods and a governor of Trinity university, Toronto. His military service began in 1899 when he held a lieutenancy in the Forty-first battalion, Brockville (Ont.) rifles. He served overseas in 1916 and 1917.

Born in Brockville in 1872, Dean Starr was educated in the Collegiate institute and in Trinity university, and received an M. A. and the honorary degree of D. D., at Oxford university, England. After his ordination in 1895, he served successively as curate, bishop's chaplain, canon and rector of St. George's, and was named dean of the cathedral in 1918.

HAITIEN STEAMER TOWED INTO PORT BY U. S. VESSEL

HAVANA, Cuba, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—The Haitien steamer Ville Des Cayes, reported sunk in the Carribean Sea, was found 17 miles east of Pilon by the American steamer Biazor yesterday and taken to Pilon. The passengres and crew were suffering from lack of water and food, but no casualties have been reported. The engines of the steamer were disabled.

Pilon Bay is about 75 miles west of Santaigo de Cuba. The Villes Des Cayes left Aux Cayes, Haiti last Saturday with about 200 laborers bound for Cuba to work in the sugar mills.

Two seamen of the steamer and the chief engineer had been picked up by the English steamer Wanderer and taken to Aux Cayes, from which point the engineer sent a message to the agents of the ship in Santiago that the Ville Des Cayes had been sunk. Seaplanes and destroyers from the American naval base in Guantanamo Bay then joined in the search for possible survivors. They were notified today, however, that the Villes Des Cayes had been found.

Mechanics at Pilon are now engaged in repairing the vessel's engine so that she may proceed to Santiago.

Paid for Reading Advertisements

It costs a small fortune to make one watch, automobile or fountain pen. It takes a large part of the brains and of the factory to make just one of any manufactured product,—but if a thousand or a million can be made, the cost of each comes tappling down.

Advertising, by multiplying the number sold, makes it possible to slash costs. Advertising, by opening up undreamed of markets, has brought within the reach of the people thousands of things which formerly were luxuries only of the rich.

When you buy an advertised article, you join in the popular movement to cut down production costs. America's millions of shoppers, by buying advertised goods, are every day forcing factories to be made larger and commodities to be produced for less.

To buy advertised goods is to start savings on their way to your pocket.

COOLIDGE REITERATES HIS VIEWS ON DRY ENFORCEMENT

Believes All Violations of the Prohibition Law Should Be Prosecuted, However Small—Feels That Violators Are Being Prosecuted by Federal Authorities As Thoroughly as the Existing Legal Machinery Permits.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—All violations of the prohibition law, however small, should be prosecuted, in the opinion of President Coolidge, although he believes that special stress should be placed upon cases where convictions will close up large sources of liquor supplies.

The president feels that prohibition violations are being prosecuted by federal authorities as rapidly and thoroughly as the existing legal machinery permits, and recognizes that prosecutions serving to abolish supply sources do much to reduce minor prohibition cases, which have been clogging court dockets.

The view of United States Attorney Buckner of New York that the small prohibition violations should be ignored, if necessary, to concentrate upon larger cases, has stirred up a controversy which has been brought to the attention of the chief executive.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, recently criticized Mr. Buckner because of his public announcement that he would make little effort to catch the hip-flask law violators in order to center his forces against the bigger ones, and also made the prohibition situation in New York the subject of a conversation with Mr. Coolidge last week.

BUCKNER WOULD PROSECUTE ALL SORTS OF OFFENDERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—U. S. Attorney Buckner, whose policy of ignoring "flask offenders" in order to concetrate on whole bootleggers has aroused something of a storm in national dry circles, declared tonight the problem of thorough prohibition enforcement in New York was entirely one of "judges:"

"Give me enough judges and I will prosecute every violator in New York," he said when his attention was called to a dispatch ascribing to President Coolidge the opinion that no cases should be overlooked.

ACTION ON CHAPMAN CASE AGAIN POSTPONED

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 20.—(AP)—At a conference today of State's Attorney Alcorn, Acting United States Attorney Cohen and counsel for Gerald Chapman, an agreement was reached to postpone until Monday the presentation of papers to Federal Judge Thomas in the move of Chapman's counsel to delay Chapman's execution until he has served out a twenty-five year federal sentence hanging over him.

The case was to have been brought before Judge Thomas at his home in Norwalk this evening but he was notified late the conference in this city that the interested parties would not be able to appear before Monday.

Former City Magistrate Frederick J. Groehl, Chapman's senior counsel, and state's Attorney Alcorn met each other at the conference for the first time since the superior court trial last April when Chapman was sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Policeman James Skelly of New Britain. Despite Mr. Alcorn's sharp criticism of Judge Groehl's absence at the supreme court's hearing on Chapman's appeal for a new trial, and Groehl's pointed rejoinder, their meeting was cordial.

The conference was held in Mr. Alcorn's private law office. Joseph M. Freedman of this city, Ray M. Wiley of Springfield and Charles W. Murphy of Danbury, assistants to Judge Groehl in Chapman's defense were also present. The announced intention of Chapman's counsel to oppose Alcorn's move to have the federal court hearing on the case held within the prison walls instead of at the federal court room in Hartford was brought up.

HINDENBURG SUPPORTS THE LOCARNO TREATIES

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—(AP)—President von Hindenburg is giving active support to the Locarno treaties and his position is causing dismay to his nationalist friends, who are finding difficulty in restraining the party organs from openly attacking the president. The fascist section is less restrained and General Ludendorff today published a sensational broadside against his former superior in the Munich fascist organ, the Voelkischer Kurier, owned by Adolf Hitler. This is interpreted as meaning a final break between the old comrades-in-arms.

The Ludendorff manifesto says: "I once shared honor and fame with Hindenburg. I may even say that I contributed to increase his renown. Today my German heart aches to see how the field marshal is ready to sacrifice his faithe by signing a document of shame and dishonor. Let him rather resign his post than renounce the glory of his past."

Chancellor Luther informed the party leaders that the cabinet will be reconstituted as soon as the Locarno treaties are signed, and that it will be formed on a broader basis, probably including socialists but excluding the nationalists.

HUNTING FOR BODIES WHERE STILL EXPLODED

MILLIS, Mass., Nov. 20.—(AP)—Firemen from two towns hunted for bodies tonight among the ruins of a stone dwelling demolished by three explosions this morning. A large still discovered in the burned wreckage explained the first and greatest explosion, and the others were accounted by large cans which had evidently contained alcohol. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gordon and their daughter, Lena, a school girl, were missing, and it was feared that Lena had met her death in the accident.

Lena, who attended school yesterday, was absent today. The parents were thought to have possibly gone elsewhere for shelter, but nothing was known of their whereabouts. A swamp 200 feet from the dwelling was also being searched for possible victims.

GREENWICH PATROLMEN WOUNDED BY BANDITS

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—A stolen automobile in which four men escaped after one of them had shot and seriously wounded Patrolman Robert O'Keefe near Greenwich, Conn., this morning, was found abandoned today in the Harlem Ship canal near Spuyten Duyvil. It bore two bullet holes. A discharged shell was found in the car as well as a sectional jimmy.

GIASSON GUILTY OF CONSPIRACY TO STEAL

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 20.—(AP)—A jury in superior court here today returned a verdict of guilty in the case of Adelard Giasson, one of the heads of the mission of the Divine Spirit religious colony in Goat Island, tried for conspiracy to steal from members of the colony. Sentence was deferred until Tuesday.

LULL IN PROCEEDINGS OF MITCHELL COURTMARTIAL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—The army court martial trying Col. William Mitchell enjoyed a lull in its proceedings with stormy sessions as prompt when the trial is resumed Monday.

The calm prevailed as the defense nearer the end of its direct evidence. Only one witness was heard, the remainder of the day being devoted to the reading of stipulations and the introduction of voluminous documentary evidence.

When the court adjourned tonight, counsel for the defense said he expected to conclude the presentation of witnesses and stipulations early Monday and planned to rest his case as soon as Colonel Mitchell had testified in his own behalf.

The peace of the day was further marked by the prosecution's acceptance of the four stipulations wanted by the defense to cover the testimony of as many witnesses in Honolulu. Agreement on this point eliminated signs which previously pointed to an indefinite prolongation of the trial while the witnesses were being brought here from Honolulu.

"ONE ARM" WOLFE BEGINS SERVING LIFE SENTENCE

MUNCIE, Ind., Nov. 20—Convicted Wednesday and sentenced yesterday, Charles (One Arm) Wolfe was taken today to the state prison at Michigan City to begin serving a life sentence for the murder on August 14 of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hance. Deputy sheriffs took Wolfe to prison by automobile, accompanied by a brother, Rev. Perry Wolfe of Grand Rapids, Mich.

The killing of the Hances, the state charged, was the result of their testimony against Gerald Chapman at his trial on the charge of murdering a New Britain, Conn., policeman. George (Dutch) Anderson, a co-defendant, was slain in Muskegon, Mich., last month.

UNPRECEDENTED DEMAND FOR AMERICAN BIBLES

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—In response to "the unprecedented demand", the American Bible society has placed orders for over 7,000,000 copies of the "Scriptures portions", it is distributing and expected to increase that order within three or four months.

The entire new testament, consisting of eleven volumes which sell at one cent each is now available in this pocket edition. The gospel of St. John has proved the most popular. By special arrangement with the printer 900,000 copies of this gospel were ordered last month, following an order of 600,000 placed in June.

STRATON AND DARROW WILL MEET IN DEBATE

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 20—(A. P.)—Within three weeks Dr. John Roach Straton, fundamentalist pastor of Calvary Baptist church, New York, and Clarence Darrow chief of defense counsel in the Scopes trial will meet in debate on the subject of evolution, Dr. Straton announced here tonight.

Definite agreement has been reached for at least three debates to be held in large eastern cities, he said. The first debate will be in either New York or Providence, R. I., about December 12th.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—The Rev. Matthew Fox, Franciscan Missionary known throughout New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Massachusetts, died here today after an illness of three years. He was 56 years old.

Father Fox was born in England but came to the United States when still a boy. He was ordanied in Rome in 1895.

Burial will be at the cemetery of St. Bonaventure's college, Alleghany, N. Y.

Wilson M. Reynolds

NEWTOWN, Conn., Nov. 20.—(AP)—Wilson M. Reynolds, 80, chairman of the republican town committee for 25 years, died at his home here today. He resigned as chairman three years ago. Mr. Reynolds also served for twelve years as postmaster of Newtown and at one time was a member of the board of selectmen. He was prominent in republican politics in this county at one time and took an active interest in political affairs at the time of his death.

Mr. Reynolds came to Newtown from New Rochelle, N. Y. He is survived by his wife, one son, A. W. Reynolds, president of the New England Beef Producing Association, and one daughter, who resides in New York.

The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

CLARA MORRIS, ERSTWHILE EMOTIONAL ACTRESS, DEAD

NEW CANAAN, Conn., Nov. 20—(A. P.)—Clara Morris, emotional actress of the seventies, died today of heart disease following a short illness. She was 79 years old.

Miss Morris who maintained a home at Tuckahoe, N. Y., came to New Canaan about two months ago to visit friends. No close relatives of the actress are known, and the body is being held pending word from Thomas Feltner, her legal representative in New York.

Clara Morris, who was Mrs. Frederick C. Harriot in private life, was one of the great emotional actresses of the English-speaking stage a number of years ago, and for more than twenty-five years she enjoyed much popularity and prosperity.

The actress put so much energy and feeling into her roles however, that she suffered a complete nervous breakdown at the height of her career, and it was only after a long retirement that she was able to return intermittently to the stage. In 1894 she found it impossible to continue acting, and for several years devoted her time to writing, chiefly on theatrical subjects.

During the latter period she suffered many financial reverses and in 1907 she became temporarily blind. During her prosperity Miss Morris had purchased "The Pines" at Yonkers, N. Y., formerly a part of the Edwin Forrest estate. A number of benefits enabled Miss Morris and her husband to live at "The Pines" long after she had retired from the stage but in 1910, they were threatened with eviction for failure to maintain interest payments on mortgages.

This aroused much feeling among other theatregoers, with whom Miss Morris had been a favorite. A subscription was started and a considerable sum raised, but before any action could be taken the mortgages were paid off by S. W. Harriot, Miss Morris' brother-in-law. In 1913, Miss Morris sold her estate to a moving picture concern and moved to Whitestone, Long Island, N. Y.

The cares which had darkened her later life were considerably dispelled in October, 1915, when Miss Morris received a life interest in $50,000 from her brother-in-law's estate.

RUMORS OF SETTLEMENT OF RHINELANDER CASE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 20—Sudden adjournment today of the Rhinelander annulment suit until Monday added another fold to the mantle of dark mystery which has enshrined about the entire case.

Rumors regarding a settlement of the suit were innumerable, ranging from reports that young Leonard Kip Rhinelander would settle with Alice Beatrice Jones, his part negro wife, out of court at a price ranging from $50,000 to $300,000, to the predication that the suit would be dropped and the status quo maintained. But there was verification for nothing. Isaac N. Mills, venerable counsel for the wealthy young descendant of the Huguenots, would say but one thing and that was: "The case has not been withdrawn and will not be." Despite his definite announcement the reports of a settlement would not down.

Two "mystery" letters, written by young Rhinelander to his bride, hold the key to the unusual proceedings of the past two days. These letters are admittedly of a sensational character and have to do with the plaintiff's pre-marital relations with Alice. Their contents are known only to the principals in the case and only the vaguest hints have been thrown out as to what they reveal. It is conceded that young Rhinelander is not anxious to have them made public.

So startling is the nature of the letters that Mr. Mills asked for the adjournment until Monday in order that he might have time to make necessary investigations to best protect the interests of his client.

SHENANDOAH COURT EXONERATES CAPT. FOLEY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—The Shenandoah Naval Court of Inquiry exonerated Captain Paul Foley today of the charge made by Mrs. Margaret Ross Lansdowne that he had sought to sway her testimony before that tribunal last month.

Immediately after dismissing the former judge advocate's case, the court resumed the general Shenandoah inquiry, hearing another of the defense witnesses who testified before the Mitchell court martial—Captain Charles P. Clark of the army air service.

In holding that Captain Foley was not guilty either of seeking to cause false testimony to be offered or of seeking by "improper means to influence" the widow of the Shenandoah's commander, the court finally disposed of the case, as the judgment is not subject to review by higher authority.

While the court was announcing this decision, Secretary Wilbur referred to Rear Admiral Campbell, judge advocate general of the navy, a letter from Joseph E. Davies, counsel for Mrs. Lansdowne, asking that the court itself be discharged because of the manner in which it conducted the inquiry into the charge against its former judge advocate.

Study of the points raised in the letter and of the court record was begun immediately, but it probably will be several days before action on the letter is taken by the navy department's legal officers.

BRIDGEPORT TAX BOOK MYSTERIOUSLY DISAPPEARED

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—Evidence that may lead to a gigantic scandal came to light today in city hall. Hardly had it become generally known that a 1922 tax book is missing from the office of Tax Collector Howard S. Challenger, when it was learned that a second book had disappeared mysteriously, in this case from Tax Assessor William F. Connelly's office.

Circumstances surrounding the disappearance of both books appear to be so closely linked that city officials are suspicious that the books have been removed, rather than mislaid, and that there is some plot or conspiracy behind their loss. Investigations are now being conducted and no mercy will be shown the thief, if the books have been stolen, William E. Burnham, president of the "ripper" board, indicated.

The 1923 tax book has been missing from Collector Challenger's office for a week and efforts to locate it have been futile. A 1922 certificate of error stub book, containing records of 200 certificates issued, in the book that is missing from the tax assessor's office. It disappeared suddenly two week ago and has not been seen since. In the tax book are posted notations of certificates issued. The tax book is a record of all taxes paid by people, whose initials rae from A to C, on the 1922 list.

DOLLAR TO SUBMIT OFFER TO THE SHIPPING BOARD

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—(AP)—R. Stanley Dollar, vice president of the Dollar lines, announced today that he would submit an offer to the shipping board tomorrow for the charter of the Admiral-Oriental line for five years, to be followed by its purchase.

WILLIMANTIC MEN SAFE, CAR LOST WITH LENAPE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 20—Two local men, Nicholas Mezaway and Louis Shakel, were about the ill-fated Clyde Line steamship Lenape which was destroyed by fire and scuttled in the Delaware breakwater Wednesday after a thirty mile race against the destructive flags of hungry flames which began to eat the heart of the ship while she was well out in sea. The startling discovery that the local men were aboard was made today when Eugene J. Cotter received a hurried message from Mezaway which read: "Was on board destroyed ship Lenape. Picked up by the Alexandria. Hot time. Thankful to be able to send message. Car burned." Mezaway was up to recently engaged in the restaurant business with Sam Haddad. They disposed of their establishment on Union street. Louis Shakel for years conducted the shoe shine parlor on North street in the Loomer block. He also disposed of his business and the two men decided to go to Florida and seek opportunities there. Before leaving, Mezaway purchased a new Chrysler coach from the Cotter Brothers here. The machine was shipped aboard the Lenape and was destroyed. His friends here stated that it was covered by insurance.

Apparently it was not definitely known that Mezaway and Shakel were to sail on the Lenape although it was known that the automobile was to be shipped on the liner. Relatives were prostrated by a combination of grief and joy when informed that the men had been among the rescued. It is believed that both men will return to this city before resuming the trip to Jacksonville as it is thought that they suffered the loss of their personal belongings as well as the automobile.

PLENTY OF BUSINESS FOR SHORT CALENDAR SESSION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 20—A busy short calendar session of the Windham county superior court was held here this forenoon with Judge Edwin P. Dickenson, of Hartford, on the bench. The term closes next Tuesday at Putnam, with the hearing of four cases assigned to jury, in the following order: Max Odell & Sons vs. Charles Bedar; Teresa Angelo vs. City of Putnam; Arthur E. Howard, trustee in bankruptcy of the estate of C. Harold Gilpatric vs. Rose Cohen and Ellen Cooney Callahan's appeal from probate, estate of Daniel Cooney. The short calendar list was taken up following the above assignments. The case of Jacob C. Keach, administratrix Keith, executrix, vs. Ellen M. Anderson was continued until Tuesday.

In the case of Clara Peck vs. Prufta Novakina et al, a foreclosure action, demurrer and limitation was sought. Mrs. Peck was certified. Judgment was rendered for the plaintiff to recover of the amount of the claim, $244, and the second Monday in January was set as the date for redemption.

The court denied a motion of the attorney for the defendant to reopen judgment in the case of Sylvester Pelosio vs. Stato Shimasky in which the charge of the defendant was of defamation of character. This case was heard November 11, at which time Judge Dickenson found for the plaintiff.

No defense was offered in the case of Petro Talabac vs. Arthur Blanchette et al, a suit to recover a grocery bill of $35.72. Judgment was rendered for the recovery of the full amount of the bill.

In the case of Leo Trembly vs. Florida Trembly, a motion for allowance was denied was granted by the court, the same being fixed at $125 of which $50 is to be paid immediately $50 more in two weeks and the balance before trial.

Judgement was rendered for the plaintiffs to recover $1,066 and costs in the case of John Markowski and Julia Markowski vs. John Jackovitch. A motion to substitute complaint and hearing in damages.

At the close of the short calendar session the case of Dr. Fred M. Smith vs. John Hopkins, of The Ridges, a suit to recover on a bill for medical services to the defendant's wife was heard. Dr. E. C. White, who attended the patient for a few days during the absence of Dr. Smith, was the first witness.

A few days after her marriage, Mrs. Hopkins, 72, fell down stairs at the Hopkins home just over the city line in the town of Mansfield. The date of the accident was October 7, 1922. Mrs. Hopkins was treated for the fracture by the late Dr. John Weldon. Later she developed an infectious disease and was taken to St. Joseph's hospital where Dr. Smith became her attendant. After she had regained her health and had been returned to her home, a bill of $197.50 was presented by Dr. Smith. The defendant refused to pay the bill. According to some of the testimony, Mr. Hopkins did not object to the amount of the bill but stated that his wife should pay it as she had the money. It was brought out by an attorney that Mr. Hopkins was financially able to pay the bill.

The defense attorney and the physician entered into somewhat of a discussion relative to the fees charged, the defense contending that the charge was too high and that the visits were more frequent than necessary. The physicians pointed out that in addition to the disease Mrs. Hopkins was suffering from high fever and two visits a day followed by a term of one visit a day were not superfluous.

Some humor was injected into the trial when the defending attorney examined his plight to the court. Mrs. Hopkins was in the city but refused to come into the courtroom to testify. Mr. Hopkins was present in the room but he was so deaf that he could not hear a single utterance. In addition to this Mr. Hopkins was obsessed with the idea that the case should be tried in Tolland county. The court refused to allow for a deposition from the woman and in a desperate effort the attorney motioned to Mr. Hopkins to take the witness stand. The latter then walked up to the court stenographer and in well pronounced words announced that he wanted to withdraw the action and have it heard in Tolland county. He then resumed his seat and no further efforts were made to rouse him. At this juncture the court brought proceedures to an end by allowing judgment for the plaintiff to recover the amount claimed.

A short recess was taken at the conclusion of which it was announced that the case of Merrill H. Jones vs. D. V. Frione & company, to New Haven, a suit for labor performed had been withdrawn by mutual consent.

Court adjourned until Tuesday, November 24, at 10 a. m., in Putnam.

A barn, some 16 feet wide and 45 feet in length, with contents of five tons of hay, a stock of corn-stalks and some farming implements, located on the Lieber Buchman property on Love Lane, in Windham, just off Brick Top road, was completely destroyed by fire of unknown origin about 1 o'clock Friday morning. The farm was in the care of David Tachinsky who was awakened by the barking of his dogs. Tachinsky gave out the impression that his four Holstein cows were included in the destruction, indating to those who approached him at the time of the fire that the cows were "missing." Early Friday morning the four cows were found enjoying the morning freshness of a nearby pasture. Insurance on the structure was carried by Buchman. Through his right as caretaker Tachinsky owned the hay and corn and the implements. He places his loss at $300.

The Buchman property consists of three farm houses, barns and sheds on Love Lane, formerly known as the Lon Warren estate. Tachinsky has been residing on the place about two years. He formerly owned a little farmhouse which sets near a stumpy frog pond and which he advertised in New York newspapers as "The Beautiful Villa by the Lake." The advertisements caught the attention of wealthy seekers of summer home homes and some of them came to look at the place. The trick is said to have cost the owner the carfare of his customers.

Miss Edith Willet will head Children's Tag day here this Saturday. Various prizes including a ukulele, a Kodak, fountain pen and box of candy are being offered by local merchants to the youngsters bringing in the largest amounts. Children bringing in at least three dollars will be given a free pass to a motion picture show.

Mrs. Mary E. Kenfield, 78, widow of Laban J. Kenfield, died at the home of her son, Charles F. Kenfield, of 1158 Main street, Thursday night at 11:30 o'clock. The deceased was born in Palmer, Mass., November 15, 1847, a daughter of Otis and Seenith (Plumley) Jencks. She is survived by three sons, Charles F. and George F. Kenfield, of this city and Clifford L. Kenfield, of Schenectady, N. Y.; three daughters, Mrs. Frank M. Burdick, of New London; Mrs. Lulu V. Manning and Mrs. W. C. Covill, of Scotia, N. Y.; one brother, Russell Jencks, of Munson, Mass., and one sister, Mrs. Peter Pierce, of Belchertown, Mass.

Harry Hadley Smith, of New Haven, state Y. M. C. A. secretary, spoke interestingly on "My Observations During a Recent Three Months' Trip to Europe," at the November meeting of the Brotherhood of the First Congregational church, held Thursday evening. The supper was served by the Ladies' Aid society. Rev. T. Hawthorne Jones gave the invocation. Professor Morgan St. John, with Dr. R Bullock Jones at the piano, led in several group songs. Four new members were accepted. The total membership is now 146. Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock suggested that the men of the church form a group for the singing of carols during the Christmas celebration on the Sunday evening before Christmas. To this effect a music committee was appointed and consists of Dr. R. Bullock Jones, chairman; Morgan St. St. John, Harry W. Standish and Rev Mr. Wheelock. During the supper entertainment was furnished by several Orthophonic Victrola selections, the machine being loaned by the United Music company. Mr. Smith visited twelve European countries for the purpose of studying social, economic and moral conditions among the men and boys of that continent.

Funeral services for Samuel R. Sypher were held at St. Paul's Episcopal church at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon with Rev. F. C. Williams officiating. Burial was in the new Willimantic cemetery. Avery and Van Zandt were in charge of the arrangements. The bearers were L. Chappell, Steve Hobby, Ernest Dawson, E. Zoeastp, John Wadsworth and Nolan Maynard.

Abraham Gluskin, Union street merchant, was painfully injured and his daughter, Miss Annie Gluskin, sustained slight injuries at noon Thursday when the machine in which they were riding left the highway in Hazardville, and crashed into a tree. The car is a Buick coupe and is owned by Morris Bendett, of this city. The collision with the tree caused the right door of the car to spring open throwing Mr. Gluskin out onto the ground. He suffered lacerations on the nose and under the right eye and was attended by a Hazardville physician. The Gluskins and a friend, Miss Belle Cady, were motoring to Springfield, Mass., on a business trip. The car was quite badly damaged. Miss Gluskin complained of pains in her chest and one knee, sustained when she was thrown against the steering wheel. An X-ray picture was taken Friday morning but failed to show any broken bones. Miss Cady escaped uninjured.

A Buick touring car owned by Euclid F. Ledoux, a member of the local police department and driven by Charles Delorme and a Maxwel coupe owned and operated by Dr. Samuel J. Turcotte, collided early Thursday evening at the function of Ann and Jackson streets, resulting in considerable damage to both machines. The Buick suffered the more heavily, both wheels on the left side being broken. Officer Nicholas Orlando made an investigation and was informed that both parties would settle the matter.

In police court Friday morning Patrick Moore and Isador Caron, transient cotton weavers, pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication and breach of the peace. Judge Foss imposed a fine of $15 and costs in each case. The men could not pay the total assessments of $39.50 and were later committed to Brooklyn jail.

Kappa Pi Epsilon society, of the Normal school, entertained Miss Dorothy Murdock, teacher of art, at the home of Miss Edith T. Parke, a member of the senior class, Thursday evening. Games were played, the prize winners being Miss Rose Welch and Miss Bergin. Miss Murdock was presented with a gift.

William Timmins and not Walter Timmins, was one of the two men fined for intoxication in police court Thursday morning. The correction of a general error is timely inasmuch as it developed that Walter Timmins is a man of unquestioned character.

County Detective William E. Jackson notified Gail Shamback, of this city, to appear in police court this (Saturday) morning to answer to charges of violation of the parking ordinances. The allegation is that about 9 o'clock Friday morning Shamback parked his truck on the restricted section of Bank street and was considerably within ten feet of a hydrant.

The Mediaeval Market and Pageant at St. Paul's Episcopal church, came to a most gratifying close Friday evening after a three-day run. The unique affair was attended by hundreds during the course of presentation.

Rev. H. M. Kingsley, of New York city, will speak on missions at the Chaplin Congregational church Sunday at the one o'clock service.

Miss Sarah J. Abbe, of South Windham, a teacher in New York, is confined to her hotel by illness.

Mrs. Agnes Riordan and Miss Bertha Harris were hostesses Thursday evening at a whist party held in the G. A. R. hall, under the auspices of A. C. Tyler auxiliary, U. S. W. V. Twelve tables were in play and prizes were won by Miss Jane Ashton, first; Mrs John Moran, second, and Mrs. Michael D. Riordan, consolation.

Mrs. Nellie H. Weeks and daughter, Dorothy, enjoyed a noon dinner Friday, the savory animal having been sent them by Game Warden Harold J. Swinyer, of Rochester, Vt.

Hilda Emma Henry, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Hendry, a pupil at the Model school, has been confined to her home, this week, with illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert R. Chappell attended the funeral of Mr. Chappell's aunt, Mrs. Lydia E. Young, widow of the late Milton Young, in Forestville, Friday.

Mrs. A. E. Benner was a visitor in Hartford, Friday.

Mrs. Grace E. Potter is the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Harriet Barrows, in New London.

Word was received here Friday, of the sudden death, early last Sunday morning, of Joseph Cote, of New York city, a former resident of this city. The funeral was held Tuesday. The deceased was born, December 12, 1852, the son of Bartholemie and Desange (Cpulombe) Cote, both of whom died here several years ago. He had resided in New York about eight months. He leaves his wife, one son, four daughters, two brothers and four sisters, three of whom, Miss Philomene Cote, Mrs. Theodore Lavallee and Mrs. Amanie Massé, reside in this city.

Word has been received here of the death of Ray B. Decatur of Oakland, R. I., formerly of East Putnam.

Evence Lejroux of Worcester, Mass., has been visiting at the home of his parents on Walnut street.

Alfred Barber, a student at the Worcester Tech, has been visiting his mother, Mrs. W. R. Barber, of School street, for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miron and little daughter, Shirley, of East Putnam, expect to go to Florida very soon to spend the winter.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 30c.

PLAINFIELD

A pretty wedding took place Monday morning at 7:30 o'clock at St. John's church, when Miss Rosabelle A. Lavigne of this place and Amedie Bouley of New Bedford, Mass., were united in marriage by Rev. Richard P. Morrissey, who also sang the nuptial high mass.

The couple were attended by Mathew Lavigne, brother of the bride and Diegene Bouley, father of the groom. Miss Teresa Sullivan was at the organ during the services and also sang Gounod's Ave Maria and O Salutaris.

The bride was gowned in pencil blue georgette and wore a picture hat of silver, her bouquet being of roses, carnations and lilies-of-the-valley.

Following the wedding a breakfast was served at the home of the mother of the bride, 61 Second street.

Guests from out of town included: Mr. and Mrs. Diogerie Bouley, Miss Eva Bouley, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Gaucher, Mr and Mrs. Emile Bernier and Mr. and Ms. Ernest Bouley all of New Bedford, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Goyette and two sons, Alvarset and Philip, of Woonsocket, R. I.; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lavigne and daughter, Lydia, of West Warwick, R. I., and Mr. and Mrs. Josephat Fournier of Baltic.

The bride received many beautiful gifts of silver, gold pieces, household articles, furniture, linen, cut glass and porex.

Later in the day the couple left on their wedding trip to Boston, New Bedford and Woonsocket and upon their return after Thanksgiving are to reside in this village.

UNION

At the Parent-Teacher meeting, held at the town hall, last week, a Red Cross program was presented. Five members of the Red Cross chapter of Stafford Springs were present, Walter Scott, president; Mrs. Tafft, treasurer, Miss McCulloch, secretary, Miss Carey, distruct nurse and Mrs. Griffeth, an active Red Cross worker, each of whom gave interesting and practical suggestions and aided Union in forming a branch Red Cross chapter.

After Thanksgiving, when the drive for membership is ended, a meeting of this year's members will be called. A permanent organization will then be formed and plans fomulated for the year.

The Ladies' Benevolent association is perfecting plans for the annual Christmas social sale and entertainment, to be held at the town hall early in December.

The Parent-Teacher association was fortunate in having Supervisor Martin Robertson present at the last meeting. He gave an interesting address on School Work and Schools, and also touched on the juvenile Red Cross work. It was the first time that many of the Union people had been able to meet the new supervisor.

The Connecticut highway department has work well underway on Bigelow road, starting where the road leads from the trunk line on Newell hill.

Selectman S. C. Heck is doing a good work in uncovering rocks and ledges on various roads, ready for a steam drill. Surveyors have been at work, this week, on the Stickney hill road, which is to be a state aid road.

An evening session was held by the teacher and pupils of the East School, last Tuesday evening; Miss Agard and her pupils drew a good number of interested parents and friends.

Miss Gladys Young and her school held their evening session on Thursday of this week. Rock Meadow always turns out a good audience at school sessions of this kind.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ballou and daughter, accompanied by Charles R. Webster and Miss Marion Webster, recently called on Robert E. Webster and family at Monson, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Dodge of East Woodstock were callers in town last Sunday afternoon. They are now occupying the new bungalow which they recently built.

Mrs. John Kriska has been visiting in New York city the past two weeks.

Stephen Velgaska has purchased a new pair of black horses. He sold his gray and black pair.

Edwin Heck and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Oliver and daughter of Thompsonville were recent guests at George Heck's.

F. W. Moore and family of Worcester, Mass., were at their Mashapaug cottage last Sunday.

COUSINS OF OLYMPIA MAGRI TESTIFY FOR THE STATE

LITCHFIELD, Conn., Nov. 20—Two sisters, second cousins of Olympia Magri on trial a second time for killing John Bagnano, testified for the state today concerning relations between the defendant and Bagnano during the winter months prior to the fatal shooting in New Haven on February 26. Miss Mollie Lombardi, 18, was on the witness stand when court opened this morning and was followed by Miss Rose Lombardi, 21, her sister, and wife of Tony Bagnano, John's brother, was questioned during the afternoon. Both were subjected to harrowing cross examination by Joseph Koletsky, counsel for the defense.

Mrs. Bagnano told of many occasions upon which Olympia, after the birth of her child, came to the home of the witness, "looking for Johnnie." At one time when she met Olympia on the street the latter said, "If I don't kill Johnnie Bagnano, my father will kill me," according to the witness.

Miss Lombardi testified that on four occasions several weeks before the shooting, she had seen Olympia in the five and ten cent store in New Haven where the former works. On one of these occasions Olympia met John Bagnano and went out with him. The next day Olympia told Miss Lombardi that she "had been riding in an automobile with Johnnie until 11 o'clock the night before."

The court room was crowded during the forenoon and the afternoon. As court was recessed for luncheon, Judge George E. Hinman asked that the court room be cleared of spectators. This request was interpreted to mean that the court wished to give everyone who wanted to see the trial a chance to get a seat. There were more than the usual number waiting in the lower corridor this afternoon to get into the court room.

Mrs. Marion Bagnano, wife of Tony Bagnano, was the witness called by the state this afternoon.

At one time when Olympia was visiting Mrs. Marion Bagnano, John Bagnano was there, the witness said. When they thought Olympia's father was coming, John and the girl ran into a back hall.

The person coming turned out to be Mrs. Mary Lombardi, Marion's mother who told Olympia that she didn't like the idea of John and her meeting in her daughter's home.

Olympia wanted Bagnano to go to work to support her baby or give her some money, the witness said.

authority to operate highway motor bus routes, and record the support and approval of this board of directors in favor of such applications as to unoccupied territory; and if the public utilities commission should grant a certificate for occupied territory, it should be with such proper and reasonable adjustment or purchase as may be agreed upon between the parties or as the public utilities commission may suggest.

Views Expressed at Meeting

Among the views expressed at today's meeting were that both the "New Haven" road and the existing independent bus operators be given fair treatment, that the "New Haven" road should not have its funds confiscated by being compelled to operate unprofitable lines, that the "New Haven" road should not be permitted to take off unprofitable lines by virtue of the nature of its charter responsibilities and a discussion of which side really possesses the vested rights in the present bus controversy.

The directors also passed a resolution outlining the importance of the rapid extension of bus transportation in Connecticut. This resolution commits the chamber to prepare and introduce a bill before the 1927 legislature placing common carrier motor trucks under the jurisdiction of the public utilities commission. This resolution sketches the part played by the chamber for the past sixteen years on outstanding transportation issues and points out that the chamber played a leading role in the state-wide campaign for the establishment of the public utilities commission. This resolution follows:

In view of the rapid growth of transportation of persons and property by motor bus and motor truck, which in certain parts of the country threatens the solvency, service and rates of railroads and trolley lines—which in Connecticut has brought about an acute and disturbing situation and which by reckless duplication of service imposes a serious burden that must be spread over the entire community affected, the directors of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce feel it timely to recapitulate the several positions taken and activities pursued by the chamber and to reaffirm the chamber's policy of sixteen years as applied to existing conditions:

Therefore, be it voted that this board reaffirm:

(A) The position of leadership that the chamber took in 1909 in favor of the regulation of railroads, trolley companies and other public utilities which action was a strong factor in moulding business sentiment and a principal factor in the establishment of the present public utilities commission;

(B) The position which the chamber again took in 1919 with respect to passenger motor busses when it special trolley committee recommended and caused to be drafted a bill providing that such busses acting as common carriers be subject to the regulation of the public utilities commission and which action was overwhelmingly approved in a referendum of our membership and the substance of which become a law;

(C) The extension of the same position to freight motor trucks which was enunciated in 1923 by the chamber's special committee on survey of freight transportation which policy was reaffirmed in the report of the same committee to this board in 1924, who approved it and ordered a referendum of our membership which referendum overwhelmingly endorsed the policy;

(D) The position of the chamber in actively supporting house bill 853 at the 1925 general assembly which bill contained the substance of our 1923 referendum providing that motor vehicles serving as common carriers of freight for hire on public highways shall be subject to reasonable governmental regulation as to rates, service and operation;

(E) The position that was taken by ex-President Bullard in his annual report which was presented at Hartford last May, unanimously approved by the members present, and widely copied in the daily press.

The rapid march of events confirms the soundness of this well established policy of the chamber in all its aspects, and the pressing need for action thereon. The recent decisions of the supreme court of the United States have so defined the sphere of action of the states and of the federal government that a definite line of activities may now be pursued.

Be it therefore further voted:

(1) That the president be authorized through the executive offices of the chamber to co-operate with the chamber of commerce of the United States and with state and local chambers of commerce as far as practicable in endeavoring to secure the passage of laws providing for the reasonable federal regulation and licensing of inter-state teuck and bus lines serving as common carriers of freight, express or passengers;

(2) That, in view of the large field which still remains for the regulation of inter-state motor trucks corresponding to that now exercised over intra-state motor busses, the president be authorized through the executive offices to take such steps as may be necessary for the drafting, introduction and support before the 1927 general assembly of a satisfactory bill providing for regulation of intra-state common carriers by motor truck.

(3) That, in view of the difference of opinion as to the regulation of motor trucks that arose at the 1925 general assembly between the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut and the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce, the president be authorized to name a committee of seven (7) persons who shall represent the various basic groups included in the chamber's membership to confer with such agencies of the Manufacturers' Association as that organization may see fit to establish, to the end that there be, if possible, a unified policy of the two organizations with respect to: (A) the support of federal regulation of inter-state motor busses; (B) the support of federal regulation of inter-state motor trucks; (C) state regulation of intra-state motor trucks, together with such other aspects of the transportation problem as the committe may dem wise to consider and that the secretary be instructed to transmit a copy of this vote to the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut with the request that it be considered by the directors of that organization.

WHITE HOUSE PHYSICIAN VISITS PRESIDENT'S FATHER

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—Major General James F. Coupal, personal physician to President Coolidge, came here today at the behest of the executives and was received immediately at the home of the president's father, Col. John C. Coolidge, who has been ill with heart trouble.

Major Coupal came from New York where last night he left the presidential party, riding by train to Ludlow, from where he was taken here by a stage.

When he emerged from the Coolidge homestead he declared he had found the patient better than he had expected in view of what he had been through in the past week.

Dr. Albert M. Cram Col. Coolidge's personal physician, had previously stated that Col. Cooldige's condition was improved over yesterday. Heart blocks had been noted, but they were few and not of the severe character suffered earlier in the week, when the patient's situation was called serious.

Nothing was available from Major Coupal on the subject of the projected plan to take Mr. Coolidge to Washington for the winter, which had been reported one of the objects if his visit here. It was definitely learned he had not discussed the matter with Mr. Coolidge.

Major Coupal will stay here several days, the exact duration of his visit as yet being undetermined.

The student body of the college of the City of New York by a vote of 2,092 to 345 recommended abolition of compulsory military training in that institution

DANIELSON

CHRISTMAS CLUB MONEY REACHES NEARLY $130,000

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Nov. 20—Count the spheres if you will, that you may be certain you read it right, but it is with great pleasure that The Bulletin makes known that Danielson's three banks, The Windham County National, The Brooklyn Savings and the Daniel Trust company, in the order of the seniority, will release between $110,000 and $120,000 in Christmas club funds on or about December 10.

There's a bale of money that should make this a happy community at Yuletide and smooth the slides down which Santa Claus pours his avalanche of Christmas gifts. After all, this Christmas club fortune is not exclusively Danielson's. It represents the savings from all the communities that have within the past few years made Danielson the outstanding banking center of northeastern Connecticut.

There will be Christmas club checks for Wauregan, Central Village and Moosup, for Attawaugan, Ballouville, Goodyear, Dayville, Elmville and East Killingly. More checks for Brooklyn and South Killingly and Hampton and Pomfret—and for other places. Some of holly-decorated checks will find their way into obscure but comfortable homes on the rural mail routes, where the carrier is the Santa Claus. Young and old will get them—the return, with interest, of 50 weeks of saving for the great holiday, gift-giving period of the year. The checks will range from $12.50 to $1,000.

It has been indicated that distribution of this money will be widespread. Hundreds of people will get checks. What will they do with them? There's a question. Past experience has taught Danielson bankers that from 25 to 35 per cent. of all the money they pay out in Christmas club checks is re-deposited in savings accounts. Much of the remainder goes into Christmas gift buying. Some of it is presented as gifts to others, and much of this part finds its way back into the banks. But the dealer part of the money goes to pay Christmas shopping bills. This greatest Christmas club release in the history of Danielson should boom business here, and not hurt buying in any of the towns to which the funds will flow.

"Black figures on a chrome orange back-ground," says the state motor vehicle department in describing the 1926 registration plates for pleasure cars. Well, some of the new plates have been received here and autoists claim that if the back-ground is chrome orange, then the average green is a beautiful shade of blue. They're just plain "yellow" to the mind of the average man—not orange. The motor vehicle department is up to an old dry goods trick—calling a grey shade Elephant's Breath. It may be added that the new plates are O. K.—can be read from a

A great, ungainly looking machine that has been backed up to the new bridge project in Main street the past two days, ready for service, went into action Friday morning and spouted concrete as a politician spouts words. At night fall a new concrete bridge had been poured in Danielson and the machine seemed to yawn and proclaim "That was an easy one." The machine mixed more concrete and spewed it out on the bridgeway in the course of a few hours than 20 men could have mixed in three days. This mechanical thing is a marvel of efficiency—a device created by man to outdo his own capabilities.

It kept a score of men busy hauling sand, cement and crushed rock to feed its great appetite and in caring for the mixture that was made of these ingredients for the construction of a modern concrete bridge. All of this is about a concrete mixer of the giant variety. Probably some archeologist will dig one up a few thousand years hence and declare it must have been human, probably the missing link, though they will be put to it to find its brain.

Those who doubted that an entire concrete bridge, railings excepted, could be poured in a day had their answer Friday. The machine, expertly operated, did the trick. Its powers seemed unlimited. It appeared as though half a dozen of them could build a duplicate of the Chinese wall around Danielson in the course of a week. But that would be a useless effort. Four flivver drivers would knock it all down before Christmas eve.

John Z. Labelle of Baltouville is the Killingly member of the board of directors of the Windham County Farmers' association. The election of officers was held recently.

A six-apartment house under construction for Moses H. Berthiaume, Jr., on Furnace street, is well advanced in construction. The building is something different than other apartment houses in Danielson, having a number of new and fine features.

It's time this hunting season came to an end. When a hunter puts a rabbit out on a second story window ledge to keep cool over night and comes around the next morning to find a dead crow in its place the season's getting terribly woosy in Danielson. But such a thing has happened here. Dead rabbits do not jump off second story window ledges, nor do dead crows fly onto them. Something unusual must have happened here, and both the rabbit and the crow being dead neither can testify in the case. In addition, the rabbit is missing and, from all accounts, is not inside the crow. Case referred to Danielson Rod and Gun club for investigation and report.

Dancing is getting into the fast stride of big league baseball. The dancers are beginning to play double-headers, too. Many of those who will dance and dine at one place or another Thanksgiving eve will get back here shortly after midnight for another dance that is to start at 12:30 and continue until 4.30 in the morning of Thanksgiving day.

Incident to the holding of a Sunday school social at the Methodist church Friday evening there were donations of vegetables from young and old, these to be sent as a Thanksgiving offering to the Deaconess home at Providence.

Rev. Roger C. Stimson, Mr. and Mrs. Burdette C. Hopkins and Miss Frances Danielson have been at Bridgeport attending the state Sunday school convention that came to a close on Friday after three days of sessions.

After waiting for trolley service for many years and never getting it, Almyville, eastern most section of Moosup, now has hourly bus service to Central Village, where trolley line connections, north and south, may be made. The new arrangement has followed the discontinuance of trolley service between Moosup Center and Central Village.

No effort will be made this fall to develop one of the large fields on the borough farm as an airport for emergency landings of planes on the Boston-New York route. It is planned now to develop the field in the spring, a work that will require the removal of several old stone walls and use of dirt that will come out of filter bed construction to be done by the borough.

A abundance of poultry is in prospect for Thanksgiving feasts. This is now indicated for Danielson. Many of the chickens that will figure in holiday dinners will come from flocks owned in the immediate neighborhood.

A supper served by the young people of St. Alban's parish Friday evening was an event that drew a good attendance and won much praise for those who had the affair in charge.

Friday was another late November day with the mercury up to 60 degrees during the early afternoon.

Miss Laura Bennett and George W. Cbuch, Jr., both of this town, were married at St. Alban's rectory Thursday by Rev. Leonard Richards.

In the recently published list of officers of the Woman's department of the Windham County Agricultural society the name of Mrs. Marshall J. Frink, Brooklyn, second vcie-president, was inadvertently omitted.

The Connecticut company rounds out today another week of service along the line between Central Village and North Grosvernordale with no issue of any statement as to when the busses are to replace the cars, a change to come in the not distant future.

There will be much to interest and entertain you tonight at the big bazaar in the interest of St. James' parish at the town hall. Admission .15 cents.—Adv.

The postoffice will close at 10:30 a. m. on Thanksgiving day, though the lobby will remain open as usual. Rural service will be suspended and no money order or postal savings business transacted.

Officer John Murray of the New Haven road police, formerly captain of police in Putnam, was a visitor in Danielson on Friday.

Major E. L. Darbie, in charge of special troops of the 43rd division, has enlisted five of the eight men who are to have headquarters at the Danielson state armory and who will be largely engaged with clerical work. Some ex-service men are among the men enlisted.

George A. Debrossies of Woonsocket is spending the week end with relatives in Danielson.

Hawes; steward, Fred Hicks; gateKeeper, Richard Parkhurst; assistant steward, Herbert Williams; Ceres, Miss Emma Eastlund; Pomona, Miss Ida Kinne; Flora, Miss Margaret Gundersen; lady assistant steward, Mrs. Milo Appley; executive committee, Milo Appley; insurance committee, Levi Clark; pianist, Mrs. Walter Sager.

Mrs. Hiram Hawes and son, Merritt, returned Wednesday evening from a motor trip which included New York city, New Jersey and Central Valley, N. Y., the latter place being their former home.

Mrs. Henry Larkham, who has been sick with an attack of grip, is recovering nicely.

Mrs. Houston Lathrop and daughter, Betsy, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Lathrop. They remain until after Thanksgiving. Miss Alice Lathrop of New Haven is also a guest of her grandparents.

The infant daughter of Mrs. Ella Willoughby, who has been at Backus hospital for treatment for digestive trouble for some time, is again at home and much improved.

The town teachers had a day off Tuesday to attend a teachers meeting at Jewett City.

WHITE MOUNTAIN HOTEL BURNED TO THE GROUND

NORTH CONWAY, N. H., Nov. 20—(A. P.)—The Randall house, one of the largest year-round White Mountain hotels, was burned to the ground with a loss of $50,000 today. A high wind swept the flames through the entire structure before the Conway and North Conway fire departments could reach the scene. The firemen were forced to confine themselves to preventing the flames from spreading to out buildings.

Carl, son of Harry Randall, the owner, discovered the fire behind the bricks of the living room fireplace. He gave the alarm, but the small force of servants which the hotel retains through the winter season and half a dozen guests were unable to check the blaze. They were driven from the building after rescuing some of their belongings.

PUTNAM

PLEADED GUILTY TO FORGERY IN PUTNAM COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Nov. 20.—In city court this morning Christopher J. Reilly of North Oxford pleaded guilty to forgery and was bound over to superior court in the sum of $1,000. Several attempts that were made during the day to secure bond were not successful and he probably will have to go to Brooklyn jail. He registered at the Putnam inn under the name of James A. Clark and managed to get $50 on a $100 check drawn on a Worcester bank to which he had forged the name of James E. McWilliams. Reilly attempted to leave the city but suspicions about the signature led to an investigation and to Reilly's arrest.

RALPH C. JENKINS SPEAKER AT WEBSTER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Nov. 20.—Ralph C. Jenkins, superintendent of schools and president of the Putnam Rotary club made the principal address at a dinner and meeting held by the Retail Merchants' association of Webster on Wednesday evening. Mr. Jenkins is a forceful and eloquent speaker and his talk met with the unqualified approval of those who heard him. The subject of his address was "Mobilizing the Community" and among other things he said that concerted effort on the part of all classes and creeds of the community was necessary in order that success and progress be theirs. People supporting the merchants, merchants supporting community enterprises, and all working toward the common goal, the town or city, would make for success.

Mr. Jenkins illustrated an example of community effort by citing the experiences of Putnam, following the closing of the bank due to the misappropriation of funds by the cashier. This came, he said, after a business depression the worst in the city's history, and was apparently a crushing blow to Putnam.

He told of the manner in which the people of Putnam responded to the emergency, and today there are two banks where there was formerly but one. "Putnam is coming back, is back, in fact, stronger than ever. "Only this week I was told by one of the railroad men that the amount of the freight business during the last two months was the greatest since the war."

In speaking of the experience of Putnam, Mr. Jenkins said that it illustrated what could be done when a community is mobilized, and working to one end. He urged that Webster concentrate on its natural resources, and said that apple growing was one of the possibilities that had not been developed and that the area immediately surrounding Webster was a most fertile field for this industry.

He declared that much depended on the correct grading and marketing of the fruit, to make it a success. The scenery of Webster was another asset that needed exploiting, and if as much effort was put into this publicity as was given Florida, people would be flocking here to the greatest country in America.

All classes organizations, churches schools and clubs should be organized and mobilized, and once directed toward the goal everybody working together, there could be no question about the success that would result.

Mr. Jenkins was accorded a big round of applause when he had completed his talk and was given a rising vote of thanks by those present.

The usual go at the democratic city caucus in endorsing all of the republican nominees for the city election to be held the first Monday in December is due to the fact that there are no party interests at stake and that there is a public demand for the continuation of the present efficient police administration.

George Potvin was nominated for registrator of voters and J. J. McGarry for auditor at the democratic caucus, as the party is entitled to a minority representation in both of these positions. J. J. McGarry was chairman of the meeting and George Potvin was clerk.

In the automobile collision at the corner of Pomfret and Canal streets, Thursday evening, Mrs. Larue narrowly escaped serious if not fatal injury. She was walking around the corner from Pomfret street to go up Canal street when the cars collided and the lighter Ford was forced against the pole just inside the curbing. Had it not been for that Mrs. Larue would have been crushed between the automobile and the brick building.

Principal and Mrs. E. L. Robinson, Miss Adele Keith, Miss Janet Hight and Miss Irene Bernier of the High school faculty were in Webster to attend the Bartlett High school alumni play "The New Poor" at the Steinberg theatre. This is the same play that the Putnam High are soon to put on here.

The New Year's eve entertainment committee of Cargill council, K. of C. are perfecting their plans for this annual event. The committee consists of Ulric Baker, chairman, P. Edgar Lucier, John McCauley, George LaJeunesse, Lawrence Phaneuf, Charles Circa and J. M. Hogan.

The members of the Hook and Ladder company of the Putnam Fire department recently gave a chicken supper at their rooms. There were about 30 members and their guests present. The committee in charge of the supper comprised Edmund Keane, E. Guertin and Charles Mahue.

At the Methodist church on Sunday evening there will be a stereoptican lecture and the subject will be "The New Day in Mexico."

The Sunday evening service at the Baptist church will be in charge of the young people of the church.

Rev. D. Brewer Eddy, associate secretary of the American Board of Missions will preach at the 10:30 morning service of the Second Congregational church.

The committee on Missions of the general conference of Congregational churches in Connecticut is putting speaking teams of missionaries in the churches of the state this month. The team for the Putnam Congregational church will be here on Tuesday, November 24th. In the afternoon there will be a meeting with the Women's Missionary society and in the evening a banquet for the men of the church. The speakers to be here are Rev. D. Brewer Eddy associate secretary of the American Board; Rev. John J. Banninga of Pasumalia on the Madura mission of India since 1901 and Mrs. Charlotte Hawkins Brown who founded and developed the Palmer Memorial Institute for colored people at Sedalia, North Carolina.

Mr. and Mrs. Armand Lachance and son and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lachance have been visiting friends and relatives in Bristol.

Mr. and Mrs. James N. Bevan of Hartford have been the guests of Mrs. Bevan's sister, Miss Elizabeth Child of Grove street.

Shubael Watson and family of Arch street are to occupy the house being vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kingsbury who are moving to New London.

A COALITION CABINET FORMED IN POLAND

WARSAW, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—Poland's ministerial crisis, brought on last week by the resignation of Premier Grabski and his ministers, has been ended with the formation of a coalition administration with Count Skrzynski, foreign minister in the Grabski cabinet, as premier and foreign minister.

Count Skrzynski gave up his first attempt to constitute a government in view of the controversy surrounding the inclusion of General Sikorski as minister of war. Maciej Rataj, president of the diet, failed in his attempt to form a cabinet, and Count Skrzynski again took up the task, overcoming the war portfolio difficulty by arranging for the department to be conducted for the time being by a high official.

The new ministry is made up as follows:

Premier and foreign minister—Count Skrzynski.

Minister of interior—M. Rackskiewicz.

Land reforms—M. Radvan.

Finance—M. Zdielhowski.

Education—Stanisaw Grabski (brother of former premier.)

Commerce—M. Osiecki.

Public works—Andreas Moraczewski.

Labor—M. Ziemiecki.

Agriculture—Ladislas Kiernik.

Railways—M. Chandszynski.

Justice—M. Piechoki.

All the members of the ministry are leaders in the five most important groups of the diet.

BELATED LOVE LETTER WAS CAUSE OF SUICIDE

PARIS, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—A special delivery love letter in which his sweetheart promised a reconciliation travelled more slowly than the ordinary mail, and the delay in its delivery was responsible for the suicide of Richard Bret Harte, a grandson of the famous American author, Bret Harte, his friends said today after they had discovered the body in his gas-filled Montparnasse apartment.

Last Tuesday Harte quarreled with a young Englishwomen with whom he was in love, and she left him saying she would send a special delivery letter within three hours or would never communicate with him again. The letter failed to arrive until noon the next day, and Harte's friends found it unopened, pushed under his door when they entered the apartment today.

Harte's body was found on the bed. All the jets of a gas stove were turned on. The doors and windows were not sealed so death must have come slowly. This was indicated by a letter which was found, sprawled over many pages, the writing, beginning firmly but becoming progressively illegible.

"To you, my love, this is my last letter, and I am writing it as I die," the letter began. Finally it ended in a blot.

Harte was known to have been greatly despressed by his failure to emulate his grandfather's literary achievements. He was born in Philadelphia in 1889.

DISCHARGED AND LIQUOR WAS RETURNED TO HIM

STAMFORD, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—Vincent Lanz, 18, of Madison, was released by the police tonight after he had been held for several hours charged with violation of the liquor laws. He was arrested this afternoon when eleven quarts of liquor were found in his automobile. The machine was carrying Texas markers. He was given his freedom, it was said, because of the amount of liquor he was carrying was insufficient for successful prosecution on a charge of transportation of liquor, the state law providing that five gallons must be carried.

Lenz told his father was in Texas taking care of his oil interests. He told th epolice he was driving the machine back to Texas and that friends in New York had given him the liquor. The liquor was returned to him.

WOMAN KILLED WHILE CROSSING RAILROAD TRACKS

SOUTH NORWALK, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—Mrs. Katie Bodnar, 64, of Rowaton, was struck and instantly killed while crossing the railroad tracks near the Rowaton railroad station tonight, by a special train carrying football crowds to the Yale-Harvard game in Cambridge. She was walking along the tracks with her husband and when a small dog accompanying them darted on to the track, Mrs Bodnar made an effort to rescue the animal and was struck by the train.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

Captain Paul Foley was exonerated by the Shenandoah inquiry.

LATEST RETURNS FROM AUSTRALIAN ELECTIONS

NEW YORK Nov. 20—(A. P.)—Latest returns from the elections held in Australia last Saturday strengthen the position of the government of Premier Bruce.

A cable received today by the commissioner for Australia, Sir James Elder, gives the probable position of the parties as follows: Nationalists 35. Country party 14, Labor party 23.

TROOPERS TO LOOK FOR MISS ALICE M. CORBETT

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—Two state troopers were ordered to West Suffield, Conn., tonight to look for Miss Alice M. Corbett, the Smith college junior who disappeared from her dormitory a week ago today. The authorities had been told that a girl was seen to leave an automobile at the sanatorium there last Sunday and that the automobile then returned to Northampton whence it had come.

COST OF LIVING HAS INCREASED IN MONTH

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—The monthly cost of living index number of the National Industrial Conference Board was 0.9 per cent. higher on October 15, 1925, than for September 15, 1925. Clothing, shelter, light and sundries showed no change while the average prices of other items showed increases.

FIVE BANDITS MADE $18,000 HAUL IN DETROIT

DETROIT, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—A gang of five men tonight obtained $18,000 at the Ainsworth Manufacturing Company offices after a fight with two express messengers, one of whom was killed, Ross Loney, 30, was killed, and Walter Radloff, 26, seriously injured when they returned the fire of the robbers who surprised them as they entered the office building with the payroll.

ACTION AGAINST FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY COMPANY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—The right of the federal trade commission to order the Famous Players-Lasky company to divorce its producing and distributing interests from its exhibiting properties, valued at $100,000,000 was asserted in a brief filed today by W. H. Fuller, chief counsel for the commission.

The brief was in reply to those previously filed by the famous players and its affiliated distributing and exhibiting companies, who have been charged in a complaint issued by the commission to hinder competition and create a monopoly in the motion picture industry. final arguments are to be held before the commission November 24 and 25.

Counsel for the commission asked that an order be issued directing Famous Players to desist from certain business methods, such as block booking as now practiced, as well as to separate its producing and distributing functions from its exhibiting business. The right of the commission to order the latter course was challenged by the respondents on the ground that it was beyond the scope of the federal trade commission act and in reality was a dissolution proceeding authorized only under the Sherman law. They also denied they were guilty of any improper business practices.

Asserting that "the purchase of theatres was the last step in carrying out respondent's conspiracy to restrain interstate trade," Mr. Fuller's brief cited that the commission had issued such orders in other cases and that the courts had upheld them as "provisional" with the circuit court of appeals having "original jurisdiction with power to enter a decree fixing the rights of the parties."

Answering arguments by the respondents that mere size of a business does not constitute a violation of law and that the motion picture producer has a right to display his product direct to the public the brief said the "illegality" lay in the practices followed.

"Respondents need not acquire all of the theatres in a particular section before competition is substantially lessened or a tendency toward monopoly appears" it said. "Both are already apparent in this case. X X X. Respondents have acquired theaters in such numbers in important territories as to close that territory to competing producers and distributors save to the extent and on the terms made by respondents."

NEW YORK TUBERCULOSIS AND HEALTH CONFERENCE

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—Enchoachment of the activities of public health officials upon the private practice of physicians was discussed today at the New York Tuberculosis and Health conference by Dr. William H. Welch, dean of the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health.

Dr. Hugh S. Cummings, surgeon general of the United States public health service, announced that he intended to secure the widest possible application throughout the country of the principles and methods of disease prevention being developed in the health demonstrations which are being conducted in Catturaugus county, N. Y., Syracuse and sections of New York city.

Pointing out the importance of the psychiatric clinics opened in the demonstrations and elsewhere, Dr. Frankwood Williams, medical director of the national committee for mental hygiene, declared that "over 1,000,000 children in the public schools of America are headed for no other place than for the hospital for the insane." Mental clinics for school children should be organized in every community, he said, in order that a large proportion of these children might be made healthy and useful citizens.

Old age may be deferred, maturity reached earlier and larger average size attained by proper nutrition habits, according to Henry C. Sherman, professor of food chemistry at Columbia university.

"There is every reason to believe," he said, "that in the average American dietary meats, sweets and sometimes breadstuffs are too prominent, while milk, vegetables and fruits are not as prominent as would give the best results."

TROUBLES OF RESIDENTS ON MEXICAN BORDER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—Residents of towns on the Mexican border have found themselves in a peculiar position, since merely walking across some streets constitutes a violation of the federal immigration law.

Small settlements on the border that have for years considered themselves a unit, although parts of them extended on both sides of the international line, are bewildered over the strict enforcement of law that prevents a resident of one section from crossing the street to trade at a store or call on a friend.

Until recently, immigration officials have allowed reasonable interchange across the line, but now they are on enforcing the law to the letter, and a Mexican, to cross the street, is required in some instances to go more than a hundred miles to get a passport vised.

Senator Cameron, republican, Arizona, has discussed the situation with immigration authorities here and will leave for the border Sunday to see if something can't be done about the situation.

HAIR MUST BE BENEATH THE BRIM OF WOMEN'S HATS

LONDON, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—The curl once seen in the coiffure is coming back. The latest edict of the hair dresser is that the hair again must show from beneath the brim of women's hats. The stern, mannish line of the small hat crammed upon an eton-cropped head, so that not a single hair is visible, has been ordained a thing of the past. The lost curl, or a bunch of stray, wavy ends of hair, which will give softness to the face, are to be the vogue.

Dame Fashion has decreed that the curls must match the dress of the wearer. They come in pastel shades and are pinned on so that only hair in pale blue, petunia, rose or green shows from under the hat. For evening wear complete wigs in pastel shades can be obtained to match evening dresses.

AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN AT NON-POLITICAL DINNER

LONDON, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—Austen Chamberlain, the foreign secretary, was entertained at a non-political dinner tonight given by men prominent in art, science, the professions and business, regardless of their party affiliations, as evidence of the national appreciation of the services he rendered in the negotiations at Locarno which brought about the security pact.

Mr. Chamberlain was visibly moved by the tribute to him. He reviewed the Locarno negotiations, describing them as only a start toward world peace which he hoped would be universally supported.

Lawyers break more laws than any other class of people—but they get paid for doing it.

SINN FEINERS WOULD BOYCOTT ULSTER LINEN

DUBLIN, Nov. 20.—(AP)—The Sinn Fein conference here has adopted a resolution favoring a boycott of Ulster linen through an advertising campaign in the United States if republicans now held prisoner in northern Ireland are not released before Christmas.

Eamon De Valera, the republican leader, said that it was serious to start a boycott of goods manufactured in Ireland. The republicans wanted the country to be self-supporting, he asked if they were satisfied that this boycott should be imposed after Christmas if there was no response. There were cries of "yes."

The Dublin delegates said they must discover whether a boycott could be effectively imposed before they inaugurated it.

FAVORS PUTTING TAX ON PEACE TIME BASIS

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 20.—(AP)—John W. O'Leary, Chicago banker, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, advocated putting the present national tax structure, which he said bears the earmarks of the war, on a peace time basis, in an address before the Springfield chamber of commerce and Rotary Club today. The national chamber, he said, stands for certain proposals which if made law would form the basis for such a peace-time policy and which represent what business men believe to be sound principles which should be considered if the country is to be stimulated to fullest economic productivity.

SELF-STARTING FOGHORN IS BEING TRIED OUT

LA ROCHELLE, France, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—A self-starting fogborn, which will begin its tooting whenever a sufficiently thick mist appears, is being tried out in the lighthouse on the Ile D'Oleron.

It has been determined that sea fog appears in the neighborhood of the lighthouse only when humidity reaches a certain degree. The new foghorn apparatus depends upon the moistening of a calcium carbide by the damp air. The moist carbide gives off a gas which operates the siren by pressure.

Some skeptics say the siren is as likely to be a rainhorn as a foghorn but all are agreed that in either case it will prove useful.

FINDS WOMAN PACIFISTS ARE A MENACE TO PEACE

MUNICH, Germany, Nov. 20.—(AP)—Women pacifists are a menace to peace, in the opinion of the Bavarian government, which today issued an order forbidding a meeting of the International League for Peace and Freedom, of which Miss Jane Addams is the international president.

When the Munich group of this organization announced that the theme, "What We Women Want," was to be debated under its auspices, the government issued this order.

"In the interests of maintaining peace and order this meeting must be forbidden, since all gatherings of the women's peace league result in disturbances."

NINE HOLD-UPS IN BOSTON THURSDAY NIGHT

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—(AP)—The record of hold ups for a single night in Boston was said by police to have been broken when reports of nine such robberies had been received early today. Four men were arrested on suspicion, and one was found to have several thousand dollars' worth of jewelry in his possession.

Three hold-ups in the Dorchester district in which masked men armed with pistols and black jacks took part were believed to be the work of one gang. All three occurred within a period of 45 minutes. In none of the cases reported to the police was a large sum of money obtained by the hold ups.

CUSTOMS PATROL SEIZES SHIPMENT OF CHAMPAGNE

NEWPORT, Vt., Nov. 20.—(AP)—A shipment of champagne designed to grace Thanksgiving tables fell into the hands of the U. S. customs patrol early today after an automobile race on the Newport-St. Johnsbury road in which the customs men's car proved the fleeter. The officers confiscated fifteen cases of champagne, but two men who had been attempting to smuggle it in from Canada escaped into the woods. The seizure was valued at $4,500.

TO CELEBRATE CLOSE OF HOLY YEAR DECEMBER 31

ROME, Nov. 20.—(AP)—The close of holy year is to be celebrated on December 31, in all the Catholic churches of the world by a special ceremony, instructions for which will be outlined in an encyclical to be published soon. The most important ceremony will be held in St. Peter's, where a te deum of Thanksgiving will be celebrated and where the Pope will consecrate the world to "the Heart of Jesus, king of humanity."

MILITARY POMP FOR GERMANY'S FLYING ACE

BERLIN, Nov. 20—Military pomp, such as is accorded only to Germany's most popular military heroes, marked the burial of Baron Manfred von Richthofen, whose body was brought from France several days ago. Von Richthofen, the foremost flying ace of Germany in the world war, was shot down and killed back of the British lines along the Somme front early in 1918. He was buried at Fricourt and recently the body was returned to the care of Germany by France.

Brief services were held today in Grace church. Where thousands of patriotic Germans had filed past the coffin since the body was placed there on Wednesday night. The edifice was crowded with members of the nobility, and persons prominent in official and civil life. President Von Hindenburg, General Von Seeckt, officers of the staff, the cabinet ministers and parliamentarians were present.

Airplanes circles above the cemetery, and one of them, draped in black dropped a wreath through the cold mist to the grave. A salute was fired by the infantry, the band played the regimental funeral march, and the coffin was lowered with a prayer. Hundreds of persons then passed by the grave, heaping it with wreaths and flowers.

The mother of Baron von Richthofen, greatly affected by the tribute placed a wreath inscribed "to our valiant son."

HEARING CLOSED ON THROUGH COAL RATES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—Brief arguments before the interstate commerce commission today terminated the controversy over pending proposals to reduce through rates to the Atlantic seaboard no coal mined in southern West Virginia and Virginia which is considered suitable as an anthracite substitute. The commission's decision will be announced later.

Counsel for the southern powers contended that very large amounts of suitable anthracite could be moved with reasonable rates to the populous eastern districts for domestic use. Representatives of Pennsylvania operation and of that state's government who opposed the reduction, contended that sufficient suitable bituminous coal could be produced there, and railroad attorneys reiterated that the longer hauls of coal cars which lower rates would produce, might bring about car shortage and more trouble

REQUISITION SERVED ON GOVERNOR TRUMBULL

HARTFORD, Nov. 20—The governor of Ohio, today served a requisition on Governor Trumbull for the extradition of Albert Blenjek, now being held in New Haven, who is charged with incest of minor children, committed April 12, 1925. Hugh E. Chalice is named as officer to return Blenjek to Ohio.

GREENWICH HARBOR TO BE IMPROVED AND BEAUTIFIED

GREENWICH, Nov. 20—At a special town meeting tonight an appropriation of $50,000 was voted for improving and beautifying the Greenwich harbor. Fifty thousand dollars must be raised by private subscription and it was announced at the meeting that $30,000 of this sum already had been pledged. Part of the expense will go for the purchase of property rights along the water front.

The salary of the superintendent of schools was raised from $5,000 to $6,000 and that of the principal of the high school from $4,000 to $5,000. Teachers also were given an increase.

NORWALK MAN STRUCK BY AN AUTOMOBILE

NORWALK, Nov. 20—Harry Delanater, of 122 Main street, is in the Norwalk hospital in a serious condition with a possible fracture of the skull, having been struck in Wall St., tonight by an automobile operated by John Kozar, of Bridgeport. Kozar is being held by the police pending the outcome of Delanater's injuries.

THE PRESIDENT IN NEW YORK

Those who heard or those who read the address by President Coolidge in New York Thursday evening cannot fail to have been impressed by its soundness and sincerity. The president was not dealing with something which had not been referred to before; he was dealing with old subjects in the light of present day requirements and treated them from the vantage point of added experience.

Well does he say that government and business should be so conducted as not to conflict, and as he wisely maintains that "When government enters the field of business with its great resources it has a tendency to extravagance and inefficiency, but having the power to crush all competitors, likewise closes the door of opportunity and results in monopoly," it is a fact which those who have given it attention have seen worked out.

Changed views and conditions exist today in contrast to what prevailed some years ago. What was once believed unjust and dangerous is now being advocated. "True business represents the mutual organized effort of society to minister to the economic requirements of civilization. It rests squarely on the law of service. It has for its main reliance truth and faith and justice. In its larger sense it is one of the great contributing forces to the moral and spiritual advancement of the race."

Business is regarded in a different light from what it was in days before the war and yet the president properly directed attention to the lack of understanding between those in business and those in government. Much good might result if each knew more about the other, and yet the sovereignty of each in its own field is to be insured.

With special significance at this time the president spoke against the making of loans that would mean the maintenance of great military establishments or to maintain municipal expenditure which should be eliminated by government economy or supplied by taxation and he reiterated his previously declared opinion regarding the desirability of joining the world court when he said: "I can conceive of nothing that we could do, which involves assuming so few obligations on our part, that would be likely to prove of so much value to the world." That shows the unwavering position of the chief executive.

GENERAL SARRAIL HEARD

Much confidence was felt in his administration when it was announced by France that General Sarrail had been selected to direct affairs in the mandated territory of Syria. Much surprise was therefore occasioned when it was proclaimed to the world that he had directed the bombardment of Damascus with the accompanying loss of life and property.

General Sarrail has been relieved of his post by the French government and it has been with interest that his report on the Damascus affair has been awaited. Thus when he goes before the French army and foreign relations committee and explains his conduct more than France is concerned in his statement, for while he represented France, his country was the representative of the league of nations and the administration of mandated territory is a matter of world wide interest.

It is to be appreciated that there is opportunity for a wide difference between the explanation given by General Sarrail and the accounts of the Damascus affair as otherwise related, but now that he has been heard that does not creep into evidence. General Sarrail claims that the bombardment was necessitated by the uprising of the natives and the situation obligated him to prevent a revolt of the people. He believed the situation called for the shelling of the city and he nonchalantly declares that "only 135 persons were killed and 250 houses destroyed." He takes the position that this does not justify the claim that it was a "terrific" bombardment.

It doesn't appear that France is entirely satisfied with the manner in which General Sarrail directed affairs even now that he has given his explanation. His removal showed that France was unwilling to stand back of him and it doesn't appear that there is any reason for it to undertake to uphold it before the league of nations. France virtually repudiated it when it replaced him with another and that is the answer that it will probably make to the league. In the meantime it must appreciate the importance of applying different tactics in Syria.

ONLY THEMSELVES TO BLAME

Attention is directed to the triple killing that occurred at the railroad crossing at East Islip, N. Y., this week. It was another one of the too many crossing accidents which was due entirely to the carelessness of those who were killed, or at least of the driver who was guiding the car. It was known that there was a railroad crossing ahead, and yet it was entirely ignored. The roadway runs parallel to the railroad track and two cars were speeding with cutouts open and they neither heard nor gave thought to the danger which the crossing always holds forth. It was not so different than those cases where autoists have been racing locomotives and refused to abandon the contest, even when it was impossible to negotiate the crossing ahead of the train. There was utter disregard for safety in full knowledge of what the fate is when automobile and locomotive try to make a crossing at the same time.

The conduct of the auto drivers was such as to extend a glaring invitation to the train to do just what was done. Such cases are invariably followed, and it can be expected that this one will be, by an appeal for the abolishment of grade crossings. Grade crossing elimination would mean the end of fatalities at such points, but it would not decrease the recklessness that is the direct cause of such affairs. There would be just as much racing, just as much speeding, just as much disregard for danger and the rights of others with the crossings gone, and it is not so certain but what there would be an increase in the danger of the highways if the precautions which many now take for grade crossings were thrown to the wind.

There are many bad crossings which should be eliminated and at all crossings there should be some signal or light to warn of the approach of trains, but it is to be realized for the most part that the deaths at railroad crossings are chiefly due to the refusal of those using the highway at such points to have due regard for their own safety. The wilful disregard of personal safety will eventually pay the penalty even if there are no crossings.

INDIGNATION AND PARDON PLEAS

Indignation runs high at the time of killings and there is a demand for the imposition of a proper penalty, but it isn't long before there are appeals being made for leniency and pardons are being sought long before the terms are served to which those who kill are sentenced. The indignation quickly disappears and the prosecuting authorities are frequently urging paroles or pardons.

There is an interesting case in point in Pennsylvania at the present time where a man who was drunk and driving an automobile ran down and killed three persons in 1923. It was a case of a man of money and there was a demand that an example be made of the accused. Following his plea of guilty he was sentenced to six to ten years. He has not as yet served three years, or one half of his minimum sentence and yet a pardon is being sought, the assistant district attorney who prosecuted him being among those who advocate such action. It is pointed out that he is a changed man, has been a model prisoner and has done much for fellow inmates during the time in prison.

No opposition appeared to the pardon. It was even intimated in the testimony before the pardon board that the sentence was excessive, but should the pardon be granted the question arises as to whether the good that was expected to come from the stiff sentence would not be completely knocked in the head by a pardon at this time. If it was expected that others might expect the same treatment for a similar offense it is to be inferred that they also might anticipate a pardon before half their term was served. The indignation of 1923 seems to have entirely disappeared in 1925.

INVESTIGATE FIRST

Advice is frequently offered to the public to the effect that it should not invest in the various schemes which are played up in an attractive manner with alluring promises without first making a thorough investigation. This is done for their protection and to save them from putting their earnings into worthless propositions.

For the same reasons the people of Washington are being advised against giving to various objects of charity and public welfare schemes without first finding out whether they are deserving. It is the outcome of conditions resulting from the fact that many appeals have been made which were not justified. It was a case where advantage was being taken of those who were easily interested in objects of charity and who for business reasons were unwilling to refuse to contribute.

The result has been that a committee representing the District of Columbia has prepared a list of the organizations that are worthy of public support and the people of Washington are being advised to confine their givings to such causes, or at least find out what it is to which they are asked to give their money. As a means of checking the unworthy it seems to be a well directed movement. There is no more satisfaction in being stung through one swindle than another.

EDITORIAL NOTES

As the football season nears its end the record of fatalities is far less than in some previous years.

Various sections seem to be trying to outdo the others in their reports about the earthquakes.

Although he didn't point that out the danger in the use of bituminous coal referred to by Mr. Lewis is that it may gass the anthracite business.

The man on the corner says: A "go" signal on the football field works all right till it comes into conflict with the other team's "stop" orders.

Late reports have not been received from the barrel gangs, but many an individual knows that certain acquisitions have been gained for the Thanksgiving night fires.

President Coolidge is to have a wild turkey from Montana for Thanksgiving. That doesn't mean that he is going to get a better one than Horace Voss would have provided were he alive.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

One is not justified in drawing a conclusion from a mere supposition and on the other hand he is not justified in throwing it entirely aside because it is based on a probability. For instance: What explains the phenomenal rush of our young people of both sexes to the colleges and universities in the last few years? This great tide towards the various seats of learning began about the year 1920, and has been increasing ever since. Some people will say that it is because of the more recent approval on the part of college authorities of athletics. If that had very much to do with it, the grade of young people coming would be of a decidedly inferior grade, which is contrary to fact. Yale especially claims that she has never had applicants of such high mental capacity as this year. Evidently there is more money for educating the boys and girls than there was a few years ago. If so, what has made the change? Is it not fair to suppose that prohibition has had much to do with it?

The time element in human history and human life is far less important than the quality element. There are men and women living in the United States who have passed the century mark, and who have never been heard of outside of their little communities. But Mendelssohn dying in the thirties, and Nathan Hale in the twenties, lived far longer than they if life is to be measured by its quality rather than by its years. And yet time is an important factor in the life of institutions. The gift of $100,000,000 could not make an Oxford, a Harvard or a Yale in a single year, or a single decade. It takes time for an institution to create an academic atmosphere which is necessary to make it great. Some institutions develop more quickly than others. On Nov. 17, 1800, congress met for the first time in Washington. In these 125 years Washington has attained a seasoned growth that surpasses the millennium of some European capitals. Quality has loomed up big in its growth.

From the cold standpoint of reason how puerile do many squabbles seem that in their little day held the center of the stage! The reason is that after the noise of battle dies down and the smoke clears away, questions that were once merely political are judged from the moral viewpoint. What the writer has in mind is the recent publication of Henry Cabot Lodge's version of his contest with President Woodrow Wilson in regard to the league of nations. As we now look at it through moral spectacles it seems almost inconceivable that the mere wording of the now famous "article ten" should have made such a temporary confusion. Today there looms up before our country a desire to enter into some form of world court for the complete abolition of war. Locarno seems to settle this point.

On October 19, as on other days, many visitors in Washington stood on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue opposite 16th street and in the very early twilight noted the fading blue of the Virginia hills. It might have been remembered that it was the anniversary of the day when Cornwallis handed his sword to Washington in 1871, at Yorktown, and turning about one might have been reminded by that splendid street of statues, 16th street, of what happened on the 19th of Nov., 1863. Directly back was the front door of the white house, and one could imagine he saw a tall, pale, sad man come out of that door, take a carriage and speed along 16th street and continue until he reached Gettysburg about 75 miles away. In 1791 there was no city of Washington. In 1863 it was only a shadow of its present greatness. But two great spirits will hover over it long after its great buildings have crumbled away.

If one wants to realize the power of real music, let him attend some great gathering. Let him attend closely to business routine or listen to great speeches for an hour and a half, and then let the programme provide some famous group of singers and as that mighty quartette or quintette or sextette comes upon the platform, Bedlam will be let loose, and it will be minutes before it can be heard. As it renders some old or new song in its matchless way the people break forth in frenzied applause, and will not be quieted until they have responded to several encores, and only then after the presiding official has threatened to throw the gavel at the crowd. The same is true when glee clubs and other singers show us just what real music is.

Yes, after seven years of partial prohibition, Russia went back to vodka of 40 per cent strength, as 30 per cent utterly failed to satisfy the drinking element. It is said that Russia found herself helpless to enforce the law against home distilleries of which there were more than a million. The question now is will 40 per cent strength of vodka satisfy the people more than 30 per cent did? If they can get it the people will be likely to demand the old 100 per cent. We know how powerless governmental control was to stop bootlegging and "blind pigers" in Canada, and Russia is no stronger than Canada. For awhile the revenue from the sale of vodka will increase governmental receipts. But what will result from the drunkenness and debauchery already set in? If the old regime is to be repeated very soon hungry women and children will follow in the cruel wake of vodka. Destitution will enter numberless homes. These things happened in old Russia.

From Small Beginnings

Sir Thomas Lipton, the Great Merchant.

Sir Thomas Lipton is perhaps the most popular Englishman that has ever come to the United States. As a yacht-racer for the international cup, Sir Thomas Lipton has shown himself a true sportsman. He has the quality that all good sportsmen admire, that of being a good loser. Who that knows of the great sums he has spent in yacht racing, or who has heard of the vast business that he conducts in all parts of the earth, would suspect that he was ever in need of money! And yet there was a time when Thomas Lipton in these United States where he is so admired, had no more than five cents to his name—and that borrowed.

In New Orleans some years ago a very young man was driving a street-car. That young man was Thomas Lipton, not "Sir Thomas Lipton," but just plain "Tom" Lipton, with his future all ahead of him. He had come over to the United States when he was about 15 years old, and he had drifted from one occupation to another. He was that admirable type of person known as Scotch-Irish, and he had ready wit, a quick mind, a pleasant face, and muscles ready to work at anything. Sometimes he was a traveling agent; sometimes he was a clerk in a grocery store; and there was nothing that was honest that he was not willing to do. Once when he had wished to write a letter home to his people in Glasgow he had been obliged to borrow the money to pay for the postage.

That is the same person whose grit, honesty and business sense have built up the great business that we think of as "Lipton's Tea." In reality Sir Thomas Lipton deals in almost everything, as well as in tea. Think of almost anything to eat—and you will find what it is that Sir Thomas Lipton now sells." His employes are numbered in the thousands, and include all races. In the East Indies he owns what we would regard as continents, and his stores dot the British Isles. Even in the United States he has a vast business and is a factor of importance.

The man who a few years ago gave away a hundred thousand dollars to feed the starving gained his first experience in progressive business methods while a runaway boy working for a living in the United States. Having gained experience, he went back to his native Glasgow, and there with help from his father, established a grocery store that soon made a name for itself. He believes in advertising, and he made it pay—but first he believed in good goods. In order to supply these goods he went directly to the source of supply, even if it took him to Ceylon. No wonder he was made a Knight—he has good American business spirit.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

At the cost of a few cents a head, the span of life may be extended to 150 years, claims Sir Ronald Ross, the scientist, whose researches have led to cures for malaria and sleeping sickness. His idea is that a few cents from the pocket of each person spent in scientific research would result in new medical knowledge that would keep germs and old age away so that man could easily live 50 years. The name of Sir Ronald Ross is one that will live in history in connection with medical research. It was while in India in 1894, as a surgeon in the British army, that he began research work in malaria. After two years of work he resigned from the army in order that he could carry on his investigations unhampered. Finally, success came in 1899, when, working on a discovery made some time before, he found that two kinds of mosquitoes carried the germs, and that to reduce malaria all that had to be done was to prevent the pests breeding in marshes and pools.

FINGER PRINTS AS IDENTIFICATION MARKS IN ANCIENT GREECE.

Francis Galton must be regarded as the founder of the modern science of fingerprints writes Sir Charles Walston, Litt. D., Ph. D., formerly reader in classical archaeology and Slade professor of fine art in the University of Cambridge, in the London Illustrated News. For, though a Chinese empress may have placed a nail-mark on a Chinese coin in 618 A. D.; though Sewick reproduced his finger-prints in two engravings in 1809 and 1813; though Purkinje, the Breslau anatomist and physiologist, described accurately the papillary ridges of fingers, hands, and feet in 1823; though Sir William Herschel made remarkable studies and use of them in 1853—it was Galton who discovered and published the essential and most significant fact; that these papillary ridges of finger-prints are invariable, and that they are the only part of the human body which practically remains the same from infancy until death, and that no two individuals have the same finger-print. He also produced their thorough application in the discovery of criminals. To this practical application, again, though Sir William Herschel applied his discoveries, to his official work in India at an earlier date; and though, in 1882, Mr. Gilbert Thompson, of the United States Geological Survey, added a finger-print to his receipt of an order on a camp circular in New Mexico—the fact remains that Sir Edward Henry first instituted, and carried to a high degree of efficiency, the use of finger-prints in the detection of criminals in his official capacity in India, and still further developed his system while chief of police in London. Since then a great deal has been done to increase the efficiency in criminal investigation. Mr. Collins, of New Scotland Yard, has recently published a telegraphic "Code for Finger-Print Formulae," which makes it possible to telegraph information to any part of the world for the identification of an individual finger-print.

This important discovery and its far-reaching applications thus belong to the nineteenth century; but it would indeed approach to a misdeed, though partial, anticipation if it could be proved that the ancient Greeks had recognized the remarkable individualistic character of finger-prints and had made some practical application of this discovery, such as the use of a finger-print as a seal or a trade-mark.

Now, a few months ago, having occasion to look through a mass of small vase-fragments and other objects in my possession, I came upon a small terra-cotta fragment which formed part of the unimportant keepsakes from the Acrive Heraeum which were given to my assistants and to me. To my great astonishment, on the base of this terra-cotta fragment I discovered a reproduction of a finger-print similar to the one I remember to have seen a steatite seal found in Greece. It now seems to me highly probable, if not certain, that the design on this terra-cotta is derived from, or is itself, a seal or stamp or die, reproducing a finger-print. This at least goes to show that the ancient Greeks had recognized the individual characteristics of this part of the human body and had made some practical use of it.

For there can be no doubt that the peoples of antiquity, including the Greeks, made wide use of seals as "sign-manuals", in all times for official or personal documents, as well as for trade-marks or stamps. The Babylonian, Assyrian, Hittite, and Egyptian seals, cylinders, and scarabs, were worn as swivel-rings, rings, pendants, or other ornaments, and were, most of them, used as seals to documents. The Old Testament (e. g. Jeasbd' using the ring of Achbad) contains evidence of such use, while "the Keeper of the Seals" was a high office at the Court of the Egyptian Pharaohs. We possess many specimens of such seals and sealings among extant monuments.

Now, if the ancient Greeks were at all aware of the individualistic and differential character of finger-prints, it is but natural that they would use them as seals, stamps, or trade-marks, as Galton himself used his own as a seal.

Upon submitting my Argive terra-cotta to several authorities on finger-prints, they all agreed that, in some form or other, this design was clearly meant to reproduce a finger-print. Upon comparing it, with the kind assistance of Miss Elderton, with a large number of reproductions, first collected by Galton himself, at the Galton laboratory of University college, it seemed to us that the design on the terra-cotta gave the central portion of a class of finger-prints known as "whorls," the two deltas on either side below having been omitted.

Subsequently, pursuing this inquiry at New Scotland Yard, with its vast collection of innumerable finger-prints collected from all parts for many years, I had the great advantage of the experience and help of Mr. Collins. He considers the nearest actual type corresponding to the terra-cotta to be that of a "fan-shaped cored" print, such as is represented by the present reproduction. He is, however, decidedly of opinion that the terra-cotta does not contain the actual print from the finger itself—in fact, that the design, especially as regards the ridges—has been interfered with; that these have been regularized and freed from all those individual points and irregularities which form the individual characteristics and differentiae in criminal inquiry. These ridges and intervals were not made by the skin-surface of the finger, but by the help of some tool. Moreover, the intervals or furrows are too wide in comparison with the ridges. If the impression were made direct from the finger; but, if from this impression another is made, the comparable width of ridges and furrows is reversed. Mr. Collins and his assistant were, however, both agreed that the design on the terra-cotta could not have been made without some observation and study of finger-prints.

That the Greek potter must have noticed these regular papillary ridges of the fingers can hardly be doubted. S. R. K. Glanville has a wine-jar stopper the interior part of which, fitting into the mouth of the jar, was roughly moulded by the hand of the early potter. On careful examination, it will be found that, unintentionally, the finger-marks of the potter's finger, as he roughly moulded the soft clay, clearly remain to be seen, though this stopper from Tel el Tmarna could not have been made later than 1350 B. C. Some years ago I was able to prove that a beautiful terra-cotta head, ascribed by a distinguished archaeologist to the greatest sculptor of the great age of Greek art, was a modern forgery—among other reasons because, on what was supposed to be a rough fracture of the neck, I detected the fingermarks of the forger unintentionally impressed on the soft clay, when the intentional fracture of the 'antique" was produced.

Here this inquiry must end for the present. I have sought this wider publication through The Illustrated London News to direct the attention of my archaeological colleagues, directors of the various museums containing objects of Greek antiquity, as well as of private collectors, to the following points—

(I.)—How many ancient vases with similar designs resembling finger-prints are in existence? And I must here draw attention to the fact that their proportion in any case is infinitely small with regard to Greek vases with absolutely finished base.

(II)—Can any vases or terra-cotta be found with such a "finger-print design" sunk into the surrounding clay, so that it was evidently impressed by some seal or stamp which represents a formalised finger-print?

(III)—Are any early seals or stamps in steatite or other stone or metal in existence, containing such a design?

THANKSGIVING EVERY DAY

One of the greatest treasures that it is possible to possess is the treasure of a thankful heart; for thankfulness multiplies all our blessings and robs all our trials of their worst sting. Thankfulness strengthens faith and hope and courage, it gives wings to our prayers and patience in times of adversity.

And every one of us can acquire this invaluable treasure by simply making up our minds that we will always be thankful and persisting in that determination.

But if we want to be thankful we must teach ourselves to reflect on the many causes for thankfulness which God has given us—not once in a year only, but every day and often during the day.

If we compare our lives, our thoughts and desires and ambitions and actions with those of Christ, we shall see that two things are necessary to the attainment of the Christ nature. One is that a new impulse from God should come into us and another is that the impulses and habits which are natural to us and which tend to make us selfish and narrow and wordly should be conquered and cast out.

Have you ever tried the blessing of a constant thankfulness? Not occasionally, or when it suits you, but every day, and all day long? If not begin at once, and the next time you feel disheartened or discontented instead of getting irritable and complaining, just look long and gratefully on your blessings, and put all grievances behind your back.

A French king once said: "If a civil word or two will make a man happy, he must be a churl indeed who would not give them to him." We may say of this kindly temper that it is like lighting another man's candle by one's own, which loses none of its light by what the other gains.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

PANAMA CITY

Disorders over high rent prices in the City of Panama recently, resulting in American troops being called out, directs attention to the capital of this youngest of the Pan-American republics. Since the cession of the Canal Zone to the United States, there has been no arm, the country depending solely on its national police and the proximity of the American forces for protection.

"For, although Panama is one of the most ancient cities in the New World, it is to the United States that it owes much of its present prestige and wealth," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society. "After the fall of the Inca kingdoms and the draining of their great stores of gold and other wealth, the sacking of the old city by pirates, and the decline of Spanish sea power, Panama went into a partial eclipse.

"The discovery of gold in California, however, gave it a new lease on life. American capital put through the trans-Isthmian railroad in record time and sleepy old Panama, as the Pacific terminus, had a 'boom' second only to that of the destination of its visitors.

America, through President Roosevelt, had a share, too, in making the city a national capital instead of the seat of a Colombian province. Finally, when the French failed in their attempt to connect the oceans by canal, it was America again that completed the work and reestablished Panama as ne of the great crossroads of the world.

"Panama perpetrates one of the greatest of geographic jokes on those who visit it. From the sea wall promenade one can see the sun rise majestically from the broad blue bosom of the Pacific, which to most Americans is the proper place only for a setting sun. And when one sails from Panama City to Colon, the Atlantic terminal of the canal, the direction is from southeast to northwest, instead of from west to east as might reasonably be expected. As one writer phrases it, 'there is something crooked about this.' And so there is, but the crookedness is to be found in the geography of the isthmus, which makes a broad 'S' curve, like an expansion bend in a pipe-line, before it finally links the two continents.

"Although the present city of Panama dates from the 17th century, it is considered historically the new city, to distinguish it from Old Panama, now in ruins, a few miles to the east. The present canal and railroad route was not the high road of the old Spanish conquistadores. Their 'Camino Real,' or royal highway, started at Old Panama and ran venerally north to Porto Bello, now also in ruins. This was a longer route but it was higher and generally free from lowlands and swamps. Old Panama was entirely destroyed by the notorious pirate Henry Morgan, later Sir Henry, in 1671, and the new city was built shortly afterward on a high, rocky spit of land running out into a wide blue bay of the Pacific.

"Gold and jewels and other precious relics were pouring over the Isthmus in steady streams from Peru, so no pains nor money were spared in making the new city as fine, and finer, than the old. Where Old Panama lacked sufficient fortifications, the new metropolis bristled with heavy walls, battlements, heavy guns, and other means of defense. Most of the buildings were constructed of stone and masonry, with sides form 3 to 4 feet thick, ironclad doors, and no windows below the second story. Thick walls and no openings near the ground showed that although the Spaniards trusted in God they built their churches to resist a siege.

"Although Panama City is not actually in the Canal Zone, nor is it, on the Canal, complete jurisdiction has been granted the United States over all matters relating to sanitation and quarantine. As a result Panama has been transformed from a malarial death trap to one of the healthiest cities in the Tropics. Streets have been widened and straightened, sewers have been laid and other sanitary measures put into effect.

"Strange though it may seem a hotel has had a part in brightening up the business section of the city. The Tivoli, in the Canal Zone near-by, which was intended primarily for the temporary use of canal officials and high grade employes of the American government, began to take outside trade. Tourists flocked from the run-down hotels of the city into the Zone. As a result the older hotelries began to clean up, paint up and install modern improvements. With the return of the tourist trade came shops, fine stores, asphalt streets, tramcars and automobiles."

Stories That Recall Others

Trichina Roast?

This doctor wanted some trichina pork for experimental purposes. He ordered the butcher to get the article for him and to send it to his laboratory. Time passed but the pork did not arrive as per agreement, so the doctor called on the butcher for an explanation. The butcher said the pork had been sent.

"I know I sent it," he explained, "because I remember looking up the address to make sure of it."

"What address?" inquired the doctor alarmed.

"Why, your house."

Anyway He Got the Dells

The county fair was on with all its pony whips, its blending of weird sounds and its crowds. Little Jimmie tramped along, tugging desperately at his mother's skirt. They passed a stand where bright balloons, mechanical toys and kewpie dolls held sway. Jimmie took a fancy to those kewpie dolls. He wanted one for his own.

So, in the manner of the younger world, he voiced his desire long and loudly. But he was a little off in the placing of his p's and k's. He yelled:

"Mammie, mammie, I want one of those pewkie dolls."

He got the doll.

State Agricultural Meeting

Connecticut is again to have a union agricultural meeting similar to that held two years ago. According to a vote taken Friday in th office of the commissioner of agriculture by the heads of the various agricultural associations in the state this meeting will be held at the Hotel Garde, on January 26-29, inclusive. So successful was the union meeting two years ago for the promotion of agriculture in Connecticut, that Commissioner Philo T. Platt called the various leaders together and plans were made to make this a bigger affair with a better program than the last one.

Among the associations participating will be the state department of agriculture, the Connecticut Swine Growers' association, the Connecticut Sheep Breeders' association and the Connecticut Poultry association.

After a delay of two and a half years, the government printing office is distributing in volume form the report of the commission headed by John Hays Hammond, which inquired into the coal situation in 1922 and 1923.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

BIRTHDAY SUPPER HELD WITH UNIQUE PLAN

A birthday supper that was invitingly unique and original in its arrangements was given Friday evening at 6.30 in the Osgood Memorial parish house by the Women's federation of Park Congregational church, having an attendance of about 130.

The twelve tables were set for the months of the year, each with its appropriate decoration, and the people were seated at the tables according to their birthday month. At the proper time the room was darkened and birthday cakes, with lighted candles, were borne into the room for each table. The menu served was escalloped oysters, boiled ham, cabbage salad, rolls, ice cream, cake and coffee.

After the supper, the company assembled for a social hour in the room upstairs where the singing was in charge of Mrs. E. A. Harris and the birthday offering was received, bringing in a substantial amount.

In charge in the dining room was Miss Louise C. Howe, assisted by Mrs. Fred T. Sayles, Mrs. Leonard P. Church, Miss Jane Hill, Miss Rose Trumbull, Miss Helen Marshall, Mrs. E. A. Harris and Mrs. W. B. Birge. The supper arrangements were under the direction of Mrs. Raymond B. Sherman, assisted by Mrs. H. D. Johnson, Mrs. Harry Rushworth, Mrs. F. W. Cary Mrs. Frank Hempstead, Miss Edith Bliss, Mrs. Fred T. Sayles and Mrs. E. J. Graham. Mrs. Harris, who was in charge of the singing at the tables and the social evening that was followed was assisted by Mrs. George Johnson, Mrs. Harry E. Higgins and Mrs. Harrison Gray. The entire affair was one of the most delightful that the congregation of the church has enjoyed.

CONN. TO HAVE A UNION AGRICULTURAL MEETING

HARTFORD, Nov. 20—Connecticut again will have a union agricultural meeting similar to that held two years ago, it was decided today, when the heads of the various agricultural associations of the state meet here. The meetings will be held in the Hotel Garde on January 26 to 29.

Among the associations participating will be the state department of agriculture, the Connecticut Swine Growers' association, the Connecticut Sheep Breeders' association, and the Connecticut Poultry association.

BURGLARS GET MONEY AND SIX REVOLVERS

The second hardware store burglary in a few weeks was discovered Friday morning when the Eaton-Chase Co., store, 129 Main street, was opened for business. It was found that thieves had been in the store over night and had stolen about $20 from two cash registers and six revolvers. The total value of the cash and revolvers taken was over $100. The guns that are missing are two .32 calibre United States revolvers, two .32 breakdowns, and two .25 Colt automatics. Several weeks ago the Preston Bros. Co., hardware store was entered.

Sergeant Myron Morgan and Officer John O'Neil who were sent to the Eaton Chase store by Chief George Linton as soon as the burglary was reported found the footprints of two men on the roof of the building adjoining the hardware store building on the west. Gaining the roof the men had ripped a wire screen off a window which gave them access to the hardware store.

It seemed evident that the men had got to the roof of the old Jackel building through a skylight and had walked across the roofs of the next two buildings to reach the window on the third floor of the Eaton-Chase store. They were shielded from view from the street by the big sign on top of the Manhattan building.

Bruce F. Rogers will motor to the Yale-Harvard game today (Saturday) having as his guest, Miss Helen Hood, of Boston, a student at Connecticut college.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Kies will arrive from Hartford early the coming week, to spend Thanksgiving with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Story.

Mrs. Gurdon Huntington and three children, of Sachem street, who left New London Thursday morning, arrived Friday afternoon at Vincennes, Indiana, to join Mr. Huntington, who has been, for six weeks, in that city, where the family is to reside.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Parker, of McKinley avenue, are entertaining Frank L. Scofield and his son, Howard L. Scofield, from Poughkeepsie, N. Y. They are in Norwich to attend the wedding of Miss Florine L. Scofield and Charles M. Olsen, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Clark, this (Saturday) afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Wolcott Booth and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hunt, of Phillips Beach, Mass., John A. Lunn and Miss Susan Williams, of Boston, have left town, having been week-end house guests of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Rogers, of Washington street.

Friday evening, Dr. and Mrs. Witter K. Tingley, of Broad street, returned from a motor trip of several days, which took them over famous Bear Mountain bridge and the Storm King highway. Some time was spent at Newburgh-on-the-Hudson.

WILCOX SUIT AGAINST LENNEN ESTATE ASSIGNED FOR TRIAL

When the matter of assignments for jury trials in the superior court here for next Tuesday, was under consideration at the short calendar session here Friday with Judge C. L. Avery presiding, only one case was at a stage where the attorneys were ready to have it go on for immediate trial, but this promises to be a hot legal battle.

This is the suit of Lucius H. Wilcox, a fish dealer of this city, against the half million dollar estate of the late Captain James Lennen who died in a Hartford hospital on Dec. 16, 1924. Wilcox has brought suit against the executors of the Lennen estate, Judge George E. Parsons of this city and Jesse H. Wilcox of Stonington, on the ground that Capt. Lennen made a promise to him, but never kept it, to give him by will or otherwise the sum of $25,000 for being the captain's companion and caretaker. This service he claims he performed for 454 weeks, from Jan. 1, 1918, to the time of the captain's death, placing the value of such services as he gave at $100 a week.

Attorney G. C. Morgan is attorney for the plaintiff, while Brown and James will represent the defendant executors.

In reply to the motion of the attorneys for the defendant executors for a more specific statement, the following has been filed by attorney Morgan, counsel for Wilcox.

The plaintiff very frequently drove the defendant's decedent, Captain James Lennen, in his lifetime, out in the plaintiff's automobile, to such places as Mystic, Putnam, Jewett City, New London, Stonington, Groton, Noank and generally in other places in the eastern part of Connecticut, where the drives were pleasant and the company congenial. This an average of two or three times each and every week during the period of time covered by the bill presented to the executors of the estate of the said James Lennen.

"At such times as my automobile was not available, I hired machines, at my own expense, to take him home or wherever he wanted to go."

The plaintiff acted during the times set forth in his bill as an escort and companion of the late James Lennen. He assisted him out and into his automobile, assisted him across the streets of the city of Norwich, helped him onto the plaintiff's boat, he very frequently aiding him in fitting mechanical contrivances and aids to his body, would assist him while visiting druggists where he purchased and adjusted bodily contrivances for his comfort, benefit and assistance, such as Starr Brothers and Cornwalls, both of the city of New London, he assisted him in dressing and undressing at times.

The plaintiff came frequently to the decedent's house at the request of the decedent, and would take him down to the plaintiff's place of business, where he would spend the day, and the plaintiff would cook meals for him and entertain him by conversation and discourse.

"On occasions when he did not feel well enough to come down to my place of business, he would have some one telephone to me to come right up, and on many occasions I have left my business and gone to his house on these matters. On several occasions he has called for me as many as three times within an hour, to come right up, and then I would arrange to go up as quickly as possible as he would get very impatient and very nervous unless he saw me at once when he wished to talk to me. The visits to the boat were on the average of three times a week during the period covered by m. account."

"Just prior to his going to the hospital at Hartford, he told me to go to his home from to time and see that Mrs. Lennen was taken care of."

"I went up there on several occasions and whatever errands the wife wanted done I would do. On the Monday following the captain's death, I stayed at his home, without leaving, from Monday until Friday, the date of the captain's burial. I did not go to my business during those days at all, but was at the house continuously and uninterruptedly except the time when I sought the undertaker, or went out to get provisions for the home. I made all necessary arrangements for the funeral. I watched the corpse while it remained in the house, opened and closed the coffin at night, directed the obsequies on the final day, and at the conclusion of the burial, I went to the Norwich Savings Society for Mrs. Lennen to have the will read."

"Whenever the captain needed any help about the house, I had to go out and find suitable help to do it. This I did a matter of three or four times a year."

"With respect to the work done around and about the house, I painted the tin roof, gutters and chimneys; did some carpenter work on the roof and general repairs thereto, and topped the chimneys."

TAFTVILLE GIRLS DETAINED BY NEW LONDON POLICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 20—Two Taftville girls, one 16 and the other 15, residing on North B street in that village were taken into custody here this evening because the girls were in danger of falling into ways of vice. The pair are being held prisoners at the police station under care of a policewoman Jane Cassidy until such time as a parent of one or other of the girls comes to New London and take charge of them.

The girls made many falsifying statements after they were apprehended and it was some time before they finally decided to tell the truth relative to their coming to New London. When their story was related and given credence by Lieut. James C. Sullivan, it was to the effect that a brother of one of the girls gave them an auto truck ride to a point between Norwich and New London and that almost as soon as the girls had alighted from the truck that a state police officer gave the couple a ride to New London. After reaching Main street the girls alighted from the state police auto and continued to the corner of State street where they became acquainted with two sailors, one of whom was intoxicated. Finally when the two sailors and the girls started away from the corner and proceeded to Bank street. Patrolman Clarence Martin, who had been watching the quartette, followed them through Bank street, to Tilley street, where he held the two girls and two sailors up for questioning. Realizing that the girls were not in proper company for their welfare, Officer Martin escorted the pair to the police station, where it was revealed that the girls were stranded in New London and without friends, excepting a sailor attached to the submarine base. The Norwich authorities were communicated with and an officer in that city was assigned to inform the mother of one girl and the father of the other, of the predicament of their daughters so that the two girls could be returned home.

ST. MARY'S HARVEST FESTIVAL IS SUCCESS

Over 500 people attended the old fashioned family gathering and harvest festival of St. Mary's Memorial parish at Pulaski hall on Friday evening which lasted for about three hours. Spellman's orchestra of six pieces rendered a delightful musical programme and everybody present enjoyed a royal good time.

The affair was divided by Rev. William A. Keefe, the pastor, who had the assistance of his curate, Rev. Frederick M. Coholan, in arranging the pleasant evening. The best proceeds realized will go for parish wants.

Assisting on committee work for the evening were: Ticket office, John T. Sullivan; door, Patrick J. Sullivan; hat room, John Barry, Jr., James Leonard and Joseph A. Donnelly; soda, Napoleon Keronack, Raymond Leonard, Edmund T. Brophy, Prof. Cornelius T. Crowley acted as prompter for the evening's dance numbers in his usual capable manner.

Story-Sermon to Be Given

A story-sermon on A. S. M. Hutchinson's "One Increasing Purpose" will be the feature of the Sunday evening service at the Central Baptist church at which the public will be cordially welcome. The service will open with a community sing, directed by Mr. Maples.

Dr. William Lyon Phelps says of this story: "Mr. Hutchinson's new novel has that vitality and creative force so characteristic of his previous work. The three Paris brothers are amazingly distinct, and the story itself steadily interesting. But the theme here is the main thing; it is the greatest theme in the world, and is as certain to inspire the reader as it has inspired the author."

Of the same book Angelo Patri says: "Ours is an eternal quest. Forever we search and wonder—who are we and where are we bound? I believe that the protest and rebellion of Hutchinson's appealing hero, Simon Paris, of the whole of the war-scarred world to-day, are but an indication of a mighty hidden purpose, deeply seeking expression."

Unclaimed Letters.

Unclaimed letters in the Norwich, Conn., post office for the week ending November 21, 1925, are as follows: Walter Grayley, Edna M. Phillips, Paride Pegorari, Miss M. Randall, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilkinson.

SWALLOWS TO ENTERTAIN AT UNCAS-ON-THAMES

The patients at Uncas-on-Thames were entertained Friday evening by Hadji Ali, through the courtesy of Manager McAvoy of the Palace theatre. Hadji Ali, who so cleverly entertained the members of the Norwich Lions club Thursday noon with his gastronomic stunts, such as drinking two gallons of water and a pint of kerosene, and then bringing up the kerosene, setting fire to it with a candle light, and extinguishing the blaze with the enormous quantity of water he drank, eating 30 hazel nuts and an almond, all with shells on and bringing them up again at will in any order, swallowing the smoke of eight cigarettes at one time, etc., repeated his programme much to the entertainment of the patients.

He was heartily applauded and thanked by the family at the sanatorium. Present in the audience were Dr. C. G. Thompson, Dr. David Sussler and Dr. A. C. Freeman, who agreed that his performance was really a medical wonder beyond explanation.

MACCABEES ADD EIGHT NAMES TO MEMBERSHIP

The W. B. A. of Maccabees held their regular meeting in the Buckingham Memorial this week with a large attendance. One candidate was initiated and several new names were proposed for membership. The charge of the W. B. A. was given to eight new members by Commander C. Eckstein assisted by Lt. Commander B. Mullins, lady at arms, Jane Farrell, and the past commander, Mrs. Peterson and chaplain, Mrs. Halliday. Plans were made for a whist and pinochle also a Christmas party to be held soon. After the meeting a social time was enjoyed with cake, cookies and ice cream served by the officers.

OBITUARY.

Warren Lee Goss.

Warren Lee Goss, aged author, Civil war veteran and former resident of this city, died Friday morning at the home of his son, Harry T. Goss, in Rutherford, N. J. Mr. Goss passed his 90th birthday on August 19 this year.

The news of the death of Mr. Goss came here through a telegram to Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Wright of 1 Boswell avenue, old friends with whom Mr. Goss had been a welcome visitor whenever he came to this city since he had been living in Rutherford.

Mr. Goss was born in a Cape Cod village and was a student in Harvard at the outbreak of the Civil war. He enlisted in a Massachusetts regiment of engineers and was taken a prisoner with almost the entire regiment at Newbern, N. C. After his return to the north at the end of the war he married Josephine Torbush, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Henry Torbush of 327 Main street, this city. They continued to live here until 1886 when they moved to Woonsocket and later to Rutherford where they had resided for about 30 years. Mrs. Goss died at Rutherford about eight years ago.

WARREN LEE GOSS

Mr. Goss was one of a family of 13 children and was the last boy of the family to survive, but there are two of the sisters living in New York state. He is also survived by his only son, Harry T. Goss, with whom he had made his home for many years.

When a mere schoolboy, Warren Lee Goss became interested in printing and newspapers, finding pleasure in working about paper offices in his native town, to this fact he later attributed his determination to make writing his career, for he had been a student of law when the Civil war broke out.

His first notable success in literature came with the appearance of his "Recollections of a Private," which papers ran in The Century Magazine He told such a vivid, direct and absorbing story of his experiences in the ranks and in southern prisons that his work at once commanced attention, here and abroad.

Special attention was directed to these "recollections" when they were cited by Lord Woolsley, of England, as the best possible expression of the spirit and morale of the common soldier; and the distinguished English commander was emphatic in the wish that his own country possessed a writer with ability and experience equal to setting forth the same story with the same force and appeal.

Mr. Goss wrote with great care and exact choosing of words and never considered a book finished until he had put his very best into it. He used to smile at the friendly thrust of a famous American author who would say, when they met in the publishing house of T. Y. Crowell & Co., where Mr. Goss would go to read his proofs, "Well, here comes Warren Lee Goss —who writes his books after they are printed."

Much of his best work was done during the many summers when he and Mrs. Goss occupied their cottage on Shelter Island. He loved the sea and gained zest from his boating and swimming at the island. But he was happy when, after moving to Rutherford, N. J., to make his home with his son and daughter-in-law, he could keep up his fine garden of flowers and vegetables.

His were most industrious habits and he kept busy with pen or typewriter until very recently. His last visit to Norwich was for Memorial Day. He had the strongest possible attachment for his old Grand Army comrades of Sedgwick Post and it was his joy to be with them on that particular date, at least, each year.

Except for deafness, Mr. Goss had kept remarkably well and active, young in mind and body and heart, as he neared 90. He felt that his survival of army and prison hardships and later perils, and ailments was a cause for gratitude and demanded of him industry and usefulness while life should last. Probably nobody ever heard him complain; his cheerfulness radiated hope and good will and every friend found him notably loyable.

Mr. Goss's latest visit to Connecticut was as guest of Dr. and Mrs. William Tyler Browne, of Broadway, Norwich, who entertained him for two weeks during August, at their cottage at Giant's Neck, East Lyme. On his 90th birthday, Aug. 19th, he was with them and had his usual swim, diving under water four times. From their home he went to Middleboro, Mass., later to Hyannis, to visit a nephew. While there he was taken with a chill, which was the first indication of his failing in health. However, since returning to New Jersey, he has been at work on a new story, A Boy's Adventures in the Mexican War, which had been accepted by the Crowells and the revision of which had kept him busy of late.

Three weeks ago he had a severe heart attack, but he was able to write to Dr. and Mrs. Browne, and he was up each day and in his study chair, still working on his story.

Mr. Goss's native town, Brewster, Mass., was named for his mother's people. He was born Aug. 19, 1835.

Among the best known books of Mr. Goss are "Jed, a Boy's Adventures in the War," which has reached its 32nd thousand in publication. His other books are "Tom Clifton," 18th thousand; "Jack Alden," 17th thousand; "In the Navy" 8th thousand; "Life of Grant," for boys and girls; "Life of Sheridan;" "Life of Sherman;" "Jed's Boy;" "A Boy's Adventures in the World's War," and "Jack Gregory, A Boy's Adventure in the Revolution," which was written in the author's 87th year.

Mrs. John C. Kellogg

After an illness of several months, Anne L. Kellogg, widow of Judge John C. Kellogg, died Friday morning at her home, No. 94 Laurel Hill avenue. She was seriously ill last spring but had rallied and was able to be about her home. Recently she suffered a relapse.

Mrs. Kellogg was born in Norwich, October 17, 1844, and was the daughter of Henry and Eliza Chapman Laurens Jewett. She was educated in the local schools and when a young woman was united in marriage with the late Judge John C. Kellogg. She was a member of the old Second Congregational church and later became a member of the Broadway Congregational church, continuing her membership in the United church when the two churches united.

Mrs. Kellogg was one of the oldest residents of Laurel Hill, in point of years of residence in that section of the town. She was well known and beloved by her host of admiring friends. Surviving Mrs. Kellogg are a son, John A. Kellogg, of Portland, Ore.; a daughter, Mrs. J. F. Howerton, of Grand Rapids, Mich., and five grandsons.

FUNERAL. Edgar S. Leland.

Funeral services for Edgar S. Leland were held Monday evening at 6.30 o'clock at funeral parlors in New Rochelle, N. Y. The body was brought to Preston Plains and the funeral took place from the home of his father-in-law, Eckford Pendleton, Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Rev. Nathaniel B. Prindle of Shelton conducted the Episcopal service and burial took place in Preston City cemetery. The bearers were John Jenkins, Irvington, N. J., Clifton Dawley and Sidney Hall of Preston, Paul Gorneman of Providence, Hibbard R. Norman of this city and Edwin G. Norman of Worcester. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends and there were many beautiful floral tributes. Undertakers Church and Allen had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Samuel Thornton

Funeral services for Mrs. Adeline Thornton, widow of Samuel Thornton, were held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from Gager's funeral parlors 70 Franklin street. Included in the attendance were relatives and friends from South Windham, Sprague, Franklin, New London and this city. Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church, officiated, and the bearers were: Rufus H. Vaughn, William Lathrop, Edward Adams and Henry Wagner.

Burial took place in the City cemetery on Oak street, Rev. Mr. Abbott conducting the committal service. The floral pieces were especially beautiful, among them an immense pillow marked mother from Mr. and Mrs. Lewis W. Thornton; wreath of galax leaves with crescent of yellow chrysanthemums, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wheeler; large spray of pink and white carnations, Mrs. Foster Wilson; large set piece pink chrysanthemums, Mrs. Charles Vaughn, Miss Ruby Vaughn, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Raymond; sheaf of wheat, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tracy, as well as several beautiful bouquets.

MEN'S BIBLE CLASS HELD SOCIAL EVENING

The members of the Men's Bible class of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church held a meeting and social Friday evening at the home of their pastor, Rev. J. Harlow Graham, No. 86 Williams street. During the business meeting the resignation of President David Wilson was received and accepted and Edwin B. Floyd elected as his successor. The meeting voted to accept an invitation from the Men's club of Jewett City to hold a debate on December 4th.

Following the business meeting there was a stirring address by William Florian, president of the Everyman's Bible class in Bridgeport, who spoke upon organization. At the close of the evening refreshments were served by Mrs. J. Harlow Graham, assisted by Mrs. Myron E. Genter and Mrs. Andrew Crowe.

Given Miscellaneous Shower

A miscellaneous shower was given Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. J. Hansen, 67 West Thames street, for Mrs. Hector Gaucher, formerly Martha Hansen. A large number of beautiful gifts, including pyrex, silver, aluminum and cut glass, were received from her many girl friends who were present. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Hansen assisted by Mrs. Roy Wilcox of Jewett City.

Called on Leeds Coit

In a letter received here Friday from Leeds Coit at Greenboro, N. C., he mentioned that he had had a call this week from Attorney John D. Hall of this city who has been on an automobile trip to the south with Attorney Edwin W. Higgins. Mr. Coit's letter added the interesting information that Mr. Hall told him they were having plenty of trouble with their machine on the trip.

BACKHAUS' PIANO STOOL WAS THOUGHT INFERNAL MACHINE

DUNDALK, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—Backhaus, the celebrated pianist, was detained by the customs officials of the Irish Free State at the local station under suspicion of being a bomb-thrower or a smuggler of machine guns.

Backhaus carries a special piano stool for use in his concerts. It has detachable legs which can be unscrewed and packed into a special case. This mysterious case with its strange contents was too much for the customsmen. Backhaus and his manager were required to leave the train, but finally persuaded the officials they were not dangerous anarchists.

AUSTRIA'S NOTED DEAD ARE FOUND IN CENTRAL CEMETERY

VIENNA, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—Surrounded by hedges and cypresses and set aside in deep quietude, the honored section of Central Cemetery of Vienna is Austria's burial place for its distinguished dead.

Here the Austrians have prepared a resting place for their great men in the realms of art, music, literature, science and architecture, which in beauty of location compares favorably with the finest in Europe, not excepting the tomb of Mazzini in the wonderful Campo Santo, of Genoa, Italy.

In one group are the tombs of painters, such as Hans Makart, Leopold C. Mueller and August von Pettenkofen, as well as of literary men including playwright, Anzengruber.

The group of mounds before which most persons stand with bared heads, is that holding the remains of Beethoven and Schubert, and, a little distance away, of Brahms, Gluck, Hugo Wolf and Johann Strauss.

For each of these composers, any appropriate monument has been selected. In the case of Strauss, the "waltz king," for instance, the stone portrait is supported by a relief of graceful dancing figures. The Brahms monument illustrates motifs from his songs.

With this group also is to be found a monument to the memory of Mozart, reminding one of his tragic death. The great composer died in poverty and was buried in the paupers' row of a suburban cemetery, with a half dozen other paupers. His body was never identified, and it eyes is doubtful whether the skull now in possession of the Mozart Museum, at Salzburg, is authentically his.

ACADEMY MEETS STONINGTON TODAY IN FINAL LEAGUE GAME OF SEASON

This afternoon the Academy gridsters will meet the Stonington High school football team in their second contest of the season. All indications point towards a terrific battle from start to finish. In their last contest the Academy and Stonington fought furiously through four quarters to have the game end in a scoreless tie and hopes are running high at the local school to win over Stonington by a decisive score in todays game. Stonington on the other hand defeated Westerly two weeks ago by a 16 to 7 score while the local boys took two early season defeats at the hands of Westerly.

Coach Whitney has drilled his men long and hard this past week and they are in perfect trim for the game. Little doubt is to be found among the N. F. A. students as to how the game will come out and the players while not over confident are never the less sure that they will not have great difficulty in overcoming the team from Stonington High. The squad is at its full strength and every player is in the pink of condition. Friday Whitney kept his players at work until the lengthening shadows of evening made it impossible to practice any longer.

Coach O'Brien of Stonington has not decided on his final lineup for the game but will probably choose it from among the following men: Capt. Duke, Boyer, Adams, Rover, Hraschette, Pollard, Cragan, McCaffrey, Cragan, Furnari, Cronin, Bella, Squadritta and Rowan.

For the Academy Coach Whitney will start the team that has proved so successful in the past few games, namely: Ends, Marks, Sargent or McCluggage; tackles, Stefano, Kramer or Moseley; guards, Fiddle, Polsky; center, Schaertel. Murphy; quarter-back, Norm Cearbois, left half, Capt. Williams or C. Brewer, right half, Pheno Pombari and fullback, Radio Ed Brewer.

The game will start at two fifteen and as is usual in all of the Eastern Conn. Interscholastic games the officials will be from the Connecticut Agricultural college.

NUTMEGS AND TIGERS IN TILT BATTLE SUNDAY

Sunday afternoon at J. B. Martin Field, Taftville, the Norwich Nutmegs and Greeneville will meet in the first of a two game series for the city championship. Both teams have practiced hard during the past week in preparation for Sunday's encounter and a fast game is promised to all who attend.

The Greeneville Tiger lineup as given out last evening is as follows: Center, McGowan; guards, Maloney, Christy and Mileski; tackles, Langevin, McGinley, Lukowski, Sullivan and Doc Kraemer of the Academy; ends, Gay, Nelson, and Monahon; backs, Tennant, Boyd, Swanton, Higgins, Breen, Gorton and Hofman.

On the other hand, the Nutmeg lineup was not forthcoming at a late hour Friday evening but it is expected that a strong team will represent the Nutmegs in their fight for the city championship Sunday. All of the Nutmeg regulars will be back in the fold ready for action Sunday and out to play the game of their lives. If the Nutmegs play the game that they are capable of Sunday the Tigers will be given a hard battle before the final whistle blows.

An interesting incident of Sunday's battle will be that three members of last years N. F. A. team will represent the Nutmegs, namely Carlin, end, Hagberg, guard and Pallocha, tackle while another trio of stars from the 1924 N. F. A. team will perform for the Tigers namely, MacGowan, center; Higgins, half-back and Lukeski, tackle. There will be no love lost between these six men in Sunday's game as all are out to win at any cost.

The kickoff for the game will be at 2:30 p. m. sharp. Competent officials will handle the game which will be played on a lime-marked and roped field. Special police protection will also be had.

Come up to J. B. Martin field early Sunday afternoon and see the first game of the series for the city championship. The second game will probably be played either Nov. 29 or Dec. 6 at Jachem Field, Falls.

SAYS ACADEMY HAS MADE WINDHAM AN OFFER

Sport Editor: In Friday mornings Bulletin was printed a piece stating that Windham High school was unable to secure a game with any high schools in the state and as a consequence they would have to end their season this week. This I know is entirely wrong. I know as a positive fact that the Norwich Free Academy made an offer to Windham if they would play the N. F. A. here in Norwich on Thanksgiving Day afternoon. What is Windham's object in publishing such an article as they did? The Academy had numerous requests for games before their team started to improve and I understand that at that time Windham was one of those who was most anxious to secure a date on the local team's schedule. Windham's claim to the state championship would be in no danger if they were defeated by the Academy and surely they are not afraid to play the local eleven.

How much has Windham consider their playing worth? I understand that the management of the N. F. A. eleven offered over one hundred dollars if Windham would come to Norwich and play. Surely a team that is reputedly made up of amateur players could not ask for a fairer deal than that. If Windham is so anxious to play why not complete arrangements with the Academy for a Thanksgiving Day game.

WYCOFF, OBERLANDER AND TRYON OFFERED CONTRACTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—The wand of professional football, which already has beckoned to the great Red Grange, reached out in the east and south today with overtures to Eddie Tryon, of Colgate, "Swede" Oberlander, of Dartmouth, and Douglas Wycoff, of Georgia Tech.

Representing real estate interests of Miami, Fla., Tim Callahan, former Yale football captain and all-American guard, launched a blanket campaign to form a team of outstanding players for the land of the 'gator by offering attractive contracts to the trio of stars.

Seven players of the Tryon-Oberlander-Wycoff type augmented by players recruited from the ranks of Florida talent, will be assembled by Callahan for a series of six contests, the first to be played Christmas day at Miami Beach, Fla., against a team Callahan claimed which would be captained by Red Grange.

The former Eli leader intimated that C. C. Pyle, Champaign, Ill., theatre owner and reputed manager of Red, had already signed for the Illinois captain to play professional football unbeknown to Grange.

Callahan further stated that he had not yet signed any players of prominence for the Miami team but he admitted that attractive offers would be made to several other stars.

Advices from Hanover, N. H., received later today substantiated Callahan's statement that he had approached Oberlander with an offer but the "Swede" refused to make any comment referring all inquiries to Callahan. It could not be determined whether he had elected to accept or not. However, it was definitely determined that Eddie Tryon will not listen to alluring offers from professionals until his college career at Colgate terminates next June.

Tryon, today, admitted that he had received several professional offers but he added that he intends to try for the Maroon basketball and track teams after the football season closes and therefore will not entertain any offer ig which his amateur status is involved.

It could not be determined what attitude Wycoff took on the offer but from unofficial sources it was learned that Wycoff is not in a receptive mood to accept any of the numerous offers which have come his way.

RICKARD ABANDONS PLANS FOR CHRISTMAS FUND BOUTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—Plans for the staging of two international championship bouts involving the welterweight and lightweight titles, as the Christmas Fund Charity Show, at the new Madison Square Garden, December 23, were abandoned by the promoters today when the state athletic commission refused to sanction the proposed division of receipts.

Standing flatly by its original ruling that 50 per cent. of the gross receipts must be deposited with the commission for distribution to the charity for which the show is held, the commission refuses to listen to a plan by Rickard to modify its ruling in this case.

Mickey Walker of Elizabeth, N. J. world's welterweight champion, and Jimmy Milligan of Scotland were the headliners on the card while the other titular attraction brought together Jimmy Goodrich of Buffalo, N. Y., world's lightweight champion, and Luis Vicentini of Chile. The cost of staging such a programme prohibited the promoters from dividing the receipts as ruled by the commission and the card was definitely abandoned and a new one will be brought up for the approval of the board next Tuesday. Rickard said later he would stage the Walker-Milligan fight sometime in January.

Lucien Vinez recognized by the French boxing federation as the lightweight champion of France filed an official challenge to Goodrich, through his manager and posted the customary $2500 forfeit with the commission. Promoters of the Christmas fund matches intimated they would seek to stage the two for the main attraction at the charity show.

Jimmy Hutchinson of New York was indefinitely suspended upon recommendation of the Connecticut commission, while Frank Logania was given a similar suspension upon the request of the Pennsylvania board.

The commission also passed a ruling making $10 the minimum fee to be paid to timekeepers at all matches in the state.

WESTERLY WINS E. C. TITLE BY BEATING CHAPMAN TECH

In a hard fought battle in which Chapman Tech outplayed Westerly through the greater part of the games Westerly defeated Chapman 6 to 0 at Westerly on Friday afternoon, thereby clinching the Eastern Conn. Interscholastic League football title. Westerly's lone touchdown came as the result of a forward pass over the goal line and was the cause of much discussion relative to the legality of the play. The Chapman Tech men claimed that the receiver of the pass was outside the end zone when the ball was caught and that it should have been a touchback instead of a touchdown. The referee ruled the play was legal as the receiver was in the end zone.

MISSOURI VALLEY TITLE TO BE DECIDED TODAY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 20—A champion will emerge from the fray on the Missouri valley conference gridiron tomorrow. The Missouri Tiger, fat with victory, stands at the threshhold of its second successive valley title, gazing at its last obstacle—the Kansas Jayhawker. The Drake Bulldogs lurk close behind with a possible chance of stealing away the crown.

Undefeated the Tiger leads the valley with five conference victories. Nebraska, Kansas Aggies, Iowa State, Washington and Oklahoma having fallen its prey. Drake has won five victories and lost one.

STAFFORD WILL NOT BE ABLE TO PLAY TODAY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 20—Definite announcement that Jake Stafford, Harvard's regular quarterback, would be unable to play in tomorrow's Yale game on the eve of the contest tonight. Captain "Dolph" Cheek was slated to direct his team's strategy, and the backfield was planned with Zarakov, Miller and Crosby starting the game, with Maher in readiness as possible relief for Zarakov. The coach said that Hogue might go in for Killgour at right guard and Leo Daly for E. Bradford at right end.

Adie, the regular center who was operated on for appendicitis recently, will watch the game from the sidelines.

In today's final secret practice the second team staged Yale plays in a dummy scrimmage with the varsity. The rest of the hour and a half work was taken up with routine drill, and the team went off to the Belmont Springs Country club for the night.

The Crimson and Blue squads massed within hand shaking distance as the Yale men trotted into the stadium for 45 minutes of secret practice, which it was assumed consisted largely of signal and kicking drill. A yellow bull dog showed up with the visitors and prowled about Soldiers' field but he as in charge of a taxicab driver and apparently not a mascot.

The probable line-up of both teams follows:

Harvard		Yale
Savles, le		le, Gill
Lindner, lt		lt, Joss
C. Bradford, lg		lg, Starhahn
Turner, c		c, Burt
Kilgour, rg		rg, Webster
Coady, rt		rt, Butterworth

PHYSICAL EDUCATION DAY AT "Y" A SUCCESS

Physical Education Day proved a busy day in the local Y. M. C. A. gym yesterday afternoon and evening, when a varied program of interesting events were enjoyed by a large number.

In the afternoon nearly half a hundred lads participated in an open athletic meet, which included running, jumping, climbing and throwing events, with many boys qualifying for athletic badges which are to be awarded shortly.

Fast indoor baseball opened the evening program when the city boys' baseball league played a double header, St. Louis defeating New York 16 to 0 and Pittsburgh trimming Washington by the close score of 5-6.

Following this, the senior Olympic games were enjoyed by the senior Y members, winding up with a fast and exciting volleyball game between the employed boys' team and the seniors' team, the former winning by the close scores of 15-14, 15-12 and 17-15.

The day's program also included other activities including a supper and meeting for the gymnasium leaders.

Standing of City Boys' Indoor baseball, league:

St. Louis	2	0	1.000
Pittsburgh	1	0	1.000
New York	0	1	.000
St. Louis	0	2	.000

Next games—Thanksgiving Day, Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

AGGIES CLOSE SEASON TODAY AT TROY AGAINST RENSELLAER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Nov. 20—The Connecticut Aggies will play their ninth and last football game of the season tomorrow, when Rensclaer is met at Troy, N. Y., in what will be the first grid encounter ever held between elevens representing the two institutions.

Connecticut's squad left for Troy this afternoon, making the trip by auto bus. Due to the lateness of the hour when the squad is expected to arrive, no further practice will be held, final preparations for the game being completed yesterday.

Because of injuries received in the Rhode Island game, Schofield, the Aggies regular quarterback, will be unable to play against Rensellaer. His loss will be keenly felt, as Coach Dole is none too well fortified with backfield reserves. Moreland has been shifted from half to quarter in Schofield's absence, and Eddy will play Moreland's halfback berth.

YALE-HARVARD BATTLE OUTSTANDING FEATURE OF GRIDIRON GAMES TODAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 20—(A. P.)—The eastern east of the 1925 football drama, which already has lost Dartmouth and Princeton, will be further reduced tomorrow in the departure from the gridiron of Yale Harvard, Lafayette, Rutgers and Swarthmore among other teams.

The playing of the annual Harvard-Yale classic at Cambridge, in addition to the Lafayette-Lehigh and Fordham-Georgetown battles, will leave several important games, however, for Thanksgiving day and Saturday, Nov. 28.

Cornell and Pennsylvania, idle tomorrow, have saved their farewell appearance for next Thursday in Philadelphia, at which time Columbia and Syracuse will close their campaigns in annual combat at the Polo grounds. The West Virginia-Washington and Jefferson Pittsburgh, Penn State and Brown-Colgate contests, scheduled for the same day, also remain to immediately precede the season's finale between Army and Navy.

The increased interest in the Harvard-Yale struggle which developed out of Yale's unexpected defeat by Princeton, has been intensified by growing confidence at Cambridge. Possibility that Jake Stafford would be unable to start at quarterback for the Crimson has been partially balanced by reports from New Haven that Yale's backfield is not in first-class condition. Phil Bunnel and Dan Allen, quarterback and fullback, respectively, have failed to attain physical condition which would warrant their playing more than a single period without relief, it was announced today.

Lafayette will be compelled to start its closing game against Lehigh without Captain Gebhard, injured fullback. After having been in the hospital since the Colgate game on October 17, Gebhard reported for practice this week, but physicians today advised that he be kept out of the game if possible. He is not likely to be called into the contest except in an emergency.

Lehigh, unlike Lafayette, will not conclude its schedule in this clash of ancient foes. The Bethlehem eleven is called upon to face Carnegie a week from tomorrow.

Bucknell has undertaken the most strenuous finish of all the eastern teams, however. In addition to their game tomorrow against Dickinson, the Pennsylvania college warriors are required to face Detroit in the Michigan city on Thursday, and Dayton at Dayton, O., on Nov. 28.

Georgetown and Fordham, locking here tomorrow in one of the east's outstanding scrimmages will not put aside the moleskins until after Thanksgiving day, when the Washington, D. C., eleven will swing into action for the last time against the Quantico Marines. At the same time, the New York team will make its parting bow at Cleveland, O., against John Carroll.

Swarthmore anticipates victory in its final appearance against a Haverford eleven which has been defeated by Columbia, Franklin and Marshall and Pennsylvania, while Rutgers in former years one of the leading contenders for eastern honors will seek tomorrow to terminate a losing streak of seven straight games at the expense of New York university.

Brown, Army, Navy, Columbia, Carnegie and Syracuse will be in action against teams not expected to seriously extend their first string lineups prior to more important closing contests Thursday and next Saturday.

Results of a year ago between foes of tomorrow follow:

Yale 19, Harvard 6.
Fordham 9, Georgetown 6.
Lafayette 7, Lehigh 0.
Rutgers 41, New York university 3.
Swarthmore 13, Haverford 0.
Brown 21, New Hampshire 0.
Springfield 21 Purdue 0.
Dickinson 21 Bucknell 7.
Syracuse 23, Niagara 6.

BULKELEY READY TO TACKLE FORDHAM TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 20.—Bulkeley High put the finishing touch upon its preparations for the Fordham freshman eleven in this city tomorrow afternoon by a light workout, and "orders" from their coach.

"At this writing everything looks rosy for Bulkeley and barring any radical upsets, there should be a good game in the works tomorrow with Bulkeley as a favorite, 5-2.

All week the team has prepared diligently for the boys from the Bronx and the success or failure of their efforts will be seen tomorrow.

Arriving from New York at eleven o'clock the Fordham Freshmen will repair to their hotel and then to Morgan Park where they will hold a light workout prior to the game in the afternoon.

This is the last game that is on the official schedule for Bulkeley and according to indications this evening it will be a drawing game.

Collins who was Burt in scrimmage during the week will probably be laid up for the game. In this event Locke a strong rival will take the berth and start the half any way.

Coach Canty was confident this evening that his charges would win, if, according to the coach, they played tomorrow afternoon as they have played during the week in practice.

TAFTVILLE FIVE OPENS SEASON THANKSGIVING

The Taftville basketball team will open its season Thanksgiving Day afternoon at Parish hall against some fast team from the eastern part of the state. The team this season will be strictly made up of local boys who are Roland Harris, the Coleman boys, Jimmy Murphy, Bob Cardle, Eddie Murphy, Rabbit Gauthier and Bus Murphy.

BIG CROWD ASSEMBLING FOR HARVARD GAME

BOSTON, Nov. 20—The advance guard of 50,000 persons who will see the Harvard-Yale game in Cambridge tomorrow had taken Boston by storm tonight, crowding every hotel to capacity, filling the theatres, supper and dance clubs and spilling into the streets in a typical "night before the big game" throng. The weather bureau prediction was for fair weather with the sky possibly slightly overcast and the temperature around 50.

Throughout the day a steadily increasing crush of automobiles streamed over the Springfield and Providence post roads with extra policemen guiding and directing them and plain clothes inspectors of the motor vehicles department guarding dangerous curves, crossings and tempting straight stretches.

The Harvard and Yale clubs tonight staged pre-game rallies and hotels, theatres and night clubs catered to a multitude of football parties. Every hotel in the city was jammed to the limit and the larger turned away hundreds of applicants for rooms during the evening.

WORCESTER FRANCHISE IS TRANSFERRED TO PROVIDENCE

BOSTON, Nov. 20—The transfer of the Worcester baseball club of the Eastern league to Providence, R. I., was announced here tonight by the management of the Boston National club, which controls the franchise of the Worcester body. Casey Stengel, manager of the Worcester organization, will hold the same position in Providence, where the games will be played at Kinsaley park.

The larger population of Providence and the fact that it was considered "a better ball town" than Worcester, prompted the change. The decision was reached at a conference today in Providence between President Emil E. Fuchs, of the Boston club, Albert H. Powell, treasurer and Edward Riley, secretary.

WESTERN CONFERENCE TITLE HANGS IN BALANCE TODAY

CHICAGO, Nov. 20—The 1925 football season in the western conference, a season since the invasion of the forward pass in 1906, winds up tomorrow with one piece of unfinished business—determination of the championship.

The closing situation is three-cornered, involving Minnesota, Michigan and Northwestern. The honors may be decided at Ann Arbor tomorrow in the Michigan-Minnesota battle. If Minnesota triumphs over the Wolverines, they can claim the title without argument. If the Wolverines crush the Gophers, Michigan and Northwestern have equal claim to the title, although Michigan has won the greater number of games.

Eastern League Ump is Signed

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 20—Simon A. McDonald, Eastern League umpire, and former manager of the Hartford baseball team, was signed by James H. Clarkin, owner, today to manage the Senators in 1926. McDonald will succeed Patrick F. O'Connor, of Windsor Locks, whose contract with Clarkin expired at the close of the 1925 season.

Speed Boys vs. Lorraine

Sunday at Ashland Park, Jewett City, the Jewett City Speed Boys will lineup against the fast Lorraine Football team of Westerly.

The Lorraine team comes to Jewett City with a victory over the fast Nutmeg team of Norwich. They are also claimants for the Eastern Connecticut Football championship.

Jewett City is confident that they can take the measure of the Lorraines and are out to ditch their dreams of a championship. Three new faces will be seen in the Jewett City lineup and a clean fast game is expected.

Nutmegs Want Practice Game

The Nutmeg indoor baseball team would like to play Battery B a practice game Monday evening at 7:30 at the Armory in preparation for the opening of the indoor League November 30. Answer through Monday's paper or either see the manager or captain of the Nutmegs.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

The Western League magnates will get together for their winter meeting at Kansas City on November 30.

Idaho's first golf course is to be constructed at Boise and is expected to be ready for play next summer.

The twenty-second annual mid-winter golf tournament at Pinehurst, N. C., will be held this year during the Christmas holidays.

A tournament for the ski jumping championship of Europe is to be held January 23 at St. Moritz, the famous Swiss winter sports center.

The only museum in the world devoted to the sport of skiing is located at Frognersetern, a short distance from Oslo, the Norwegian capital.

In Guatemala the government gives great encouragement to the sport of tennis and each winter a tournament for the national championships is held under semi-official auspices.

For the first time since the great war, it is expected, the German tennis stars will take part in the series of tennis tournaments to be held on the Riviera this winter.

The $15,000 or more won the past season by Bee Worthy, the most consistent winner of the year on the Bay State Short Ship trotting circuit, has been donated by the horse's owner, Oscar Wolfenden, of Attleboro, Mass., to the charities in his home city.

Sport devotees can now travel by electric railway to Kiruna, situated in Lapland, a considerable distance north of the Arctic circle, a place already famed throughout northern Europe as a centre for skiing, skating and other winter sports.

Edouard Horemans, the Belgian billard expert who soon is to cross cues with Jacob Schaefer, Jr., for the world professional championship, has many exhibition runs of better than 400 to his credit, but his best tourney run is 349, made against Suzuki of Japan last year.

RED GRANGE MAKES HIS FINAL BOW TODAY IN COLLEGIATE FOOTBALL

COLUMBUS, Ohio Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—Harold "Red" Grange paced the threshold of two dramatic events tonight.

Tomorrow he brings to a conclusion his intercollegiate football career. Tomorrow, after the last play in the Ohio State-Illinois game, he may formally anpounce he is going to choose a professional football career and reap a fortune. He also may announce that he will immediately leave the University of Illinois, and launch upon the business of capitilizing upon his football record.

Tomorrow's game is the homecoming for Ohio State, and because of the traditional rivalry promises to be desperately fought as are all Illinois-Ohio State football battles.

Grange's final game, with the Ohio stadium as a setting, probably will be witnessed by 50,000 spectators, the greatest throng that ever witnessed a football game in the western conference.

George Huff, director of athletics at Illinois, said tonight that he had not given up hopes that Grange would decide to remain out of professional games for the present, at least.

"I have my own opinions as to what Harold intends to do" Huff said, "and I sincerely hope that he does not do it. I have no quarrel with professional football, it is no crime to engage in it, but I feel that Grange could do better if he accepted some of the other offers which are within his grasp.

"Harold has promised to talk the situation over with me before he decides to do anything, and I expect to see him soon after tomorrow's game."

Robert Zuppke, coach of the Illinois, as well as President Kinley of the university, have Grange's word he has not signed a contract with C. S. Pyle, the Champaign, Ills., moving picture owner, to act as his manager in business ventures, including football.

Zuppke is of the same opinion as Huff as to Grange's plans. He does not want to engage in professional football, and hopes to induct him to remain out of it.

"I do not own Grange," Zuppke said, "and have no control over him, except that he may decide to take my advice. He has had several offers made him, of big fat salaries, "but if he engages in professional sports, these business opportunities will not be held open to him."

When Grange arrived here this afternoon, he appeared to be dazed by the pushing, shoving crowd that wanted to get a glimpse of him and by newspapermen who besieged him with questions.

With a half fighting look in his eyes Grange, stood still mumbling only to indicate that he wished he were away from it all.

"I am tired of all this notoriety," he said. "I have had an awful week of it. Almost got kicked out of school, and everything. This excitement and everything is more than I can stand."

Grange said he did not think he would have any announcement to make after the Ohio game. "I do not know what I'm going to do," he said.

"Do you plan to leave school after this game?" he was asked.

"I have not decided that either."

To reports that he may make his professional debut on Thanksgiving day, Grange smilingly replied that he had an engagement to go duck hunting with a trainer of the Illinois team.

Some idea of the financial reward being held out to Grange for playing professional football, was revealed here today by Clyde Tuttle, treasurer of the Columbus Tigers, who indicated that Grange could earn from $10,000 to $20,000 for every appearance.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week Independence Hose company No. 6, then located in Thamesville, held their first annual concert and ball in Breed hall. The same week Blackstone Hose company, another of the old-time volunteer fire companies, was planning to hold its annual ball and masquerade. It was expected that work on the Laurel Hill tunnel and the coffer dam would be completed that week. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Bulletin of November, 1875, are as follows:

Monday, Nov. 15, 1875—It is expected that work on the trestlework for the new bridge across the Shetucket will be begun today. As it is impossible to drive piles, it will be built by a new method which will probably prove interesting to the several business gentlemen who have superintended the work on the tunnel and at the dam.

Another heavy, easterly storm gave the city a very desolate appearance yesterday. The streets were deserted and the church services were thinly attended. On the coast there was a heavy gale.

The ladies of the Universalist church held a social meeting in the vestry of their church this evening at which time they are to celebrate the 94th birthday of Mrs. Nancy Albertson, the oldest woman in the church and parish in the city.

Tuesday, Nov. 16, 1875—The Rev. Miles G. Smith, a well known resident of Preston, died Sunday in that town. He was for eleven years previous to 1871 the pastor of the Preston City Baptist church. From that time to within a short period of his death he was the state missionary for the state of Vermont. He will be buried from the church where he long and faithfully labored, on Thursday at 11 o'clock.

The Norwich Croquet club went to Plainfield Junction on Saturday by invitation of the local club and played a couple of games which they lost. This is a decided feather in the cap of the Plainfield club which has only recently been organized. Another match will probably be played this week.

The work on the Preston bridge has been completed for the present. The east abutment is considered to be in a safe condition for the winter and will be left till spring when it will probably be necessary to take it down and rebuild it.

Wednesday, Nov. 17, 1875—We understand that Mr. Doolittle of Waterbury has been negotiating for a lease of the Wauregan House, when that at present held by C. W. Johnson expires, provided the gentleman goes, as he expects, to a larger house. General regret will be felt if Mr. Johnson retires from the management, as he has kept the Wauregan House well—much better in fact than the size of the city and patronage he has received warranted.

Superior court—The November term of this court commenced its session in this city yesterday afternoon, with Judge Martin on the bench. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Mr. Kellogg of the East Main street church. The grand jury were then empanelled to connsider the two indictments against Maria Beebe and her daughter, Dora Beebe, charging them with infanticide upon the child of the latter. The parties reside in Lyme. The jury did not finish taking the evidence in the case last night.

A very pleasant entertainment was given in the Greeneville church last evening. The wretched weather interfered materially with the attendance and a general desire is expressed that the entertainment may be repeated. The members of the church society were very kindly assisted by the members of the Park church choir.

Thursday, Nov. 18, 1875—The members of Independence Hose company, No. 6, gave their first annual concert and ball in Breed hall this evening. The company, though the youngest in the department, is second to none in energy and enterprise and deserved, as it will doubtless have, a warm welcome from its friends, tonight. The march will begin at 9. Cady will prompt.

The grand jury yesterday in the case of the state against Margaret Farrell found not a true bill upon an indictment for murder submitted to them. The action of the grand jury sustains the decision rendered by Judge Thayer in the case when Mrs. Farrell was before the city court.

A very pleasant wedding took place last evening at the residence of Col. C. W. Gale of the Thames bank, being that of W. A. Cole and Miss Carrie E. Pratt. A large company of friends was present.

Friday, Nov. 19, 1875—Independence Hose company gave their first ball in Breed hall last evening. An unusually large party was present, the galleries being filled before the close of the concert. The music was by Lewis' brass band and was exceptionally good. There were 24 numbers on the programme and dancing was continued until late this morning. The hall was handsomely decorated.

Now that the weather boards have been put up on Central Wharf there is some talk of roofing over Main street and putting in steam pipes for the winter.

Sometime Wednesday night a thief stole the stone doorstep, weighing nearly 200 pounds, which laid before Dr. Hussey's office on Union street.

The Blackstone Hose company gives the next ball, and the first masquerade of the season, Tuesday night.

It is expected that work on the Laurel Hill tunnel and the coffer dam will be completed this week.

Saturday, Nov. 20, 1875—The Otis library, under its new librarian, seems steadily growing in favor. The number of subscribers is still far too few to yield a remunerative salary, but with increasing patronage it promises more in this respect than it has for years back.

It is proposed to make the tramps who apply at the city hall earn their lodging and breakfast hereafter. The plan is to furnish them with iron clad brooms and keep them tramping in procession back and forth across the new walk from the engine house to the Broadway church.

It is calculated that 20 able bodied and honest tramps working incessantly might in the course of 150 years or so wear the surface down to an endurable point. The public will support this scheme with enthusiasm.

The usual union Thanksgiving service next week comes to the Broadway church, the three Congregational churches uniting. This year the effort is making to have yet other churches join in this service and thus make it a general union gathering of nearly all the religious societies.

UNCASVILLE

The annual meeting of Montville League of Women Voters was held recently at the Community house; fourteen were present. Mrs. C. E. Chapman, one of the delegates to the state convention in Hartford, gave an interesting report telling of the presentation of a silver loving cup to the New London County League. Four delegates went from here, Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. S. Lightowler, Mrs. Albert Avery and Mrs. Arthur Blaisdell. Mrs. Blaisdell also gave a report of the convention. Officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. Albert Avery; First vice president, Mrs. Ralph Meicer; second, Mrs. C. E. Chapman; third, Mrs. A. J. Huggard; secretary Mrs. Charles Rumage, Sr.; treasurer, Mrs. S. Lightowler; finance committee, Mrs. Robert Chapel and Mrs. Le Turner; advisory board, Mrs. Charles Hope, Mrs. Arthur Blaisdell, Mrs. Hubert Dart and Mrs. Burke Hewitt; programme committee, Mrs. James Bingham, Mrs. Arthur Blaisdell and Mrs. Albert Gesner; membership committee, Mrs. Richard Johnson, Mrs. Fred Rogers, Mrs. Alice P. Mitchell and Mrs. William Spiers.

There was a celebration at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Vera recently in honor of the double birthdays of their sons, Lawrence, Jr., and Gurdon. The evening was pleasantly spent with games and music. Refreshments were served and there were four birthday cakes. Those present were: Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Donohue, Mrs. Ralph Bugbee and son, Clifford, Fred Chapel, Mrs. Lydia Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Gurdon Perkins, Fred and Howard Perkins of Uncasville, Mrs. Lewis Labounty, Francis Labounty, Mrs. Napoleon Bonville, Carroll and Shirley Bonville of Oakdale, Mrs. Wm. Hamilton, William and Richard Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. John Reynolds, Carol, Fred, Donald, Harold and Doris Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Leiper, of New London.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kennerson were surprised recently by the employes of the office of the Connecticut Power company and were presented a pair of silver candlesticks and a beautiful chest of silver. Lunch was served by the hostess.

The Raymond Library Branch is to be closed on Thursday, November the 26th, Thanksgiving day.

Michael Lazuk whose leg was broken a few days ago, by a car in the school yard, is resting comfortably at his home.

TWICE IN THIS WOMAN'S LIFE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her from Sickness to Health

Ellensburg, Washington.—"When I was first coming into womanhood I suffered terribly every month. My mother did everything she could think of, so she took me to, several doctors and they only helped me a little. Mother was talking to another lady about my condition and she told mother of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mother got me six bottles and at the end of the first month I was much better, so I kept on taking it until I had no more pains. When I got married and had my first child I was in terrible pain so that it was impossible for me to do my housework. I thought of how the Vegetable Compound had been of so much benefit to me when I was a girl, so I went to Perier's Drug Store and got six bottles. It sure did help me and I still take it. I am a well woman today and I can't say too much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I will answer any letter that comes to me to answer about what your medicine has done for me."—Mrs. William Carvan, R. F. D. No. 2, Ellensburg, Wash.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

The regular semi-monthly meeting of White Cross council No. 13, Knights of Columbus was held at its home on Broadway Tuesday evening, with Grand Knight Thomas F. Shea in the chair. Routine business was transacted and the reports of committees showed that the activities of the council are being handled in a most satisfactory manner.

The committee having in charge the dance to be held at the armory on Thanksgiving Eve. reported through Chairman Henry P. Gorman that their plans had all been well carried out, so that nothing remained to be done but to enjoy this social event to the fullest degree. The advance sale of tickets was most encouraging, as the members of the organization showed a keen interest in this activity of the council and have given it whole-hearted support. With the usual generous support by the public at large this annual dance of White Cross council promises this year to be an out-standing social and financial success.

At this meeting Grand Knight Shea appointed the committee to make arrangements for a roast pig supper for the members to be held at their home on Broadway in the near future. The committee having in charge this special event is headed by James P. Sheridan as chairman who has the following members to assist him: Fred Kingsley, John Tunicki, James Redden, M. Frank Leonard, Robert Swanton, John P. Corcoran, John Nevins, James Mahoney, John Brown, John Kennedy, P. J. Desmond, Joseph Farrell.

This last meeting of White Cross council proved one of the most interesting in its history as it marked the inauguration of the system by Lecturer M. J. Curran, whereby the members themselves provided the entertainment for each meeting. It was most gratifying to the board of officers to see the spirit and enthusiasm with which the members entered upon this program and the product of the first endeavor in one of which the council and the members themselves should be justly proud. The members who so ably acquitted themselves at this meeting were: R. J. Marks, Sr., M. C. Higgins, Henry P. Gorman, James P. Sheridan, Daniel J. O'Brien, Patrick Coleman, F. T. Diggins, and Jeremiah Sweeney.

The chaplain of White Cross council, Rev. John J. Reilly, addressed the meeting and offered words of encouragement both to the members and the officers for the ensuing year.

AMERICAN LEGION

The committee of the American legion which has charge in Connecticut of the disbursement of the funds for the relief of sick and disabled soldiers of the World war has reported to the state comptroller that during the six months ending November 1 the disbursements have been kept within the income of the fund of $2,500,000 established by the state for the benefit of the veterans who needed assistance. At the last session of the general assembly the sum of $20,000 was appropriated to supplement the income from the fund. This appropriation has been available for six months but it was not drawn on by the disbursing committee. The fact is taken as a tribute to the committee for its care in spending the money at its disposal. The next semi-annual period will expire on May, 1926. And when the fact is considered that it will include the winter months, with a possible scarcity of employment, it is not likely that the $20,000 will remain intact as it was in the first six months. The annual income from the fund of $2,500,000 is about $166,000. C. C. Scarborough, of West Hartford, is the chairman of the committee in charge of the administration of the fund and of the supplementary appropriation of $20,000 for the care of soldiers and sailors of the World war.

EAGLES

Norwich Aerie, No. 367, held its regular meeting Monday night. On account of illness of the worthy president, Worthy Vice President August Hassett presided. The meeting was an interesting one, as there were many reports from different committees. The pinochle committee reported ladies' night, on last Wednesday, a success. There were a good number of ladies present, and the committee is making arrangements for another ladies' night the second week in December.

The class initiation committee was much pleased with the number of applications presented at this meeting, giving prospects for a class of sixty to seventy-five to be initiated on Thanksgiving eve. The committee has made arrangement for a turkey supper to be served on Thanksgiving eve. The aerie will have as guests on that evening, State President Foley, of Waterbury; members from Putnam aerie, Middlesex aerie, and New London aerie. Henry Folenius was elected trustee to fill out the unexpired term of R. A. Krohn, who resigned at the previous meeting.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

Uncas grange, No. 41, of Waterford, elected the following officers at its meeting this week: Master, LeRoy Forsythe; overseer, Donald MacKenzie; lecturer, Miss Agnes Edwards; steward, Arthur H. Davis; assistant steward, Ernest Barrett; chaplain, Hugh Mackenzie; treasurer, George Forsythe; secretary, Mrs. Herbert Leland; doorkeeper, Cameron MacDonald; lady assistant steward Miss Margaret Wright; Ceres, Miss Ethel Thorpe; Pomona, Miss Helen Maxson; Flora, Miss Josephine Maxson.

Mr. Davis was chosen a member of the executive committee and Frederick Seegers a member of the fire committee.

Norwich grange will elect officers at its meeting next Wednesday evening in Steiner hall.

CATHOLIC LADIES OF COLUMBUS

Mercier assembly, No. 12, held its meeting this week in A. O. H. hall the special event for the evening being a class initiation for which there were 20 candidates. There was a large attendance. Before the initiation, a regular business meeting was held with the president, Mrs. Thomas J. McGrath, in the chair. The assembly voted to have the regular Christmas festivities and Miss Eleanor Donovan was named as the chairman of the arrangements committee of 20 members. Two applications for membership were read. Following the business, the initiation was taken up under the committee in charge of Miss Irene Sullivan. The work was impressively done and made the part of the meeting full of interest.

RED MEN

Wednesday evening, Mohegan tribe, No. 44, I. O. R. M., held its regular meeting, with Sachem James R. Connell in the chair. There was a large attendance. Several applications were voted on, and several new applications were received.

Acting Junior Sagamore Johnston B. Banfield reported for the entertainment committee that the largest and best program ever, had been perfected for the anniversary celebration, to be held in Steiner hall, Saturday evening, Nov. 21st.

Degree teams from New London and Essex will work the degrees and present new drills. The occasion is also to be the first meeting of the New London-Middlesex Counties' Red Men's council, recently organized, with members consisting of Arawana tribe of Middletown; Menunketesuck, of Essex; Nonowantue, of New London, and Mohegan, of Norwich. This council is for the furthering of Redmanship in eastern Connecticut.

Among the visitors expected to be present are, Great Sachem E. J. Wilson, of West Haven; Great Senior Sagamore William Newport, of Torrington; Past Great Sachem of Rhode Island, John E. Morrison, of Westerly, and other state officers. A large representation from the various tribes throughout the state is expected.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS

Past Division Commander Alcorn of Hartford was a visitor Tuesday evening at the regular meeting of Clara Barton tent, No. 7, which was held in the Buckingham Memorial with the president, Mrs. Alice Brinkman presiding. He made a particularly interesting address.

The next meeting of the Tent will be the inspection which will bring out a large attendance for that evening.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

The Woman's auxiliary of Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion, met Monday evening with Mrs. W. R Bogue, of Broad street. Regular business was transacted and plans were made to visit the veterans at the various hospitals Thanksgiving day. One new member was received. The next meeting will be held with Miss Evon M. Broadhurst, No. 135 West Thames street.

ODD FELLOWS

Shetucket lodge, No. 27, I. O. O. F. held a regular business meeting Tuesday evening at Odd Fellow's hall with Noble Grand John F. McNeely presiding. Routine business was transacted and the entertainment committee announced that a pinochle and pool tournament for the members will be held next Tuesday evening. There will be a buffet lunch and prizes will be awarded the winners.

LADIES AUXILIARY, A. O. H.

On Wednesday evening the regular meeting of Division 54, Ladies Auxiliary, A. O. H., was held in its hall at 99 Main street. After routine business was transacted, the report of the Hallowe'en social was read and accepted. The whist and pinochle which was postponed last week will be held next Wednesday evening. Mrs. Elizabeth Edwards is chairman of the committee of arrangements Mrs. Julia Brock, state treasurer, read her report of the state board meeting held in New Haven, Nov. 8 at which state and county officers were present numbering fifty. The joint installation of officers which is to take place in Taftville, Nov. 29, is expected to draw a large number of Hibernians from this city. Mrs. Susan Malone, county president, of Taftville and John Kennedy, county president, of New London, will preside at the meeting, which will include all the divisions of New London county.

LADIES AUXILIARY V. F. W.

A very successful whist was held at the Post rooms of Ladies' auxiliary, No. 504, V. F. W., with a large attendance. Eighteen tables of whist were played and the prizes were as follows: Ladies' first, Mrs. J. Gladue, gentleman's first, Burt Webler; ladies' second, Mrs. Lena Bruett, gentleman's second, W. Weston, consolation prizes, Mrs. J. Foley and Frank Weiss. Dancing followed the whist.

ODD LADIES, M. U.

The regular meeting of Victory lodge, No. 4, was held in Steiner's hall Thursday evening with Noble Grand Sister B. Hartley in the chair. After the regular routine of business was transacted, the committee reported the supper and sale a success. After the meeting closed a social time was enjoyed.

cess, and thus make the day an easy one for her.

Irva Lynn: Your letters are always interesting. I trust some day to sail up your beautiful Hudson river. How nice it would be if you joined us in one of our social gatherings.

Necia and Chocolate: Come again and bring the family. We will always glad to see you.

Bob White: Come again soon. Perhaps we can have just such another afternoon rain or shine—all the same to us. "For it's always fair weather, when good fellows get together."

Best wishes to the Corner.

RESPONDING TO APPEAL FOR LETTERS

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I hear so many of the sisters say that each member ought to write that I'll try and do my share. I do enjoy reading the letters they are so interesting.

Buffalo: We certainly had a fine time with you Sunday. Will say that Calla Lily's Yum Yum Cake is fine! only one fault with it, a loaf doesn't last long.

Tabitha's quince and cranberry jelly was also fine.

Salmon Loaf: 1 can salmon; 2-3 cup of cracker crumbs, 3-4 cup of milk; 2 eggs, 1 tablespoon of butter. Salt, pepper, steam 1 1-4 hours. Beat the eggs and salmon together.

Best wishes to all.

GETTING PRESENTS

Dear Social Corner Members: I have read so many good suggestions for Christmas and the task of buying for a large number. I am giving the plan we have adopted in our family, meaning father and mother, sisters and brothers.

As we feel Christmas is more for children, we take care of the adults in this way: Put the name of each adult in a slip of paper and drop in a box. Then each draws a name, the one for whom he or she will buy the Christmas present for the next year. This is fun and every one will get a present and the children have all of theirs. There will be plenty to fill the Christmas tree and what a saving of time, work worry and money!

ANTICIPATING THANKSGIVING

Dear Editor, Sisters and Friends of the Social Corner: First of all I wish to thank the editor for my yellow slip.

I think as some of the other sisters have said "If we know a good thing, pass it along."

The holidays will soon be with us. Thanksgiving is always dear to me as at home when I was a girl we always had family gatherings. It is so nice that members of different families can meet at least once a year and give thanks to our kind, Heavenly Father for His love and care over us. This year I shall be at my daughter's in New London and have the pleasure of seeing my son from New York.

Best wishes to all and I hope every one will have a happy Thanksgiving.

SILVER LOCKS.

WHAT ONE DOLLAR AND THE RAG BAG CAN PRODUCE

Dear Sisters: If you possess one dollar, a rag bag and a reasonable amount of industry it will be very simple for you to produce for the small cost some quite pretty gifts.

Nothing affords greater possibilities for the making of gifts which are unusually attractive and useful than cut leather and the work is so simple that any person without previous training can be sure of success.

The expense is small and a few tools are required, but the finished effects more than repay one for the amount of time and labor expended.

To make the articles you need to provide yourself with a sharp pointed knife, a pair of scissors, a leather skin, and scraps of silk for lining. I like the manicure scissors for cutting out the round shape spaces.

A razor case is very useful and it is really quite effective. A bright orange silk is pasted beneath the cut out spaces and the whole lined with either silk or ribbon the width of leather. Finish with stitching in the usual way. I use a glove fastener or plaket fastener to close the flap. You can measure the length and width of the razor.

I use my stencil pattern on the leather. Place a piece of thick card board on the table on which to lay the leather which is to be cut out. With your pointed knife cut around the stencil pattern on the leather, your left hand pressing down firmly the part of the stencil-board where you are now working, so that in following the outline of the knife may not slip beneath the board at any point and thus make the outline of your pattern uneven and irregular. When the whole design has been gone over with a sharp knife, take out the pins, lift up the pattern and then remove the loose leather from the space of the design. If it happens that the outline has not been cut entirely through with the knife, finish cutting with the scissors (I like the manicure scissors because they are curved) removing the cut out leather. You have now your article decorated with a cut-out design. Now paste a piece of silk on the wrong side of the leather beneath the open space, put under a weight and allow it to dry. Line the entire article with silk, baste to the leather and afterwards stitch the lining and leather together, edge to edge on the machine using for the work a long stitch and silk.

You can make a pretty mat by using some small flower design repeated at regular intervals for a border around the edge. Green figured silk is pretty in the cut out spaces, then line the entire mat with brown silk. The little mat will be extremely attractive if you choose those colors as the combination of green with the brown ooze is very effective.

A belt is very desirable and I would plan so to make my dollars worth of leather make a belt. Brown ooze is extremely attractive with a very faint tan silk lining the cut-out pattern. Lincoln green makes a pretty belt with a tan colored lining. Now at the time of bright colors cherry red would be advisable to stick to as a red lining or a Dutch blue belt with a smart green lining. I made mine with green silk and used corn colored silk for lining, then stitched them together.

I think a beautiful specimen of leather work is the hand bag. They can be cut in various shapes. You can make them round like an opera bag. I had a green one given me. I think the price was $7.50. I have forgotten, but I know it cost much less to make them. I had a pond lily design on one side of the center and cut through the cut line with knife and cut out such spaces that seems to make the design effective. Then have your pattern on the opposite side of the center division. Line the bag with silk and draw up with a silk cord or ribbon. The edges of the lining and leather are stitched together, also the lining and leather are stitched to each other by two lines of stitching about 1-2 inch apart, about one and a half inches from the mouth of the bag, forming a casing into which you may slip the cord.

Another gift for either man or the opposite sex is a small leather pocket case. This has numerous uses. For men it can be made like a chamois purse or a pocket silk cord. For a woman it can conceal a powder puff or card case.

Another gift of neuter gender would be a book cover. Anybody who is fond of books and has volumes with delicate bindings occasionally, would enjoy a decorative leather book cover. This is a very easy present to make and looks more elaborate than the work bestowed upon it. I think cose leather in either brown or green is perhaps the most effective for a book cover. Measure an ordinary book from the edge of its cover around the back bone. (That is what we used to call it in the book bindery) to the edge of the under cover. Cut a piece three inches longer than the cover of your case. Now cut out your design after stenciling and line it the full length of the case.

A leather sofa pillow done in cut-out work is extremely attractive. The back of the pillow could be of leather, or if desired, of heavy satin or silk.

A pocket book with a strap into which to slip the hand would be a desirable gift.

A large flat hand bag would be equally welcome of course. In the case of the bag the cost would be more for there is the expense of the mountings.

In fact there is no end to the uses to which cut-out leather can be put. With just a little ingenuity, plus some patience and perserverance, you can add innumerable dainty articles to your belongings, and find yourself never at a loss when a birthday comes around.

They are all attractive articles and would cost much more if bought than made at home.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

The Hunted Hunter

The hunter may be hunted
And never once suspect
His every step be noted
Yet he no one detect.
—Lightfoot the Deer.

The hunter who had started out to hunt for Buster Bear, and then had been so startled by Buster that he had forgotten to shoot, knew that he was not at all likely to have another chance that day or for many days. Hunting for Buster Bear now would be a waste of time. So he decided that he would just tramp around as silently as he could and trust to luck that he would surprise some one else. Perhaps he might get a shot at Yawler the Bob Cat or at Reddy Fox or Lightfoot the Deer. He would prefer Lightfoot.

"He doesn't know enough to be afraid," thought the hunter.

So, with his gun ready for instant use, that hunter moved slowly through the Green Forest. He set each foot down with the greatest care so as not to step on a dry twig and snap it. He took care that no brush should scrape against him and make a noise. He kept his ears open for every little sound, and his eyes peered sharply in every direction. He was hunting as only a good hunter can hunt. From time to time he tested the wind so as to keep it always blowing toward him. In that way his scent would not be carried to any of those he was hunting for.

But with all his care he saw no living thing at which to shoot. It was just as if there were no little people in the Green Forest. It was as still as only the Green Forest can be at times. Not even Chatterer the Red Squirrel appeared to scold him. The only person that hunter saw was Prickly Porky, and as the hunter said, "he didn't count." Prickly Porky was in the top of a small poplar tree eating bark, and he hardly stopped long enough to look down at that hunter.

"He don't know enough to be afraid," thought the hunter. But in this he was mistaken. The truth was, Prickly Porky knew too much to be afraid. He knew that hunter wouldn't shoot him. So he kept right on with his business, which was to strip the bark from that little poplar tree.

But if that hunter thought there was no one about he was mistaken. He himself was being hunted. He didn't know it, but it was so. The little people of the Green Forest know that it is easier to avoid danger when you know where danger is. Even Buster Bear himself was eager to know what that hunter was about, so as soon as he had recovered from his fright he began to hunt for that hunter. He began by moving silently in a big circle until the Merry Little Breezes tickled his nose with the man scent. Then he made a face, showed all his teeth, growled to himself and started to follow up that scent until his nose told him that he was near enough to that hunter.

Lightfoot the Deer did very much the same thing, only he stole forward to where he could see that hunter and just what he did and at the same time keep out of Buster Bear's way. Even Yowler the Bob Cat, keeping to the thickest and darkest thickets crept along as only a Cat can, watching every move that hunter made. Sammy Jay followed silently through the tops of the trees, and Blacky the Crow perched in the tops of high trees from which he could see some distance through the Green Forest. In a way they were all hunting that hunter. They were keeping track of him so that no one would unsuspectingly give him a chance to use that terrible gun.

There were times when that hunter had a feeling that he was being watched. He didn't know why he had that feeling, but he did have it. Then he would stand still for the longest time and listen with all his might and look with all his might. But with all his listening and all his looking he heard and saw none of the little people. Not even the little birds came near him. By the time he reached the edge of the Green Forest he actually was feeling lonesome. It was a relief to hear Sammy Jay suddenly begin to scream at the top of his lungs: "Thief! thief! thief! thief!" It was Sammy's way of letting all the other people in the Green Forest know that that hunter was leaving the Green Forest and there no longer was need to hunt him.

THE SOCIAL CORNER

HONESTY IS BEST WHETHER IT IS POLICY OR NOT.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY
Selling the Farm

Well, why don't you say it, husband?
I know what you want to say:
You want to talk about selling the farm for the mortgage we cannot pay;
I know that we cannot pay it; I have thought of it o'er and o'er;
For the wheat has failed on the corner lot, where wheat never failed before
And everything here's gone backward since Willie went off to sea
To pay the mortgage and save the farm, the homestead, for you and me.
I know it was best to give it; it was right that the debts be paid—
The debts that our thoughtless Willie, in the hours of his weakness, made;
And Will would have paid it fairly, you know it as well as I,
If the ship had not gone down that night, when no other ship was nigh.
But, somehow, I didn't quit hoping, and ever I've tried to pray—
(But I know if our Will was alive on earth, he'd surely been here today.)
I thought that the merciful Father would somehow care for the lad,
Because he was trying to better the past, and because he was all we had.
But now I am well-nigh hopeless, since the hope for my boy has fled,
For selling the farm means giving him up—and knowing for sure he's dead.
O, Thomas! how can we leave it, the home we have always known?
We won it away from the forest, and made it so much our own.
First day we kept house together, was the day that you brought me here,
And no other place in the wide, wide world will ever be half so dear.
Of course you remember it, Thomas—I need not ask you, I know,
For this is the month and this is the day—it was twenty-six years ago.
And don't you remember it Thomas, the winter the barn was made,
How we were so proud and happy, for all our debts were paid?
The crops were good that summer, and everything worked like a charm,
And we felt so rich and contented, to think we had paid for the farm.
And now to think we must leave it, when here I was hoping to die.
It seems as if it was breaking my heart, but the fount of my tears is dry.
There's a man up there in the village that's wanting to buy, you say;
Well, Thomas, he'll have to have it; but why does he come today?
But there, it is wrong to grieve you, for you have enough to bear,
And in all of our petty trouble you always have borne your share.
I am but a sorry helpmeet since I have as childish grown;
There, there, go on to the village; let me have it out alone,
Poor Thomas, he's growing feeble, he stens so weary and slow;
There is not much in his looks today like twenty-six years ago.
But I know that his heart is youthful as it was then when we first wed.
And his love is as strong as ever for me, and for Willie, our boy that's dead.
O, Willie, my baby Willie! I never shall see him more;
I never shall hear his footsteps as he comes through the open door,
"Here are you, dear little mother," were always the words he'd say:
It seems as if I would give the world to hear it again today.
I knew when my boy was coming, be it ever so early or late.
He was always a-whistling, "Home, Sweet Home," as he opened the garden gate.
And many and many a moment, since the night that the ship went down,
Have I started up at a whistle like his, out there on the road from town:
And in many a night of sorrow, in the silence, early and late,
Have I held my breath at a footsteps that seemed to pause at the gate.
I hope that he cannot see us, wherever his soul may be:
It would grieve him to know the trouble that's come to father and me.
Only there in the tree he planted the day he was twelve years old:
The sunlight is glinting through it, and turning its leaves to gold.
And often, when I was lonely, and no one near at hand,
I have talked to it hours together, as if it could understand;
And sometimes I used to fancy, whenever I spoke of my boy,
It was waving its leaves together, like clapping its hands for joy.
It may be the man that will own it, that's coming" to buy today,
Will be chopping it down, or digging it up, and hauling it out of the way.
And there are the pansies yonder, and the roses he helped to tend:
Why, every bush on the dear old place is as dear as a tried old friend.
And now we must go and leave them, but there they come from down:
I haven't had time to smooth my hair, or even to change my gown.
I can see them both quite plainly, although it is getting late,
And the stranger's a-whistling "Home, Sweet Home," as he comes up from the gate.
I'll go out into the kitchen now, for I don't want to look on his face.
What right has he to be whistling that, unless he has bought the place?
Why, can that be Thomas coming? He usually stops so slow;
There's something come into his footsteps like twenty-six years ago;
There is something that sounds like gladness, and the man that he used to be
Before our Willie went out from home to die on the stormy sea.
What, Thomas! Why are you smiling and holding my hands so tight?
And why didn't you tell me quickly—must we go from the farm tonight?
What's that? "You bring me tidings, and tidings of wonderful joy?"
It cannot be very joyous, unless it be news of my boy.
O, Thomas! You cannot mean it!
Here, let me look in your face:
Now, tell me again—it is Willie that's wanting to buy the place?

Real Thanksgiving Thanksliving

Do we thank our God for the love of a friend,
Of lovers, of children or mothers?
Let's thank him by filling our lives full of love
And pouring it out upon others.

Do we thank him for life, and then dare to live
As if life could be ours by willing,
And be spent in attaining our selfish desires,
Our little ambitions fulfilling?

Do we thank him for health, for hope that springs up,
For laughter, for peace and for singing?
Then speak a glad word that will start a new song
Of hope through some lonely soul ringing.

I think that he measures our thanks by our deeds,
Not high-sounding hymns of thanksgiving;
Instead of one day full of meaningless praise,
Fill up the whole year with thanksliving.

Trees

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.
A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;
A tree that looks at God all day,
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;
Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

A TRIP TO MAINE

Dear Social Corner Folks: I am reminded that it has been a long time since I have written to you. I wanted to mention to Balsam Fir and other Maine correspondents that I visited their state for the first time last July. I was quite well acquainted with the other four New England states. When my sister-in-law told us of her plans to attend summer school at Lewiston I had a longing to make the trip with her, especially as she passed through our town on her way. There are three little folks at home to consider but friend husband insisted that I needed a release and he could look after them. The trip in all took less than 34 hours but I saw, oh, so much and was ever so glad to get back. The best of the journey is getting home always. We left Putnam on an express to Boston about three in the afternoon. The conductor kindly directed us just how to go and get to our boat for Portland at once. We had a fine evening on deck watching the shore until the lights became far off and the moon rose. Another boat going to another Maine port, accompanied us all the way at about a mile off.

We docked at one A. M. but stayed aboard until morning. We went by trolley to Monument square about seven o'clock. Then I went across to the section near the railroad station where I shopped until train time about nine o'clock. The train ride back to Boston was very interesting. A lady who was a missionary from Japan got on at Beach Grove where she spoke at the conference the night before. She knew friends of mine and when we reached Boston took me through the North station to the elevated that I took to the South station. There I had the choice of going into the shopping district for a few hours or take a train out at 1 P. M. It was intensely hot and home appealed the strongest. I found the train would dag at my own station so waited in upon the family before they had a chance to expect me.

Mabs mentions the difficulty of doing Christmas shopping with small children. Although we live near a city I have learned the mailorder way in my six years of having babies to care for. I find it so easily spills half a day to go into the stores and some one has to wait for me while I go. Now there are always at hand for comparison the catalogues of four or five mailorder houses that we have found absolutely tried and true. They exchange cheerfully of we need to, and we save nearly a half on many articles as well as being sure of reliable goods. For all of us we find it possible to get good fitting and satisfactory shoes and hats as well as coats and dresses. We have sometimes ordered groceries but do not now because quantities are apt to waste some before using up and I do not care much canned goods except of my own canning.

Think I have written enough for this time. As ever yours.

PORK CAKE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Just a few lines to keep the Corner page full. I have been to the Social Corner gatherings and have had very nice times.

Crimson Rambler: I am not quite sure that you know me.

Paula: I suppose you go out riding quite often in your son's new car.

Maple Leaf: How is Queen Elisabeth? Does she do any stunt's these days?

Papa's Boy: How are you these days? I suppose that boy of yours is getting to be quite a young man.

Lorna: You don't need any the cream for being underweight.

I am sending a recipe for pork cake that I have tried and liked very much.

Pork Cake: 2 cups brown sugar, 1 cup molasses, 2 eggs, 4 1-2 cups flour, 1 pound each of raisins, currants and dates, 1-2 pound citron chopped fine, 1 teaspoon each of cinnamon, allspice, nutmegs and soda, sifted in the flour, 1 pound fat salt pork chopped fine, 2-3 pint boiling water poured over the meat. The longer this cake is kept the better.

Best wishes to the Corner.

LINNETTE.

ROBERTA'S BREAD PUDDING

Dear Social Corner Friends: I was reading some of the Social Corner to my father (he has not been able to read in about two years) and read the Hymn of Hate, sent in by Daria, and he said, "Who ever wrote that does not know what a good bread pudding is." He is very fond of the kind I make, which I admit is different from any I have eaten. Usually those who eat it here say it is the first bread pudding they ever liked. This is the way I make it:

Bread Pudding: 1 quart milk, 1 egg, 1 cup sugar (scant), 3 rather thick slices of white bread, little salt and nutmeg, raisins.

Put the bread in the pan to bake it in, and cover well with the cold milk.

Beat the egg, add sugar, salt and nutmeg then the rest of the milk.

(squeeze the softened bread in small pieces, pour the egg mixture in and stir it in, then drop the raisins in out of sight, may be a dozen spread all over it. Bake about an hour in a rather hot oven. This will be soft when done, not solid! I hope someone will try this and report.

ROBERTA.

E. M. R. C. P. BROADCASTS FROM FLORIDA

To the Sisters and Editor: Greetings! Now we are all in tune to listen, I will give you a description and talk as we are on our way to the fishing ground. First the motorboat is a 20 ft. motor boat called Edna. It has an Overland Model 90 engine, with reverse gear, for speed. All right, here goes. This lake is 1 1-2 miles long. Over across are two dairy farms, one celery farm and two ferneries, on the point of land between the lake and the St. John's river. The lake is rough today but we will ride the waves to the mouth only. Ahead comes the river steamer City of Jacksonville. With the motor shut off, we let her go by and wait till those waves behind her get smooth. Toot-toot. The captain sees us and gives a wave and passengers, too. Now we will fish with a rake here in three feet of water for mussels. This is our bait for still fishing. They look like clams. Now we will start up and reach the current that flows north in the St. John's river where we drift while the menfolks cast for bass. Others ahead and behind us are doing the same. Backwater with the oars now, for one man here has a bass. Now the landing net before he gives one of his fancy flips.

Good, a fine four pound bass. But say! look across, that man has a bigger one. Oh, how straight up he can stand on his tail in the air. Zowie! the man is reeling him in. It's an eight pound bass. And look there he has five others on his line to bring home. Good luck he's had.

Now we are over one mile down. Across there is a seven mile island with one mile of orange groves. On the high bank sets a negro caretaker's shack. Around this bend are more groves and two ferneries and two new houses too. (5 miles down.) River landing dock for city of Deland, five trucks are loading on freight. Toot-toot, then toot-toot. We will have to go nearer shore for here comes the new river freighter Augusta. She is blowing for the drawbridge 1-4 mile down. My, oh my, but we sure are riding the swells pretty. A good chance to do this as our boat has a high bow. Look along the shore now. A fisherman to every ten yards on shore where the road runs along. Tourists? Sure. We wouldn't enjoy our fishing half as well if we were alone. Here we go under the toll bridge but we don't pay only when they have to open the bridge to let some boat by and when you ride into the next county over it. There are four boats here now, all fishing for bass. How's fishing? How many you got? Here's everybodys greetings. Good luck to you. Round another bend. Just look at that big turtle. What a soup she would make! Backwater now, another bass on our guide's line. Now the net. Zowie it's a four pound one again. All this time now we are drifting with the current and I am paddling fast to keep the boat from wandering afloat and shore. There comes one now. The tourists with his big five horsepower, river cruiser the Alma May. They live 14 miles up the river, at another near their orange groves. That is a nice life for those who love the water, game and fishing. Here we are 17 miles from our dock at the "Devil's Elbow." Now get busy with your cast the poles. See the bass jumping all around us. This is the home of the bass, boys. Now we will leave the bass take care of themselves for the night. A good fire and water from our own pump to make coffee. Now come down to pull our fish in, then put it in cool water bottle to fry over the fire. Now everything is ready for dinner. Oh, yes for a table, paper plates, tin and enamel cups or paper cups for coffee. Say, somebody get some pail to get my pole in the boat. There's a fish on that line. Yes, a mammouth one. Reel, reel, reel, now a pounder. Bet's a 10 and throw it in. There's the bass line now going out. That's a channel mudpout or catfish, about three-quarters of a pound that one. But all in all we will take about 12 pounds of fish home this time, outside of those five bass. They will be for supper and breakfast. All aboard now for home. There goes the lumber mills' tugboat for cypress logs. Let's get out before his return. I'm not saving anything of the scenery or game on shore, or cranes, hawks, herons, etc. Oh, yes, I've written so much about them before that the sisters are well acquainted with them. It's now sun down. The wind is south east and the air is clear for as far as you can see. Back into the lake we ride. The folks are somewhat tired, but who wouldn't? We went fishing and got fish too. Here's the boathouse and there goes the trainload of Pullmans at the E. R. for Miami and Palmbeach. But let them go to the beaches we prefer the lakes and rivers and less hotel bills.

Now we will get into our cars and go home before dark.

Toot-toot. There's the steamer at the mouth of the lake, on her return trip to Jacksonville.

Good night everybody. Hope we can go together again on this trip. We will now have to listen in to the evening program at home.

E. M. R. C. P. (May 7.)

LEAVING FOR FLORIDA

Dear Editor and Members of the Social Corner: I want to write one more letter before leaving for Florida. Was very much pleased to find myself one of the prize winners and and want to thank the editor for the yellow slip, and also to say that my pin reached me safely and I am pleased to have it to wear next time the club has a meeting that I can attend.

Was much interested in your letter, Peggy Alder. I do not remember reading Twice Twenty's poetry at the time you mention, one's memory dims as time goes by. I think if you tried to go from the Garden of Eden down to the south as you mentioned you also might experience the lost feeling.

Had the pleasure of talking with Keziah Doolittle in Rhode Island today.

Some of the members of the Social Corner may remember hearing this Thanksgiving jingle which was read in the Garden of Eden a number of years ago.

The turkey said to the chicken pie "When we are tired of sitting we cannot fly." Those hungry beings with knife and fork are as much to be dreaded as crow or hawk. How much they pretend to think of us! When we did not appear what a terrible fuss they made, as they searched far as high and low. You see they feared that we should not grow. So carefully tended us while young. They hunted us out from the weeds among, where we fancied we much preferred to sleep than be huddled together in such a heap. Then said the dew was bad for a chick and foxes eat up young turkeys quick. But all the while they were thinking of this to get us ready for Thanksgiving bliss. How much they talked of the greedy ones who ran on ahead and gobbled the crumbs at feeding time. But just look around and see them, they'll gobble I'll be bound. We never had such a spread before us. If there had been we'd raised a chorus! I want want potatoes. Hand me the onions. Give me some squash or I'll squash your buttons. Pass me the gravy for my nice crust. I'll eat that turnip until I bust. That cider sauce will make things go easy. Give me some pickle, this meat is greasy. Give me some bread both white and brown. It must never be said we could not get round. Say, can't we sit back and sip out tea and talk of the weather upon the sea during the last blow, and the things settle. I wonder what can be in that kettle. It's a steamed rice pudding as sure as fate. Now don't be bashful, pass up your plate. And see that cake they are bringing here. We never shall live to be thankful I fear. You don't mean to tell me they are brigadier pie, why my shard is not so big as my eye. I thought I could make quite a hole in this grub, but when you try it ah! there's the rub. Here, have an orange, banana, too. I'd eat some grapes if I were you. Nuts and candy are good for dessert. Here clean your plate don't try to shirk."

The old brown turkey so smitted with this long speech, that he nearly lighted upon the tablecloth from the platter, so that came down with quite a clatter. The cook thought she dropped it because it was hot but I can assure you that it was the real reason which I have now stated was because of the turkey's being elated.

He finally was resigned to his fate and murmured but once, "It is too late. My life is ended, my race is run, I'll never more gobble under the sun."

The chicken pie never lifted its crust during all this tirade but accepted the fact, as all mortals have to, whether or no. They must do what they have to do. Is it not so?

Best wishes to all for the winter.

NEVER MISSED CORNER PAGE

Dear Cornerites: To the Social Corner sisters who were so kind to write such splendid clear directions for the making of hooked rugs I send my most grateful thanks. Both Crimson Rambler and Cobare were so kind and ready to explain more if necessary.

Crimson Rambler: I am sorry to say I've never attended any meetings. I am some distance from you all. I don't know of any writer within at least five or six miles from me. I do not write very often but never let the Saturday's paper get by me. How I do enjoy the letters! I first wrote while confined to bed for several weeks. One of the charter members was called on me and nerved me to write. I sent in a few words at that time and I have always been glad I did so for even if I never see your faces there is the feeling of friendliness and good fellowship shown in each and every one in the Social Corner page. I have found in one other member of the Corner and old acquaintance of my family and it was such a pleasure and surprise. In a recent issue of the Norwich Bulletin there was the account of Arnold's explanation to the British or his report on the battle of New London or Groton Heights. My husband's mother so often told in the stirring account. How many you have in everybodys greetings. Good luck to you. Round another bend. Just look at that big turtle. What a soup she would make! Backwater now, another bass on our guide's line. Now the net. Zowie it's a four pound one again. All this time now we are drifting with the current and I am paddling fast to keep the boat from wandering afloat and shore. There comes one now. The tourists with his big five horsepower, river cruiser the Alma May. They live 14 miles up the river, at another near their orange groves. That is a nice life for those who love the water, game and fishing. Here we are 17 miles from our dock at the "Devil's Elbow." Now get busy with your cast the poles. See the bass jumping all around us. This is the home of the bass, boys. Now we will leave the bass take care of themselves for the night. A good fire and water from our own pump to make coffee. Now come down to pull our fish in, then put it in cool water bottle to fry over the fire. Now everything is ready for dinner. Oh, yes for a table, paper plates, tin and enamel cups or paper cups for coffee. Say, somebody get some pail to get my pole in the boat. There's a fish on that line. Yes, a mammouth one. Reel, reel, reel, now a pounder. Bet's a 10 and throw it in. There's the bass line now going out. That's a channel mudpout or catfish, about three-quarters of a pound that one. But all in all we will take about 12 pounds of fish home this time, outside of those five bass. They will be for supper and breakfast. All aboard now for home. There goes the lumber mills' tugboat for cypress logs. Let's get out before his return. I'm not saving anything of the scenery or game on shore, or cranes, hawks, herons, etc. Oh, yes, I've written so much about them before that the sisters are well acquainted with them. It's now sun down. The wind is south east and the air is clear for as far as you can see. Back into the lake we ride. The folks are somewhat tired, but who wouldn't? We went fishing and got fish too. Here's the boathouse and there goes the trainload of Pullmans at the E. R. for Miami and Palmbeach. But let them go to the beaches we prefer the lakes and rivers and less hotel bills.

Now we will get into our cars and go home before dark.

Toot-toot. There's the steamer at the mouth of the lake, on her return trip to Jacksonville.

Good night everybody. Hope we can go together again on this trip. We will now have to listen in to the evening program at home.

E. M. R. C. P. (May 7.)

LEAVING FOR FLORIDA

Dear Editor and Members of the Social Corner: I want to write one more letter before leaving for Florida. Was very much pleased to find myself one of the prize winners and and want to thank the editor for the yellow slip, and also to say that my pin reached me safely and I am pleased to have it to wear next time the club has a meeting that I can attend.

Was much interested in your letter, Peggy Alder. I do not remember reading Twice Twenty's poetry at the time you mention, one's memory dims as time goes by. I think if you tried to go from the Garden of Eden down to the south as you mentioned you also might experience the lost feeling.

Had the pleasure of talking with Keziah Doolittle in Rhode Island today.

Some of the members of the Social Corner may remember hearing this Thanksgiving jingle which was read in the Garden of Eden a number of years ago.

The turkey said to the chicken pie "When we are tired of sitting we cannot fly." Those hungry beings with knife and fork are as much to be dreaded as crow or hawk. How much they pretend to think of us! When we did not appear what a terrible fuss they made, as they searched far as high and low. You see they feared that we should not grow. So carefully tended us while young. They hunted us out from the weeds among, where we fancied we much preferred to sleep than be huddled together in such a heap. Then said the dew was bad for a chick and foxes eat up young turkeys quick. But all the while they were thinking of this to get us ready for Thanksgiving bliss. How much they talked of the greedy ones who ran on ahead and gobbled the crumbs at feeding time. But just look around and see them, they'll gobble I'll be bound. We never had such a spread before us. If there had been we'd raised a chorus! I want want potatoes. Hand me the onions. Give me some squash or I'll squash your buttons. Pass me the gravy for my nice crust. I'll eat that turnip until I bust. That cider sauce will make things go easy. Give me some pickle, this meat is greasy. Give me some bread both white and brown. It must never be said we could not get round. Say, can't we sit back and sip out tea and talk of the weather upon the sea

PREPARING THE THANKSGIVING TURKEY

Dear Social Corner Sisters: The Thanksgiving turkey should be selected some days in advance. See that the eyes are full and the feet soft and moist. If young the lower part of the breast will be pliable, the legs short and plump and many pinfeathers on the wing and body. Long hair indicate age; so do thick coarse scales on the feet. When killed soon after feeding (often done to improve weight) the full crop will mate the skin black or greenish. And the fermenting contents taint the flesh. While the butcher will clean the turkey, it is in some respects desirable to have this done at home, merely having the market man pull out the sinews of the legs requiring strength. A slight incision is made below the leg joint. It is caught on the heavy meat hook and with one jerk the sinews are dangling. Two spoons of alcohol poured in a saucer and ignited will be sufficient to singe thoroughly and this is much better than paper as the alcohol flame is smokeless. Following this cut off the head just below the beak, and break the legs below the joint and cut off the feet. Turn the bird over on its breast and with a sharp knife cut down the skin over the back bone from the neck downward; draw back the loose skin, loosen windpipe and crop and pull them out. This leaves the skin over the breast intact. Cut the neck close to the body leaving the long flaps of skin. At the end of the back bone close to the tail is the oil bag which must be carefully cut out. Then turn the bird breast upward and cut the skin above the vent sufficiently to admit the introduction of two fingers. Loosen the various organs from their attachment to back bone and ribs. Grasp firmly the largest organ—the gizzard—and with a steady pull draw it out; it will bring with it the liver and intestines.

Inspect the cavity removing lungs, heart and kidneys. Wipe out the cavity with a wet cloth and cleanse the skin by a thorough rubbing and, wipe dry. Put a little stuffing in at the neck, to give fullness to the breast. And all the body cavity loosely. Thread a long trussing needle with then but stout twine and take two stitches to secure the stuffing. Push the legs forward and close to the body; insert the needle at the thick part of the leg under the thick bone, and run through the body. Return the needle, passing it over the bone, then pull taut and tie. Pull the neck flap over the back and turn the wings so that the tips come close together over the flap. Secure them in position by a second pair of stitches passing over and under the large wing bone. For the third stitch pass the needle through the end of each leg and return it through the rump. Have all the stitches tied on the same side, as it is than easier to remove twine after cooking. A turkey weighing ten pounds requires fully three hours cooking in a hot oven and another hour must be added if it is 12 pounds in weight. Rub the skin well with dripping, dredge with salt and pepper and place on a rack in a large roasting tin. Tie paper around the legs to keep them from burning and protect the breast in the same way. Keep the oven very hot throughout the cooking as heat is lost during the frequent bastings. Use a mixture of shortening and water for this purpose, keeping some hot at the side of the fire and pouring a little over the turkey every 20 minutes.

The more thorough the basting the tuller the turkey. When the turkey is ready lift it on to a large hot platter and remove from it all thread. Prepare some good brown gravy in the roasting tin, strain a little round the dish and serve the remainder in a sauce boat. Garnish the dish with small fried sausages or with rolls of bacon. Bread sauce may also be served separately.

Turkey Stuffings: In a large saucepan put one half pound of butter or lard and butter. I also use pork dripping; if I have any, when melted add three onions chopped fine the turkeys heart, liver and gizzard which has been chopped real fine) one loaf of stale bread which has been soaked in warm water and then squeezed dry, four or five hot mashed potatoes, one pint or more of oysters cut small, one scant tablespoon of baking powder salt and pepper to taste a little poultry seasoning if liked a little celery salt may be added, cook all together for 15 or 20 minutes, add enough water to keep from sticking and burning. When real cool stuff the turkey.

BLUE BABY.

THE SIGN SAGITTARIUS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: The sign Sagittarius (The Archer) is the ninth sign of the Zodiac and the negative pole of the fire trinity. Sagittarius leading November 23rd and ends December 21st every year. All persons born in this period of time, are Sagittarius subjects. The ruling planet is Jupiter. The colors are red, green and gold. The gems are carbuncles, turquoises and diamonds. This sign corresponds to the thighs and motor nerves of mankind. Also governs success in new enterprises. The tribe is Levi, meaning "Those who are joined or bound." The motto is United we stand. February and June are favorable months and Thursday is the important day of the week. Sagittarius people are fortunate during their own sign Nov. 22nd to Dec. 20th.

I enjoy reading the splendid letters and poetry printed in the Social Corner. I think it an excellent idea for each member to write once a month to the Corner.

As winter approaches, some of our readers may be glad to know of a simple cough remedy a friend of mine uses. Gather chestnut leaves and dry them, or buy fresh dried packets from druggist. Steep 1-4 package in 1 pint boiling water, sweeten slightly and drink as any common tea.

Burdock root tea is excellent for the blood.

Dandelion tea is fine for torpid liver.

Mullin leaves boiled in new milk is good for summer complaint.

A strong tea of blackberry leaves is good for the same complaint.

A gentleman cured himself of cancer, after being given up as incurable by physicians, but steeping violet leaves and drinking the infusion.

I am told that wearing a copper wire bracelet or anklet will relieve rheumatism.

White iodine is said to remove dark spots on the skin, and five drops of red iodine to a cup of water is recommended as a cure for catarrh. Place a small quantity in the palm of the hand and inhale into the nostrils twice daily. Paint a corn with red iodine to stop pain.

Kerosene (coal-oil) applied to frost bitten feet will cause the itching and draw the frost out. A flannel spread with lard and mustard and applied to the chest will relieve a severe cold on th lungs.

Another good cough remedy is made by mixing 1-2 cup strained honey, 1 teaspoons of flaxseed and one sliced lemon. Simmer half an hour and take as required. It is harmless. Still another cough remedy. Slice an onion and place in a small sack having strings to tie about the neck. Lay sack flat on chest. At the same time take 1-2 teaspoon syrup of squills three times per day, after meals.

A good cough syrup to have in the house is made as follows. 1 ounce each of sweetmaun root and hoarhound leaves with a 5 cent stick of licorice. In a porcelain lined kettle, with 5 quarts water. Boil hard until water is reduced one half; strain and add 4 cups white sugar and boil down to 1 quart. Add 5 cents worth essence of peppermint. Take from stove, use 1 tablespoon 3 times a day or if cough is severe every two hours.

Barberry bark tea is good for liver complaint; and rock brake tea is good for kidney trouble.

Best wishes from

OUR IN-LAWS

Dear Editor: Well here we are again. After quite a long spell of silence I feel that I can spend a few minutes with my Social Corner friends.

During the time that I have been silent I have enjoyed reading a number of good articles written in the Corner page.

One of them that I have been particularly interested in was that of the "in-laws." It has been said that the question of in-laws is a delicate one to discuss. So it is, but I think that we should be able to talk it over a little in our family circle without getting into very much trouble. I am one of those in-laws myself and know just a little about how some things go. We have just a few of them in our family at the present time and the indications are that we are about to have more in the near future, which is all right. Let them come along.

Mrs. M. C. T. and myself have been very careful not to interfere with the love affairs and match making of our young people.

We feel that we did fairly well in managing our own case and we are willing to let them handle the same game in their own way looking on trusting for good results.

To make a long story short my advice has always been for them where they have married to have a little home of their own and enjoy their own independence and freedom, which they have done, and as far as I can see they are getting along fairly well at it. We are always glad to have them come home for a visit and they always seem very much pleased to have us visit their homes also. From my personal observation in-laws are quite apt to get into trouble where they are living in close quarters.

Generally speaking I think that it best for the young people when they are married to go by themselves, independent of father and mother. No matter how devoted they have been to their parents they have started out in a new life and they both need all the attention and devotion to each other that they can have without the watchful eye and advice of one that has lived a great many years longer and thinks that they know just how those young people should live and just what they should do better than they know themselves. In most cases this is a very hard thing to make that little girl believe and of course the boy thinks that mother has always been just right and then there is trouble. You can't expect anything else.

Even if mother does know she is depriving them of an independence which belongs to them in their young life which they will miss in years to come if not cultivated when young.

A good mother always feels free to give her son good advice and holds a steady hand to guide him in what she thinks is the right course which is perfectly right. She has been a good mother to the boy and in return the boy has been a kind and thoughtfull son to her, always considered mother to be the only woman in this whole wide world, but the time comes when there is another little woman comes across his path and touches a warm spot in his heart that has never been touched before, even by mother.

I believe that one of the great ambitions of the average girl is to have and manage her own home. Well do I remember how a little girl long before she arrived at the age of her teens had her toy cook stove, dishes, cradle and her baby doll, and how she in her little chair took solid comfort rocking and singing her little rag doll away in her cradle to rest and then turn to her toy table, clear it away and then prepare for her night's rest. This is the first thought of her own little family and home. And so it goes on until the day of her own real home comes to her mind and attention and she should if possible have this right and privilege granted for it belongs to her.

Looking forward to a home often times shows itself in very young lives. Again in the life of the young woman after she begins work in one rented room where she is preparing and cooking her meals over an oil stove or the gas jet. Light housekeeping in one room, and yet it is her own and that is what she wants.

Long before the real home is in sight she begins to think of her hope chest. Picking up linen, pictures, tin pans, and many other little knick knicks with the hope in her heart that some day she will be able to use them in her own home.

Our young people enjoy the "Home Sweet Home" spirit just as much as we that are older. On the other hand I think that we that are older should keep our homes just as long as it is possible but when the time comes that it seems best that we should leave it and live with our loved ones we must remember that we are to live with them, and that there must be some change in our way of living and enjoy things as they come to us and be thankful.

HOW TO COOK RED CABBAGE

Members of Social Corner: Having found many do not know how to cook red cabbage and having taught others who do not care at all for cabbage to eat it cooked this way, I will add a recipe to your already long list.

Slice or shred a red cabbage head very fine, add salt, pepper, 3 cloves, following in quantity according to taste, 2 tablespoons sugar, 4 tablespoons vinegar, 2 sour apples—quartered and cored, 1 onion, 1 tablespoon drippings—perferably from roast pork; 1 cup water. Cook till tender, add water as needed. There should not be over a cup of liquid when done.

If red cabbage cannot be secured, use white cabbage. This dish is fine served with roast pork, duck, goose, or fried sausage.

What success have the Cornerites had with the "Elder Plants?" Will grow in two or three weeks? Is right—where are the leaves, the roots, the gorgeous blossoms? We can raise grass around the doorstep without paying a good sum to a vender at the fair, what say you? Stunk!

NEW YORK GIRD.

"MY TWO IN ONE DRESS"

Dear Cornerites: Here is an economy tip for the Corner members. I might call it "my two in one dress."

I made a black satin, embroidered the front and sleeves, then washed I had a sleeveless dress, took the sleeves out and proceeded to sew them on a lining—and made a "bib" as 'twere to cover the embroidered front—corded this so called bib and now can tack it over the front, remove sleeves and, behold an evening frock. It is so handy for a trip—just the one dress and bib and one is prepared for both informal and formal affairs. Take along a large velvet flower—a string of pearls—and hubby is delighted at so little baggage. This is particularly nice for your Christmas trip home—all prepared for church, for the Christmas dinner or for the evening party. Hope this may be of help to

Unsurpassed for Flavor

is uniformly pure, fresh and delicious. Try it once and you will use no other. Say "Salada".

GREETINGS FROM BLACK EYED SUSIE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: Hello everybody. I feel chipper than a chipmunk these lovely mornings after doing my daily dozen in the form of a two mile hike. There is nothing like it to brush the cobwebs out of your brain.

Bachelor Girl: Was glad to hear your voice. Hope Olga is better.

Lonesome Pine: I think of you on my morning hikes when I pass a namesake of yours.

What's the matter, are all the bumble bees, butterflies and bugs in winter quarters that we don't hear from them? We had only a few letters last week.

Congratulations to the prize winners. I'm sure we will all be making hooked rugs this winter. Kitjo, you should see the pretty ones Annette has; and she makes her own designs too.

When some of my rich relations die and leave me some money I'm going to buy a Lizzie then I'll go scooting around the country visiting all the sisters to see all the pretty quilts, hooked rugs and fancy work, yes and tatting too.

Suppose Free Air is so busy eating oranges that she doesn't have time to write a nice letter for the Corner page.

Wonder if she, Yankee in Crackerland and E. M. R. C. P. will meet. They should form another club and call it the Orange Blossoms.

Well I want to thank all the sisters for sending the poetry I asked for. I am glad I asked for them for I got different ones than I have.

The one Crimson Rambler sent about I remember the house where I was born, was not the one I wanted but I had a good laugh and I have kept it too.

I am sending one on trees that I think fine, and some one else may be glad to have it.

Well enough of this so best wishes to the sick and shut-ins and a happy Thanksgiving to all.

BLACK EYED SUSIE.

PLANNING FOR NEXT SUMMER

Dear Editor, Sisters and Brothers of the Social Corner: It is a long time since I have sent in a letter to the Corner. I have been very busy with a thousand and one different things, but not too busy to attend all the Corner picnics of Club No. 4 this past year.

I am now waiting for some one to have another; will be glad to help out in any way.

Rural Aunty: What a good idea about writing every month and what a good full page we would have!

I see that Twice Twenty has planned a fine outing for 1926. I for one cannot bear to wait until this awful winter, (that they predict) has come to take my place in the bus and be on our way to the beach. I was wishing I could be with Aries when she went to Squaw rock. I have been there four times, but still want to go again. Hope some one plans a picnic there next summer.

I was also interested in Kitjo's letter about Bald hill, Mt. Ochetpetick. I have been there and want to go again.

I would like to know if sister Kitjo lives near there and if I know any one that she knows. I know Mrs. A. Hammond has a brother who lives near there; and Primrose and I knew the ladies that live at Bald hill a good many years ago.

I want to thank those that sent cards this past year, Twice Twenty, Rosy Posy, Whirlwind, Black Eyed Susie, and several others.

Avon: For one you see I am planning on a good time next summer, as Roxey says, "good bye" everybody.

LAST ROSE OF SUMMER.

A DELIGHTFUL DAY

Dear Editor and Social Corner: Yesterday Hallville friends and Hillcrest C. R. caught me and took me in the big Overland to so many places and over many country roads I had not seen in years. We had refreshments in Colchester and went over hill and dale at such a pace. I had a bunch of barberries and bird baberries given me and then last but not least our late dinner, a real old fashioned meal of liver, with a quarter of a pound of salt pork to a pound of liver put through the meat cutter and fried, the best fried onions, little potatoes boiled and quickly peeled and dropped into hot milk and butter well seasoned and chopped with knife, hot corn meal gems, warm apple pie, cheese, coffee, cider and Amy Jane's cocoanut cream croquette candy in our pockets. I forgot I was old for the time.

We will save potato water now for thin soup with potatoes at 84 a bushel. Why not get Hoover going again. Yours for ways and means.

J. E. T.

SALAMANQUNDI PIE

Dear Sisters: Use for this cake any layer cake recipe adding grated chocolate to the batter to make it brown; add more sugar if necessary and bake in two layers. Make a filling to put between them in this way which will be 1-2 inch in thickness—about twice the depth of usual thickness. Cover 1 tablespoons of gelatin with cold water and set over the steam of the teakettle to dissolve. Boil 2 cups of sugar with 8 tablespoons of water until it will thread; pour this over soaked gelatin. Then add a teaspoon vanilla, then stir it until it is thick in a cool room. Then stir in two tablespoons of chopped crystalized fruits, cherries, green ambrica pineapple and 1 tablespoon chopped nuts. This filling can be made just as well in a plain layer cake, omiting the chocolate.

The cake should be sprinkled with flour over the top to keep the frosting on top. Beat the whites of three eggs until stiff with 5 tablespoons of sugar then put on the top and sprinkle with powdered macaroons (put through the chopper) and cocoanut. Set in the oven and brown, do not spread the meringue, put it on in spoonfuls.

Delicious Scotch Dropped Scones: 1 1-2 cups sifted flour, 1 tablespoon of meal, 2 teaspoons of baking powder, 1-2 cup of butter, 1-2 cup milk ((a big half cup).

Sift flour, salt, baking powder, meal, add butter, then milk. Drop with knife and spoon in greased pan and bake in hot oven 15 minutes.

This recipe never fails. I know you will like it.

KITTY LOU.

GREETINGS FROM CRIMSON RAMBLER

Dear Corner Members: As I did not write last week thought I must write a short note this week.

Cherlette, Papa's Boy and Neola: Didn't I see you all out sporting last Sunday, going in different directions?

J. E. T.: How are you after your trip? My but you too can be sporty, how about it? I told several about that cent item article you spoke of and it caused quite a sensation. Come again. The party you inquired after sends kind regards and expresses the wish to see you some time in the near future. You didn't get cold feet did you? Do you like surprises the same as you experienced Sunday?

Savilia: What has become of you? Have been expecting to hear from you. Maybe you have gone to the land of orange blossoms? I don't forget your friends for auld lang syne. I have been wondering if you have returned from your expected trip to Webster.

Kitjo: Have you tried your hooked rug yet? Hope you have good luck if you do. Thanks for your very nice letter.

Lucy Acorn: Suppose you have made two but this time your fingers are so nimble do you buy your patterns ready stamped?

Long life to the Corner.

WESTERLY

WASHINGTON COUNTY COURT SESSION NOV. 30TH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 20.—Superior court for Washington county, November term, will not resume session at West Kingston until a week after next as Judge A. A. Capotosto has declared a recess in the session of the superior court until Monday, Nov. 30, when the petit jurors will again report for duty.

Judge Capotosto declared the recess that he might hold court in Kent county at East Greenwich, there being a congestion in the docket of that court. He will preside in court at East Greenwich all of next week.

In the superior court at Kingston Thursday the case of Charles E. Brooks vs. Otto Seidner of Westerly was heard by Judge A. A. Capotosto, jury trial having been waived by the parties.

The parties sued to recover $285.58 alleged to be due for painting and doing other work about the summer residence of Mr. Seidner at Charlestown. Six witnesses were called by the plaintiff, and three by the defendant. During the cross-examination of the plaintiff, Mr. Brooks became faint and a recess had to be declared by the court for 20 minutes.

When trial was resumed Mr. Brooks was briefly examined. Witnesses called by the plaintiff were Richard T. Holland, Lesley Holland, James T. Nolan, Edward P. Friday and Henry Shippee.

The defendant claimed that the charge made by the plaintiff was unreasonable, and John M. Foley and John A. Marr of Westerly testified that the charge made by the plaintiff was too high.

At the conclusion of the testimony the court summed up the case and found that the plaintiff was entitled on the evidence to recover but $192.05.

Union Thanksgiving services have been arranged by the Westerly Pastors' association for Tuesday and Wednesday evening of next week.

The service Tuesday night will be at the First Baptist church. On the following night there will be a union service at Christ Episcopal church. Rev. A. E. Kernahan, D. D., of Boston, a field secretary of the Methodist Episcopal church, has been engaged to speak at both of these Thanksgiving meetings. An offering for the people's mission will be taken Wednesday evening.

On Thursday evening at the rooms of the Westerly Masonic club on High street the first of a series of eight bridge whist matches was held. Seven tables were in play. At the close of the series the losing team will be the host to the victors at a turkey supper. On the conclusion of the evening's play the team captained by Caleb Mudge had a total of 13,620 points while the team captained by George E. Broughton had a total of 13,392 points. The next play will be on Friday evening as the regular Thursday of play falls on Thanksgiving.

Funeral services for Edward McKeehan, who died at the Westerly hospital last Tuesday evening as the result of being struck by an automobile in Dixon square, were held at the Gavitt Home, 46 Granite street, on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, numerous relatives and friends attending. The services were in charge of Rev. Ernest E. Morrill, pastor of the Pawcatuck Congregational church. Interment was made in River Bend cemetery. The bearers were Archie Murray, Robert Murray, James Newsll, Charles Greene, Charles Lewis and William Francis.

The Men's class of the Broad Street Christian church entertained the church choir in the church vestry on Friday evening at a roast fresh ham supper. The committee of arrangements consisted of George E. Broughton, Joseph Sicilian and Raymond Collins.

Francisco Algiera, an outside employe of the Bradford Dye works at Bradford, who was taken into custody Friday afternoon by Chief Thomas E. Brown and Officer Robert Kessel, charged with the theft of cloth from the concern, will be arranged before a special session of Third district court today Saturday. It was stated that Algiera had taken 144 yards of shirting broadcloth and sateens. When Superintendent Clifford A. Holdsworth of the B. D. A. plant stopped Algiera, as he was about to leave the plant, shortly after 12 o'clock, it was explained that Algiera had a considerable amount of cloth tucked away beneath the back of his jacket.

The police say that Algiera first led them to a place on Pierce street where they were taken to an attic room, and nothing was found. Later it was learned that Algiera had gone to board at the place of Michele Algiera, and there they located the cloth, a large piece being in a trunk. Algiera, and there they located the cloth, station for arraignment in the Third district court.

Twenty-seven students at the Westerly high school were on the honor roll for the half-semester ending Nov. 13, according to a report issued from the office of Principal Charles Mason. Of this number, eight were seniors, seven were juniors, four were sophomores and eight were freshmen.

The complete list follows:

Seniors—Guiliano, Miss Bray, Miss Gervasini, Miss A. Kenyon, Miss Peckham, Miss Evans, Miss Suprika, Miss Williamson.

Juniors—L. Briggs, Nicholas, Miss Briggs, Miss Randall, Miss Chapman, Miss Nichols, Miss Rugo.

Sophomores—Dower, Hiscox, Miss M. Kenyon, Miss Carpenter.

An automobile operated by Arthur R. Raymond, Jr., of Pawtucket, a civil engineer for the state board of public roads, when backed from the curbstone in front of the Rhode Island hotel on Broad street at about 11:30 o'clock Friday morning, hit a Lincoln closed car, owned by Charles H. Gavitt of Avondale. The Gavitt machine was proceeding in the direction of Elm street.

The car belonging to the state of public roads hit the Gavitt machine broadside, badly bending both the front and rear mudguards on the right hand side and scratching the body.

Engineer Raymond is engaged in making a survey of the Alton road. Officer George Madison investigated the accident.

STONINGTON

The Dorothy A. Nova Scotia to New York, which ran upon the rocks near the sea wall in the rear of the Sheffield property, was towed to New London Friday, by the Merrill-Chapman Scott's tug of that city. The fact that the party on the yacht repeatedly refused to divulge their names has caused much comment here. Also, it was learned recently that the captain of the yacht refused help from the local fishermen when they offered him help in getting the boat safely into the harbor. The mysterious actions of those on board the craft lead some to think that there might possibly be some connection between the party on board and the missing girl from Smith college. The girl in the party was about the same age and fitted most of the newspaper descriptions of the the other girl. However, it was only a guess and probably a poor one at that.

MYSTIC

Mystic Grange No. 111, P. of H. met in the hall in the Main Block Thursday evening with Worthy Master J. W. Pollard in the chair. After the regular opening of the grange a few items of business were transacted. A member has given $5 for the war memorial fund and that left only $15 to be taken from the treasury to pay the $25 pledge. Notice was given of the annual meeting of the state grange in January in Hartford. Four candidates were elected for membership and will receive the degrees with the next class. The grange voted last January for Mrs. Phillips to assist the secretary by collecting the dues for 1925, and she reported 156 members and every one paid up to Jan. 1, 1925. Applause followed the report. The grange installed officers Nov. 18, 1924 so it is one year since it was reorganized. Nine of the present officers refused re-election and those elected were as follows: Master, Lucian O. Allen; overseer, Leslie Haley; lecturer, Louisa Schroder; steward, Leeds Spink; treasurer, Amos M. Gallup; secretary, Margaret Morgan; gate keeper, Fred Williams; Ceres, Rachael Buddington; Pomona, Hazel Main; Flora, Sarah Stedman; lady assistant steward, Dora Wheeler. Eighty-six members and 6 visitors were present.

The annual roll call and supper of Stonington lodge No. 26, I. O. O. F. on Wednesday evening was attended by about 200 members. A class of four was initiated in the second degree. At the roll call each one present responded after which all stood while the roll of the dead was read. A social time followed.

The second whist of the series played by the K. of C. in their new rooms in Main hall Wednesday evening was largely attended. Ladies' high score was taken by Mrs. James Richards and consolation by Mary Inderdohnen. Men's high score, P. O. Donohue and consolation, Thomas Mullaney. Refreshments were served and Frederick Whittle entertained at the piano. Dancing followed.

Arrangements have been made for ladies' night of Ahab Sanctorum, No. 218, Ancient Mystic Order Sanaritans. A short business meeting will be called at 7:30 by Grand Monarch A. O. Lewis. HOW SEAMAN WAS KNOCKED OUT REMAINS PUZZLE AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 20—A. R. Steinberg, apprentice seaman, stationed at the United States Coast Guard academy, Fort Trumbull, who was found in a semi-conscious condition on the municipal pier Wednesday night and who, it was believed, had suffered concussion of the brain from a blow on the back of the head with a bottle in the hand of an unknown assailant, has fully recovered his senses. This afternoon when Steinberg was questioned by Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh at the academy reservation Steinberg related an entirely different story from that which he told following being taken to the police station the night he sustained his injury. At the police station following two civilians finding Steinberg in a semi-conscious condition on the pier and delivering the sailor to Patrolman Edward Riordan, the sailor was examined by City Physician George P. Cheney, in statements made to the physician Steinberg told of having been attacked by one or more men with a bottle and of unconscious on the pier. Today, to the officers, Steinberg stated that he remembered nothing of how he received his injury other than that he was walking across the tracks at the depot crossing to go to the pier. He did not recall having observed anyone walking behind him, but he did remember hearing a switch engine at work in the depot yard. Whether Steinberg was in error in stating originally that he had been assaulted, or was struck by a flying freight car it is not known. On all switched cars across the crossing a brakeman is on the car while a switch tender is also on duty there. Neither the crossing tender, nor any members of the yard crew reported anyone being struck, either in the yard or at the crossing. It is believed by the police that Steinberg is not telling the facts of the manner by which he received the scalp wound.

John T. Kelly, a tramp, one of the [illegible] arrested, went from the police court to jail, and in an hour was picked up again intoxicated. Kelly told what he termed was a cock and bull story about having been at work, having a few hanks of shoe lacings. which he was evidently selling as a means of getting some money, were found in his pockets. Kelly had no excuse to make for his condition. He similarly admitted that he was drunk—good and drunk—on a couple of squirts he took after he left the police station. Kelly represented yesterday that he became intoxicated from drinking bay rum to cure a cold. Today he admitted that he absorbed a couple of powders in liquid form that destroyed his intelligence.

The telephone company had a gang of men taking unused cable cores from the conduits along State street. A curious crowd watched the work for the lead pipe was cut as easily as cheese would be cut, as it was taken from the conduits. The lead is said to be worth about fifteen cents a pound so the cable sold for itself.

Tomorrow morning when the police court convenes Charles Williams, accused of having assaulted Philip Seller with the intention of robbing him will have the opportunity of disproving the charges made by Seller. The case came up in the court this morning, but Seller was not present to relate the circumstances of the attack made upon him. He was released from the hospital where he was treated for his injuries after someone attacked him, but he said he was still too weak to go into court. Then prosecutor and Detective Sergeants Smith and Cavanaugh visited Seller at his home and listened to his version of what happened. Seller was disposed to identify Williams as his assailant, but what he said did not impress the prosecutor that Seller was certain of the facts as he claimed them. So it was decided to bring Williams into court Saturday, to present the claims to the court and have that tribunal pass upon the accuracy of the allegations.

Patrolman Carlos Sclesnitsky is absent from his beat on Ocean Beach, having been summoned to New York today because of the serious illness of his mother. He will be absent from his post several days.

An automobile owned by P. Mitchell, 66 Connecticut avenue, and a car owned and driven by Leon B. MacAuley, 16 Alger street, were in collision last night on Bank street, between Pearl and Golden streets. Both machines were damaged somewhat.

An automobile owned and operated by Richard Shea, 17 Vista street, and a motorcycle owned and driven by Jospeh Grillo, 42 Jefferson avenue, were in collision this afternoon on Jefferson avenue, corner of McDonald street. The motorcycle was damaged, but Grillo escaped with injuries no more serious than bruises. Shea was taken into custody by Sergeant Nelson Smith charged with reckless driving and operating a motor vehicle without having a license to do so. He will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning.

The session of the police court will convene tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock instead of 9.30 so as to permit the court officials an opportunity to attend the Yale-Harvard football game at Harvard.

The funeral of William H. Harrison Jr., son of William H. Harrison of 32 Truswell street, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of the latter's father-in-law, William F. Hanbay, 226 Bank street and was attended by many mourners, including a delegation of members of Niagara Engine company, of which organization Mr. Harrison had been a member for a number of years. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Denforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ and members of Niagara Engine company acted as bearers. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Master Joseph McGarry, of 82 Lincoln avenue Blasis Piccolo, Station 5, Waterford; Mrs June Wallace, 76 Ledyard street, and Mrs. Osmon Smith, 13 Poppe street, Groton, patients at Lawrence Memorial associated hospital were dismissed today.

Alfred T. Comstock, of Uncasville, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolmen William Graham and Ernest Oppermann charged with violation of the city's traffic laws and violation of the state motor vehicle laws. He will be in the police court tomorrow morning. Comstock operated his automobile on the left hand side of a traffic signal on Main street, corner of Crystal avenue, and he did not have an operator's license in his possession.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Macdonald today caused the operator's license of Charles Muscarella, 110 Shaw street, to be suspended. Muscarella was driving an automobile last Sunday owned by his brother, Joseph. At the corner of Bank and Shaw streets, the car collided with a machine owned and driven by Edward F. Black, of Thames street, Groton. Muscarella did not stop to determine the extent of damage sustained by Black's auto and charges were preferred against Muscarella by Black.

Robert W. Heath today sold a building lot on the northerly side of New street to Alexander Leitkowsky.

Harry Reagan, sailor, attached to the submarine base, was taken into custody late this afternoon by Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh on a warrant charging him with assault upon Jessie Rush, 15, of Broad street extension, and will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning.

Reagan has been under arrest at the submarine base three weeks when local officers informed the base authorities that Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky had issued a warrant for Reagan being taken into custody and made to answer for the alleged crime.

Not until this morning did the treasury department at Washington order Reagan delivered to the civil authorities.

Reagan, it is alleged, is the owner of an automobile and that on Oct. 30, he met the Rush girl and another girl at Ocean Beach and offered to take them to their home. This he did to a certain extent, for he conveyed one of the girls home and then offered to drive the Rush girl home. Instead of doing so, it is claimed, he drove to the outskirts of the city, where the alleged assault took place. Instead of conveying the Rush girl to her home following the alleged assault, Reagan is accused of having driven to Norwich where lodging accommodations were obtained and the Rush girl held a prisoner in the place until two days later when she returned to New London. When the girl reached home, her mother questioned her as to where she had been during the two or three nights she had been absent from home and the story of the alleged assault was then laid bare. Mrs. Rush then turned her information over to the police and Reagan's arrest by the military authorities, upon request of the local police, followed.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad late this afternoon and this evening operated about a dozen special trains from New York and New Haven to Boston with followers of Yale and Harvard, who will witness the annual football game between the college elevens tomorrow.

Mrs. J. L. Steward, 66 Truman street, reported to the police early this evening his residence had been entered, but did not know whether any of the contents of the house had been stolen. Patrolman Thomas Lyden was assigned to the complaint and his investigation revealed that Mr. and Mrs. Steward had departed from the house during the forenoon and that the rear door had not been locked, but that the door was made secure by a hook on the inside. When Mr. and Mrs. Steward returned home about 7 o'clock they discovered the hook dislodged from its fastenings and entrance to the house easily accessible. Steward, accompanied by Patrolman Lyden, made a search of the premises, but Steward could not determine that any of the furnishings or valuables of the place had been removed.

Frank Pizzella, 73 Woodbridge St., was arrested late this afternoon charged with violation of the city's traffic ordinances and will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning. Pezzella operated his truck to a section of Bank street and parked the vehicle in restricted area. His act was observed by Patrolman George Laboue, who took Pezzella into custody.

A new variety of thieving was discovered this evening when Harry Sharaf, proprietor of a fruit and vegetable store, corner of Bank and Howard street, reported to Patrolman Braxton Hill that a chewing gum machine that had been attached to the front of the exterior of the building had been stolen late this afternoon or evening. Sharaf stated that the machine was in front of the store this forenoon, but that he missed it about 7.30 o'clock. There was a considerable number of pennies in the machine and it was about half full of gum.

Patrolman Braxton Hill and wife have moved from Ocean avenue to the residence on Bank street formerly occupied by the late John Hendry and family.

Philip Seller, Bank street merchant, who was attacked at the approach to his home, 42 Belden street several nights ago and beaten upon the head with the butt of a revolver, presumably with intent to rob, and who has identified Charles Williams, as his assailant, the latter already being under arrest, was able to return to his home today from Home Memorial hospital, where he had six stitches taken in his scalp to close the wound.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Noe, 13 Colver st., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen D. Noon to Thomas R. Cook, son of Dr. and Mrs. Norman R. Cook, of Newport, Me. The wedding will be solemnized the 25th of December. Mr. Cook has been a member of the faculty of Bulkeley High school three years.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Brooke, residents of New London and Mt. Vernon, N. Y., have gone to Miami, Fla., where they will remain the balance of the winter.

ATTY CRONIN TO UNDERGO OPERATION ON EYES TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 20—Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin, Nathan Hale street, will undergo an operation today, if not both eyes at a New York hospital, Saturday. Mr. Cronin's brother, Dr. William D. Cronin, Main street, this city, and a member of the staff of Lawrence Memorial associated hospital, went to New York this noon to be present at the operation upon his brother.

Mr. Cronin suffered from eye trouble as far back as last spring and when he concluded his duties as state senator on the closing of the legislature, his eyes were causing him so much trouble that he was forced to relinquish his police court duties and undergo rigid treatment at his summer home, Neptune park. Following many weeks of treatment there was somewhat of an improvement in Mr. Cronin's condition and about six weeks ago he went to New York to prepare for the ordeal that is scheduled to occur tomorrow. Mr. Cronin's wide acquaintanceship here, and, for that matter throughout the state, will unite in wishing for beneficial results from the operation.

Three young men, occupants of two motor cars of a three car party returning from a skating excursion on Long Island, were killed when their automobiles collided with a Long Island railroad train near East Islip.

preciated and the most skeptical must admit after witnessing her feat, that it is genuine. Then comes "Tick tack", the pin-head Indian curiosity, the human pin cushion," the "kewpie doll," the dancing fat girl and many other big attractions. There will be dancing every evening from 8 to 11. Music will be furnished by a clown band, Fred Graves, of Stone and Co., Inc., of Boston, as manager of this show and is being assisted by the following committees of Nemrad Grotto: Prophet Raymond Britton is general chairman, and those working under his direction are Prophet Tanner, B. Ricketts, K. Ricketts, Jones, Chappell, Hindell, Stelmer, Hagberg and Fowler. They in turn will be assisted by 50 prophets who will serve in capacities of ticket sellers, barkers, attendants, etc. Like all circuses there will be a street parade prior to the show.

No Norwichite should miss this coming attraction, the biggest of its kind in the city's history.

Don't miss it, if you do you will always regret it. All trolleys lead to the big show. Dec. 8, 9, 10.

Breed Theater

Corinne Griffith's new First National picture, The Marriage Whirl, which will be the attraction at the Breed theater, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday is full of life and jazz.

It moves quickly from a novel masquerade party to a dance of the Sixty-club, showing the acme of New York's night life, and from that to the all-night restaurants of Paris.

That the present generation is under the influence of jazz goes without a doubt. Jazz has become its national anthem. The path that this leads to is full of danger and pitfalls to those who are not aware of them. To call this to the attention of the American public, J. Hartley Manners wrote that successful New York play, The National Anthem. It was from this play that The Marriage Whirl was adapted.

In support of Miss Griffith is an imposing array of names familiar to theater goers. Harrison Ford and Kenneth Harlan play the leading roles. Nita Naldi lends her personality to the role of a French dancer. Others in the cast include Charles Lane, E. J. Ratcliffe and Edgar Norton.

The picture was directed by Al Santell.

TODAY'S EVENTS

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sold Two Family House

Joseph Dubreuil has sold his two-family house at No. 52 Lebanon avenue to Eugene J. Dion, local realtor. Mr. Dion plans to make several improvements to the property.

Genuine Circus By Grotto

Nothing can compare with the Grotto Circus and Freak city that is to exhibit in the armory on McKinley avenue, Dec. 8, 9, 10. This is not a carnival or anything like it, it is a genuine Circus and Freak city, as you will see if you visit the armory on the above dates.

A dime will admit you to the "big top", where you will see three big vaudeville acts, one of which is the "Sword Swallower", an act which is astounding, it must be seen to be appreciated and the most skeptical must admit after witnessing her feat, that it is genuine. Then comes "Tick tack", the pin-head Indian curiosity, the human pin cushion," the "kewpie doll," the dancing fat girl and many other big attractions. There will be dancing every evening from 8 to 11. ANNOUNCEMENTS

Purchases Julian Street Residence

Through the real estate agency of Archa W. Colt, the beautiful modern home on Julian street, built a year ago by C. M. Williams, for Anton Jacobsen, has been purchased by Albert M. VanWagenen, Jr., of Norwich Town. The new owner plans to occupy the property upon the expiration of its present lease.

Breed Theater

With the matinee this afternoon The Iron Horse will reach its 14th consecutive performance at the Breed theater, where it is attracting capacity audiences. This William Fox production, as most every follower of the film knows, pictures the dramatic days during the building of the first transcontinental railroad.

Two whole towns were built under the direction of John Ford for The Iron Horse, which was three years in the making. The cast of 10 principals, including George O'Brien, Madge Bellamy and Gladys Hulette was augmented by 5,000 minor players, including a regiment of troops, several tribes of Indians and a thousand railroad workers.

The Iron Horse will be shown tonight at 8:15 for the last time.

Jodoin Theater

The Fool, William Fox's much heralded picturization of the Channing Pollock stage success at the Jodoin theater, Baltic may be pronounced as a sincere attempt to bring clean pictures before the public. It makes no pretense at the spectacular—it is just a big, straightaway dramatic story of a self-effacing young zealot minister who aspired and tried to live as Christ lived—a theme with a tremendous appeal.

There isn't a doubt that the picture with its moralistic theme, will exert a tremendous appeal here and elsewhere throughout the country. And Edmund Lowe, handsome young Fox star, who plays the role of the minister-hero, Daniel, is going to make thousands of new friends and admirers by his superb and feeling performance of the part. Mr. Lowe was pretty near the whole picture, in our humble estimation, although Mary Thurman as the Magdalene, Anne Dale, as the little cripple, and Paul Panzer as Umanski, the Pole, shared much of the acting honors.

Patriotic Picture at Y. M. C. A.

The thrilling story, "The Man Without a Country," will be portrayed in moving pictures at the local Y. M. C. A. on the coming Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and both sexes are cordially invited. This picture story will be told on the screen briefly in one-half an hour. Due to the influence of Aaron Burr, Philip Nolan becomes implicated in a plot against the United States. In the trial he makes the rash statement, "I wish I might never hear of the United States again. For punishment he is doomed to sail the seas the rest of his life without sight of his country, without any news of his country, or even hearing the United States mentioned. Under these circumstances life on board the ship becomes almost tragic. At the same time the story is soul-stirring, and finally Philip Nolan dies a real patriot at heart. In addition to the showing of the picture, Hugh Kinder will render vocal solos, and a brief talk will be given appropriate to the occasion. Boys and girls under fourteen must be accompanied by parents or guardians.

Broadway Theatre

If you want to enjoy a story replete with pathos, a tender love affair, murder mystery, and crowded with breathless suspense and excitement, be sure you are present when "The Primrose Path" is flashed across the screen of the Broadway Theatre on Sunday. This is a picture which the critics pronounce one of the most gripping films of the season, beautifully photographed, splendidly acted and a sure hit.

Wallace MacDonald plays the hero unjustly accused of murder, thrown into jail, but with his sweetheart, mother and little brother ever loyal to him, until his innocence is proved. Others in the talented cast are Arline Pretty, Stuart Holmes, Clara Bow.

"Bringin' Home The Bacon," which is the fourth of the series of eight thrilling melodramatic features starring Buffalo Bill, Jr., distributed by Weiss Brothers Artclass pictures, will be the second attraction at the Broadway Theatre on Sunday, and sets a new high mark for daring and spectacular stunts in the notable record already established by this daredevil star.

In one scene alone, where Buffalo Bill, Jr., has a hand to hand fight with a bandit, played by Frank Ellis, in a wagon that is hurtling down a steep 50 foot cliff, the audience will have the thrill of their lives, and the admirers of this hard riding, straight shooting star will once more marvel at his reckless fearlessness.

"Bringin' Home The Bacon," is adapted from Christopher B. Booth's absorbing romantic-action story "Buckin' The Big Four," which originally was published in the Western Story Magazine. A comedy, Kinograms and augmented orchestra will complete the program; all for only 25 cents admission.

Gala Thanksgiving week program Monday. Watch this paper for announcement.

Built Filling Station

Contractor Charles W. Burton, of this city, has just finished building a cement block gas filling station for A. C. Brown, on the state highway near Gardner's lake. The building is 16 ft.x22 ft., one story high with basement.

Palace Theatre

Hadji Ali, the sensational Egyptian wonder, who swallows sixty to a hundred glasses of water, hazel nuts, watches and numerous other articles, appeared before a committee of doctors yesterday at the Uncas hospital, and gave a performance that mystified everyone who was there. Its your last chance to see him today and the Rose Mary Revue, who came here direct from Broadway with nine girls and two boys, a jazz band and special scenic effects. A surrounding bill of vaudeville that is fast and snappy and Sydney Olcott's latest offering to the screen, the Best People, are also shown. The performance is continuous today from 1:30 to 10:30.

Coming Sunday

Not the least important of the players in "The Gold Rush," Charlie Chaplin's new comedy-drama, showing at the Palace Theatre, starting Sunday, are two furry-coated actors who never change their costumes.

John Brown, who plays the role of himself, the big brown bear, was one member of the company on location who really revelled in the snow country.

After spending his days and nights in southern California, John Brown was taken up into the high Sierras—and no sooner had he sniffed the mountain air than he apparently thought he had returned to the freedom of the snows.

For the first few days he was unmanageable, and it was necessary to give him as much freedom as possible as he sought to tear up his cage. A stockade was built for him, and for days, hour in and hour out, while the company was on location, he frolicked in the snow to his heart's content.

On the days when he appeared before the camera, his happiness reached its zenith, as following each "take" he was turned loose and permitted to scamper off among the trees, to be recaptured only after much difficulty when it was necessary to send him through a scene again, or corral him for the night.

Gyp, the dog in "The Gold Rush," a United Artists Corporation release, is a permanent part of the Chaplin studio organization. He was saved from the lethal chamber in Hollywood city pound to enter the films, and his past is shrouded in mystery.

But his future is assured, for after he appeared in "The Gold Rush" he became a pensioner with Bill, the actor pup who appeared in "A Dog's Life," with Charlie Chaplin. The two now share honors in assisting the gatekeeper in guarding the studio, and, strange to relate, apparently without the jealousy that is evidenced by stars of a higher scale of intelligence.

Next Week at United Congregational Church

The Sodalitas meets in the church school rooms at half past seven on Monday evening. Members are asked to come provided with sewing materials, as work is to be started on a Christmas box.

The Union Thanksgiving service will be held at the Universalist church at half past seven on Thursday evening, with Rev. J. Harlow Graham as preacher.

The Junior Guild will meet in the church school rooms at half past seven on Friday evening. Work for the Christmas party will be started.

The campfire will hold its regular meeting at the Community house on Friday evening.

BREAK IN STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—(AP)—Stock prices displayed a complete reversal of form in today's market, breaking sharply in the final hour after an earlier period of strength which was featured by the heavy accumulation of railroad shares and a selected list of metals, tobaccos and specialties. Closing quotations disclosed a large number of issues ranging from 1 to 5 points, interspersed with a similar number of gains.

The reaction took place in the face of a large quota of favorable news developments. These included the speech of President Coolidge assuring legitimate business that it have no fear of government interference, heavy oversubscription of the $100,000,000 Italian loan retention of the 3 1-2 per cent. rediscount rate by the New York Federal reserve bank, and constructive trade developments.

The weekly mercantile reviews reported no important changes in the business situation. "Current reports and statistics unmistakably show that trade progress is unchecked," states Dun's review, "and the tightening of money rates at some centers is a phase which usually develops during periods of business expansion. Rather more irregularity and a slight let-down in buying in some lines of industry is noted this week in reports to Bradstreet's. "For this," it says, "weather irregularities and some modification of crop reports seemed to be mainly responsible."

Heavy profit-taking by professional traders who had bought stocks "for a turn," was believed to be largely responsible for the net selling movement. U. S. Steel fell from 138 7-8 to 130 3-4, and then rallied to 131 1-4 for a net loss of 1 point. American Can reacted from 252 1-2 to 247; Baldwin from 127 1-4 to 124 1-2, and General Motors from 128 3-8 to 125 3-8. Du Pont dropped from 228 to 218 and then moved back to 227 for a net gain of 2 points.

Heavy sales of Hudson, which broke from 102 5-8 to 94, closing slightly above the low figure for a net loss of nearly five points, probably reflected speculative disappointment over the failure of the directors to increase the regular $4 annual dividend. Other outstanding weak spots were American Locomotive and Foundry, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe and U. S. Industrial Alcohol, all off 4 1-2 to 7 1-2 points. Radio corporation broke nearly 5 points to a new low record at 51 1-2

There were several independent strong spots in the industrial group, Federal Mining and Smelting common standing out with a gain of 12 points at 71, a new high level. Other industrials to eclipse their previous 1925 high prices were Sloss-Sheffield Steel, May Department Stores, Tobacco products, International Nickel, Calumet and Arizona, Willys-Overland preferred, United States Distributing and the Liggett and Myers issues.

Rails lost part of their gains in the final hour although Pere Marquette, "Nickel Plate" Pennsylvania, New Orleans, Texas and Mexico, Norfolk and Western, Pittsburgh and West Virginia, Baltimore and Ohio and Erie common all attained new peak prices. Chesapeake and Ohio was heavy throughout, closing nearly 3 points lower at 117 3-4.

Call money held steady at 4 1-2 per cent., all day. The time money and commercial paper markets were relatively quiet with rates unchanged.

Foreign exchanges moved within rather narrow and irregular limits. Demand sterling was slightly firmer at $4.84 3-16 and French francs and Italian lire held relatively steady around 3.96 and 4 cents, respectively. Polish zloty broke 30 points to a new low record for the year at 15 cents.

PARTLY CLOUDY TODAY AND TOMORROW

Norwich Bulletin

1796 1925

NORWICH, CONN., SATURDAY, NOV. 21, 1925

FULL ASSOCIATED PRESS DESPATCHES

The Bulletin.

Norwich, Saturday, Nov. 21, 1925.

WEATHER

Conditions

The disturbance that was over Quebec Thursday night has advanced slowly northeastward with a trough extending southward and southwestward off the Atlantic Coast.

The outlook is for showers on Sunday afternoon or night in the middle Atlantic and North Atlantic States. Elsewhere in the states east of the Mississippi River the weather will be mostly fair Saturday and Sunday. It will be warmer on Saturday in the lower lake region and Ohio Valley on Sunday in east gulf and Atlantic States.

Winds

North of Sandy Hook and Sandy Hook to Hatteras: Fresh to strong north and northwest and weather partly overcast Saturday.

Forecast

For Southern New England: Partly cloudy Saturday, Sunday increasing cloudiness followed by rain at night, warmer in interior.

Observations

The Bulletin's observations show the following changes in temperature and barometric changes Friday:

	Ther.	Bar.
8 a. m.	41	30.26

Six hours after high water it is low water, which is followed by flood tide.

TAFTVILLE

Herman Krauss of Lisbon shot a handsome red fox Friday afternoon at Plain Hill, when hunting with George Kinder's dog. The animal is on exhibition in the store window of George W. Weller on North Third avenue.

The three apartment house on Dion street owned by Amede Pion was visited by thieves Thursday who entered the cellars and removed an axe from each of the three compartments.

This morning at 8:30 sharp 50 brooms will be sold at 1c each to the first 50 customers. Sale closes, Nov. 27. Edward Adams store.—adv.

Miss Phyllis Keough entertained at interpretive dancing at the surprise party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watts, of North Third avenue, as noted in Friday's Bulletin.

Friday was visiting day at the Wequonnoc school and many of the parents of the children took the opportunity of visiting the school. The notices sent out read as follows: "The Wequonnoc school aims to develop the character of the children by emphasizing truthfulness, honesty, obedience and respect of the rights of others. To teach the children in all around manner stressing each and every subject which comes in our course. Will you come and see us, please, on Friday, November 20th, and so 'Know your school.'"

NORWICH TOWN

While on a recent visit to Norwich, when he gave an address at the First Congregational Young Peoples Christian Endeavor service, Rev. George N. Edwards, of Walla Walla, Washington, was entertained at the home of George F. Hyde, of Washington street. Before leaving town, Rev. Mr. Edwards was a caller at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Peck, of Otrobando avenue. Mr. Peck and Rev. Mr. Edwards were schoolmates when attending school in Willington.

Miss Ella Skinner of Mohegan was a dinner guest, Thursday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Peck, who also entertained at dinner on a recent occasion, David Biglow of Westchester. Recent callers at the Peck Home include Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cross and family, of Moodus.

Mr. and Mrs. Olmsted S. Peck, of Glastonbury, former Norwich residents, until recently residents of Andover, were guests of their relatives here, over last week end.

Mrs. Benjamin L. Kennedy of Town street, leaves this (Saturday) afternoon, for Webster, Mass., to remain over the week end at the home of her mother, Mrs. Mary White, and sister, Miss Annie White, former Danielson residents.

POLISHERS TOO GOO FOR EAGLES IN PINOCHLE

Friday evening at the Eagles home the champion Eagles pinochle team met its fourth consecutive defeat at the hands of the Polishers. High score for the night went to Nowacki of the Polishers with a score of 7330 and high for the Eagles to E. J. Mullins with 7200. The Polishers now hold a lead of 9010 with only one more night to play.

The scores follow: Polishers, Nowacki 7330, Woodmansee 7205, Olivieri 7255, Drake 7185, Petrone 6560, Lelrich 6805, Kirschner 6665, Mullins 6615; Eagles, Mullins 7200, J. Bowne 6945, J. Dwyer 6750, W. Caughey 6425, T. Fields 6385, D. Shea 6155, Wm. R. Hastedt 5175.

The lowest score yet made in the tournament was made by William R. Hastedt with 5175.

Wrinkles Removed in 15 Minutes—Cost 3 Cents!

Quite a sensation has been created in certain social circles over the wonderful rejuvenating effects of a simple tarkroot mixture which any woman can easily apply at home. The results are so remarkable that one has told others, who in turn have told many more, and now the new method bids fair to supersede all the patent "wrinkle removers," massage and other things used for the purpose.

This is the procedure: A spoonful of powdered tarkroot is mixed with a spoonful of lemon juice, and this is spread over the face. An amazing transformation takes place, as the mixture thickens. In less than 15 minutes wrinkles, crowsfeet and creases have completely vanished! Facial contour is noticeably improved, and the face looks years younger. The most skilful massaging could not produce such a wholesome effect as remains after the mixture has been washed off. Tarkroot is of course perfectly harmless. Inexpensive, too. An original package from the druggist contains sufficient to bring the cost per treatment under 3 cents.

DRUMMERS OF 40 YEARS AGO HOLD REUNION WITH SUPPER AT HOTEL

A reunion of the Norwich Drum and Bugle corps which was organized in June 1883, was held Friday evening at the Wauregan hotel. This was a duplication of the first reunion which was held a year ago this month. In one of the private dining rooms of the Wauregan at 7 o'clock the attending members enjoyed supper and a smoker until taps was sounded at 10 o'clock. The taste for good suppers and reminiscences had not diminished one iota in the passing year.

The high ideals of the organization collectively and of the members individually were still held and the difference between last year's stories and this year's twice told tales was laid to the failing memory of the members of the corps. A crop of entirely new stories was recalled after the first course.

Reading between the lines one can see from the mortuary list that between the courses from soup to nuts all the civic problems were solved that were liable to come to the surface during the next 300 working days. Letters of regret were read from the following:

Buglers William E. Rice, director of the Federal Truck Co., Detroit, Norris E. Lippitt, Ridgewood, N. J., J. Maurace Peckham, New London, Drummer Nathan A. Sears, house furnisher and decorator, New York city, Bass Drummer Edgar T. Kingsley, real estate, No. 1 Madison avenue, New York city.

It was voted to hold the next reunion in November 1927. Those present were Leader A. W. Tilley, William R. Perkins, John B. Oat, John J. Parsons, William S. Spaulding, George L. Griswold and Charles I. Smith.

DR. CAMPBELL IS NAMED FOR COUNTY CHAIRMAN

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, superintendent of the Norwich state tuberculosis sanatorium, has recently been appointed New London county chairman of the Navy and Marine Memorial association, it was announced at New Haven Friday by Seth Low Pierrepont, state chairman of the movement.

The Navy and Marine Memorial is a proposed memorial to be erected in Washington to commemorate the national Navy and Maritime services and be dedicated to all Americans lost at sea. A beautiful site in Washington has been donated by unanimous vote of congress and the monument itself is to be erected at a cost of $500,000 to be raised nationally by subscription. Of this amount nearly one-third has already been contributed.

The state quota to be raised in Connecticut is $17,000 and more than $4,700 of this has been donated to date in the other counties. The quota which has been set for New London county is $937.93. Mr. Pierrepont said Friday that he was confident New London county citizens would contribute this amount readily. "New London county is a great maritime county," he asserted, "and the citizens will certainly wish to do their part in helping to make possible this great monument which will be the first memorial Americans have ever built to their loss at sea."

The design of the proposed memorial has received the highest praise from persons in all parts of the United States and abroad. An ocean wave made of statuary bronze—36 feet wide, 33 feet long and 33 feet high—will be placed on a pedestal. Over this wave will hover seven sea-gulls, also made of bronze, symbolic of the sadness and restlessness of the sea. Leading up to the wave will be a series of green granite steps, resembling waves. The extreme dimensions of these steps will be 190 feet by 156 feet.

There will be embodied in the Memorial bronze reliefs depicting the history of the navy, the merchant marine, coast-guard, etc., and there will also be shown the insignia of every state of the Union.

THREE DIVORCES ARE GRANTED FOR DESERTION

Three divorces, all for desertion, were granted by Judge C. L. Avery in the superior court here Friday morning, all being on the uncontested list. The case of Elizabeth Vine Clark vs. Edward H. Clark which was assigned, went off the list.

Desertion since May 20, 1922, was the ground upon which Laura Reed Hamilton of Norwich secured divorce from Charles W. Hamilton, formerly of this city, but now of parts unknown. They were married April 24, 1917. She was given the custody of their six year old daughter.

John E. Singer of Noank was granted divorce from Ruth Bogue Singer of Ledyard on the ground of desertion since March 10, 1923. They were married June 21, 1906.

Divorce for desertion since Jan. 1, 1922, was granted to Felix Flower, alias Felix Kwiatkowski, of Norwich from Anna Flower of Preston, whose maiden name was Pietrolaj. They were married in October, 1914.

JEWISH WOMEN'S COUNCIL SEEKS 100,000 MEMBERSHIP

Plans for the eleventh triennial convention of the National Council of Jewish Women were discussed Thursday at the concluding session of the Board of Managers of the organization held in New York. The convention will take place in Washington, D. C., next November. Mrs. Alexander Wolf of Washington, second vice president of the national council, announced that the preliminary committee in charge of arrangements had been formed.

A special committee was named to conduct a membership campaign in the United States and Canada in the spring of 1926. Mrs. William D. Sporborg of Port Chester, N. Y., first vice president of the national council, said there were 700,000 Jewish women in America and that the goal of the organization was an increase of its membership from 52,000 to 100,000.

THANKSGIVING BANQUET FOR BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE

The young people of the Central Baptist church are looking forward with much anticipation to a Thanksgiving banquet to be held under the auspices of the B. Y. P. U., Friday evening, November 27. Following the chicken-pie dinner, Paul Braisted will address the young people. His fiance, Miss Ruth Wilder, daughter of Dr. Robert F. Wilder of the student volunteer movement, will also be a guest of the young people.

Mr. Braisted was graduated from Brown University in 1925, and is serving the Co-operative Committee of Evangelism of the Northern Baptist convention while awaiting orders to sail for India as a missionary. He is a live-wire speaker.

Following the programme, a social hour will be enjoyed by the young people.

GIVEN AWARD FOR INJURIES WHILE WORKING

A workman's compensation award of $135.47, which is payment for 17 4-7 weeks at the rate of $7.71, has been made in the case of Anthony Lamorieux of 30 Norwich avenue, Taftville, an employe of the Ponemah Co. Mr. Lamorieux suffered burns of the face, hands and eyes through an electric shock on May 29. He consulted an eye and ear specialist and was able to resume work June 8 but had to quit June 11. He was treated at the Backus hospital and was able to resume work once more on Oct. 13. The commissioner finds that a jaundiced condition which had developed entitles him to the workmen's compensation payment with reasonable medical and hospital bills.

FORECLOSURE FOR $13,791.66 ON BROWNING BEACH PROPERTY

Judgment for $13,791.66 was awarded Ezra J. Hempstead, of Waterford, against Emaran J. Eaton, of Stonington, Me., and Julian D. Morgan, administrator of the estate of the late Ella O'Neil, of New London, by Judge Christopher L. Avery, in the short calendar session of the superior court here Friday morning.

The plaintiff held a mortgage of $10,000 on the property situated at Browning's beach on the Thames river which was purchased by the defendants as a shipbuilding site, and the $3,791.66 was the sum due for interest. Mr. Moran has a judgment lien upon the estate, the property being valued at $11,000.

Judgment according to stipulation which will be filed was ordered in the case of Moran against Manning and others. Appointment of guardian ad litem went off.

Motion to set aside the verdict of $1,140 in the case of Moran against Klingdon was denied. Judge Parsons, clerk of the court, entered the verdict as of Friday.

Judgment for $3,409.10 was awarded Rachael Kasowich of Hartford, against S. Liebman, B. Liebman, M. Liebman and Rose Saiant, of Lebanon, on the property adjoining the summer hotel property there. The plaintiff held second and third morgages on the farmhouse and 80 acres of land in the Exeter society district. There were a number of liens on the property and the limitation of time was set for Dec 14, 1925. The property is valued at $3,500.

When the defendant in the case of Grace Desario Pagano against Ralph Pagano testified that he was 21 years of age, the motion for an order for the appointment of a guardian ad litem be vacated, was granted.

A motion that the case be placed upon the uncontested list within 10 days for failure to plead was ordered in the case of Joseph Zdancewicz against Veronica S. O. Zdancewicz.

The court sustained some parts and overruled other parts of the demurrer in the case of Richards and others against Marshall and others.

Motions in the case of Coulopoulos and others against Kostopoulos were continued. The motions in the case were: Orders for payment of claims; fixing compensation of receiver, for services and expenses; fixing counsel fees; and directing distribution of balance among the partners; and final judgment in receivership.

Arguments on motion to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial in the case of Johanna Keating against the city of New London, was postponed until Friday, Dec. 4.

CONTINUANCE TO MONDAY IN FUR COAT CASE

The theft case against Gladys Lorraine, 24, of Providence, has again been continued by Judge Arthur F. Libby. This time the case has been continued until Monday and the Lorraine girl is in jail in default of $2,000 bonds. The case came up Friday morning in the city court and the continuance was granted in order to allow the girl and her attorneys to complete the plans for her defense. She is charged with the theft of a $500 fur coat from the store of J. B. Caron, 140 Main street.

A local man was fined $25 and costs for resistance and $5 for intoxication His bill of $39.50 was paid.

Nicholas Doyle was fined $10 and costs for operating an automobile without registration markers. His bill amounted to $20.50.

The case against Stanley R. Mayeski of No. 16 Monroe street was continued until Monday morning and bonds of $100 were furnished. He is charged with reckless driving and with failure to grant the right of way. Doyle and Mayeski figured in a collision on Sachem street near Yantic street on Thursday afternoon and their summons to court followed after investigation by the local police. The non-support case against Benjamin Ruley, colored, was continued for six months.

MARLIN-ROCKWELL CORP. GAINED $335,895 IN QUARTER

The Marlin-Rockwelle Corporation which owned and operated the former Hopkins and Allen arms building in Norwich during the World war reports gross earnings of $621,168 for the September quarter, including returns of subsidiary companies, compared to $214,089 for the corresponding period of last year. Net profit is reported as $335,895 against a loss of $6,836 in 1924. After allowing for preferred dividends the net profit was equal to $1.29 a share on the 232,805 shares no par value common stock. In the June quarter earnings equalled $1.21 a share on the common stock.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, gross earnings amounted to $1,659,601 and net profit to $903,500. After preferred dividends the net profit for the nine months was equal to $2.91 a share earned on the common stock.

TWO VISITING INDIANS GUESTS OF CHIEF OCCUM

At his home, No. 18 Arnold Street, Norwich, Thursday, Big Chief Occum, (Lemuel M. Fielding) had as his guests at supper two visiting Indians from the Penobscot Tribe, Maine. These young men are Gabriel, Paul, and Roland Nelson.

To meet them the Big Chief invited his brothers, Burrill and Albert Fielding, of Mohegan, and others at the table were C. P. O. Schuits and Mrs. Schuits, from the Sub-Marine Base, the Chief's daughter Myrtice, his son Everett, of the U. SE. Finishing Co. and his grandson, Albert E. Fielding, of Brooklyn, N. Y. A special guest of honor was Scout Executive Frederick A. Benton. The party of ten appreciated the fine supper, also the musical and other features which followed.

Chief Occum provided for his guests with great hospitality and the evening proved one of much enjoyment.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL IS APPROACHING $900

The annual roll call of Norwich branch of the American Red Cross continues to enlist the attention of Norwich citizens and the dollar memberships are sent each day to A. L. Peale, the local branch treasurer, at 59 Broadway.

Now that the booths which were maintained in the early days of the roll call have been discontinued, those who have not yet sent in their memberships but desire to do so are expected to give them, or send them by mail to Mr. Peale at the Broadway address.

Memberships received Friday made a total of $30, which made the total to date of $855.50.

The following are the latest memberships:

Miss Jean B. Crary, Miss Amanda M. Fisher, Miss Amy B. Cogswell, Mrs. Frank A. Robinson, Miss Louise Robinson, Mrs. Lila J. Baldwin, C. F. Jennings, Arthur L. Peale, Mrs. Arthur L. Peale, John M. Lee, Fred C. Crowell, Miss Nancy E. Lucas, Miss Mary C. Lucas, Herbert H. Corey, Miss Lucy Geer, Sedgwick Camp, Sons of Veterans.

Red Cross Work Worthy

From a recent study of the report of the treasurer of the Norwich chapter of Red Cross, for the year ending October 31, 1925, I have learned of the manner in which the funds collected in the annual campaign of 1924, were expended.

More than half of the total sum received was used for the benefit of the sick, disabled and unfortunate in this community, and the remainder was sent to the National association to make possible a consistent relief work whenever and wherever needed among the nations of the earth.

In the past, Norwich has contributed liberally to the support and maintenance of this important charity, and I believe we will do so again for the needs of 1926.

James L. Case, President.

RADIO AND MOVIES TO SPEED UP REGISTRATION

The radio, moving picture screen, police, mails and newspapers are being used by the state motor vehicle department in a systematic effort to speed up applications for 1926 registration of motor vehicles. The period during which reservation of numbers held in 1925 could be made expired last Saturday, instead of on December 1 as in recent years. The failure of many holders of low numbers to make application before that time limit resulted in such numbers going back into the general supply of numbers to be issued on a first-come-first-served basis.

The purpose of the department is to encourage as many early registrations as possible. "If the general public will cooperate with us in spreading the burden of registration over a period of seven weeks instead of trying to crowd it into a week or ten days, we feel that everyone can be accommodated without annoyance or loss of time," says a statement furnished to the Travelers radio station for broadcasting. "It is not reasonable to expect the motor vehicle department to expand sufficiently during the last few days in December to accommodate registrants by the hundred thousand," it continues, "and the only way to avoid waiting in line is to register early and avoid the rush. If anyone is reluctant to give heed to the state so much in advance of January 1st, we ask him to remember that the interest on the average fee for a month or six weeks amounts to only a few cents, whereas if he waits in line or has no plates to use on January 1st, his loss may run into dollars."

A statement along the same lines was enclosed with every copy of the department's November bulletin mailed out this week, and practically all moving picture theatres have been furnished with slides to project on their screens urging early registrations, several theatre managers as well as newspaper editors having evinced a willingness to cooperate in the effort, which is in the public interest. The information has been forwarded to local police departments also, to be disseminated through the means at their command.

TEACHING DEMONSTRATION AT CANTERBURY GREEN SCHOOL

A public demonstration of teaching was given in the Canterbury Green school, Thursday afternoon.

The room was decorated with the drawings and construction work of the pupils which made a very attractive display.

BURNED LINER TOOK CONNECTICUT MEN OVERSEAS

The Clyde liner Lenape, which caught fire off Atlantic City Tuesday night and was forced to race against the flames to land all passengers safe, is one of the boats assigned to carry Connecticut men overseas during the war. Their experience with the ship was not an altogether happy one, either.

Late in the September of 1917 the second battalion, 102nd infantry, sailed for the battlefields of Europe. In the battalion were Companies E, F, G, and H and the medical detachment. Altogether there were 1,095 men on board. Major William Alcorn of New Haven was in command.

When the boat was off Cape Hatteras it ran into the tail end of a hurricane, and when three of four days out the engine broke down and the ship was forced to return to Hoboken. There was a general report among the men at that time that the vessel had been condemned as unfit and they were transferred to another boat for the trip to France.

ST. FRANCIS' HOSP. NURSES GAVE BISHOP MURRAY $1,000

The committee in charge of a fund, collected as a farewell testimonial to Bishop John G. Murray, waited on the bishop, Thursday evening, at St. Patrick's rectory, Hartford, and presented him checks totalling about $10,000. In accordance with the wishes of Bishop Murray, there was no formal ceremony, only William Brosmith, the chairman, and the members of his committee being present. Bishop Murray expressed his sincere gratitude to all who had any part in the testimonial which Mr. Brosmith explained was a tribute of many friends of all denominations throughout the state.

A separate testimonial in the form of a check for $1,000 was handed Bishop Murray earlier in the week by representatives of the Alumnae association of St. Francis' hospital, Hartford.

SEIZED CRAFT MASTERS RELEASED WITH LIGHT FINE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 20—The masters of the fishing sloops, Hattie T., Pal and Nora, taken into custody by United States Coast Guard authorities yesterday, charged with violation of the navigation laws, were before United States Commissioner Russell H. Corcoran at the customs house last night and were released, following a minimum fine being imposed. All of the seized craft hail from New York and were seized when the crews of two patrol boats that had been scouring the New England shore for rum-runners, came upon the masters of the sloops attempting to establish communications with one of the rum-supply ships at anchor between Block Island and Montauk Point. When the patrol craft approached the fishing boats, the masters of the latter boats attempted to make a get-away by speeding away, but the fishing boats were overhauled and brought to New London.

SPEAKERS TELL OF WORK IN MISSIONARY FIELDS

Over 120 attended the luncheon of the Missions department of the United Congregational church, held Friday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the Community house, Church street. The menu served was as follows:

Grape Fruit
Chicken Patties
Fruit Salad Rolls
Ice Cream
Coffee

Following the luncheon Miss Nancy Lucas, chairman of the Missions department, introduced Miss Miriam L. Woodbury, field secretary of the Congregational Home Missionary society, who gave a splendid and very interesting address on home missionary work. Her subject was The World in America. Miss Helen F. Smith, secretary of the Woman's Board of missions, was the other speaker. The subject of her very interesting and highly instructive address was Foreign Missions.

Mrs. Emil M. Fox was in general charge of the luncheon plans.

Will Send Box To Indian Mission

Most generous was the response to the call of the Connecticut Council of Women for warm clothing to be sent to the Negro and Indian missions. A large box will be packed Saturday at 45 Broadway, and sent immediately to St. Mary's Catholic Indian mission, in Odanah, Wis. The rummage sale conducted by the same organization Friday proved to be a decided success. This sale was in general charge of Miss Anna McGrory.

KING'S DAUGHTERS SPENT DAY AT SOUTH WINDHAM

In response to an invitation extended to the sewing circle of Home chapter of the King's Daughters, by Mrs. William Bell, of South Windham, seventeen members spent a most enjoyable day, Tuesday, at her home in sociability and work. In the interests of the chapter, nineteen Christmas boxes were made, two children's dresses finished, two aprons made, also a child's coat.

Members went to South Windham by trolley and some by automobile. Each one carried a basket lunch, and the hostess served mince pie, squash pie and coffee, also a variety of choice candy.

Mrs. William Risley, of Norwich Town, will entertain the serving circle at its next meeting in January.

FINED IN PRESTON ON RECKLESS DRIVING CHARGE

When presented before a justice's court in Preston this week, Thomas J. Lord, who is the caretaker at the Wawog camps, was fined on the charge of reckless driving of an automobile and his license was suspended for 15 days. The justice remitted $24 of the fine.

The charge against Mr. Lord was made after a collision on a Preston road when the car he was driving came around a curve and struck the machine of Joseph M. Griffin of Preston in the side. The Lord machine was upset by the shock of the collision.

POETRY

The Shadows

All up and down in shadow-town
The shadow children go;
In every street you're sure to meet
Them running to and fro.

They move around without a sound,
They play at hide-and-seek,
But no one yet that I have met
Has ever heard them speak.

Beneath the tree you often see
Them dancing in and out,
And in the sun there's always one
To follow you about.

Go where you will, he follows still,
Or sometimes runs before,
And home at last, you'll find him fast
Beside you at the door.

A faithful friend is he to lend
His presence everywhere;
Blow out the light—to bed at night—
Your shadow-mate is there!

Then he will call the shadows all
Into your room to leap,
And such a pack! they make it black,
And fill your eyes with sleep!
—Frank Dempster Sherman.

On a Greek Vase

Divinely shapen cup, thy lip
Unto me seemeth thus to speak:
"Behold in me the workmanship,
The grace and cunning of a Greek!

"Long ages since he mixed the clay,
Whose sense of symmetry was such
The labor of a single day
Immortal grew beneath his touch.

"For dreaming while his fingers went Around this slender neck of mine,
The form of her he loved, was blent
With every matchless curve and line.

"Her loveliness to me he gave
Who gave into herself his heart,
That love and beauty from the grave
Might rise and live again in art."

And hearing from thy lips this tale
Of love and skill, of art and grace,
Thou seem'st to me no more the frail
Memento of an older race.

But in thy form divinely wrought
And figured o'er with fret and scroll,
I dream, by happy chance was caught,
And dwelleth, now, that maiden's soul
—Frank Dempster Sherman.

MINE WORKERS SEND QUERY TO PRESIDENT COOLIDGE

Wish to Know Whether the Government Desires to Intervene to Maintain the Integrity of the Jacksonville Agreement—Also Whether the Union Men Would Be Justified in Taking Their Union Measures to Enforce It.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22—(A. P.))—President Coolidge has been asked b ythe United States mine workers whether the government desires to intervene t omaintain the integrity of the Jacksonville soft coal wage agreement and, if not, whether the union men would be justified in taking their own measures to enforce it.

The inquiry was made in a letter from John L. Lewis, head of the miners' organization, dated Nov. 21. Mr. Lewis stated that the three year agreement, expiring March 31, 1927, was reached with the cooperation of the departments of justice, commerce and labor, and added that the annual report of the secretary of commerce referred to the compact as insuring industrial peace in the industry and that no better example of cooperation to secure the elimination of national waste could be presented.

Mr. Lewis asserted that "substantial coal producing interests, signatories to the agreement, have violated and repudiated their written word of honor and in so doing have impaired the integrity of the wage structure throughout the entire bituminous industry." Naming the Pittsburgh Coal company, Consolidation Coal company, the Bethlehem Mines corporation and the coal interests of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh railroad, as among those he alleges have dishonored their wage agreements, Mr. Lewis asserted that their "savage and dishonest" acts have "added to the burden of those honest coal operators who desire in every particular to operate in accordance with their wage agreements."

Mr. Lewis declined to discuss his letter. When asked for an explanation of the last paragraph in which he asked the president whether the mine workers would be justified in taking their own measures to enforce the Jacksonville agreement, should the government not feel disposed to intervene, the miners' leader said:

"Let the letter speak for itself. I have nothing further to say at this time.

The letter follows:

"Philadelphia, Pa.,
November 21, 19125 n.5-6

November 21, 1925.

"The President,
The White House.

"Sir:

"In February 1924, the operators and miners of the central competitive bituminous coal fields consummated a wage agreement designed to expire by limitation on March 31st., 1927. With this instrument as a base, supplemental agreements of similar nature were executed between operators and miners in contiguous and outlying coal districts. The accomplishment met with general public approval, as the agreement gave promise of security and advantage to the public with respect to the factors of continuous supply and price. Agencies of the federal government cooperated in making possible the agreement the departments of justice, commerce and labor participating. The twelfth annual report of the secretary of commerce, for the fiscal year ended June 30th., 1924, at pages thirteen and fourteen, states as follows:

"Through cooperation by the department with the unionized operators and with the leaders of the United Mine workers a long term agreement has been entered upon, which insures industrial peace in the industry. "x x x x "The industry is now on the road to stabilization." x x xo "No better example of cooperation to secure the elimination of national waste can be presented. The past year, as compared to the year 1920, shows a saving to the consumer of about $1,000,000,000, which must be reflected in decreasing costs of production in every avenue of industry and commerce."

"Without question, the foregoing declaration of accomplishment by the feedral government in the public interest was heartily approved by every thoughtful citizen."

"Notwithstanding the acknowledged virtue of the before-mentioned contract I am compelled to authoritatively advise you that substantial coal producing interests, signatories to the arrangement, have violated and repudiated their written word of honor and in so doing have impaired the integrity of the wage structure throughout the entire bituminous industry. Among the coal companies thus trampling upon and dishonoring their wage agreements with the mine workers are four of the largest coal producing groups in the nation, viz: the Pittsburgh Coal company, the Consolidation Coal company, the Bethlehem Mines corporation and the coal interests of the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh railroad, their several operations being located in northern West Virginia, Ohio and the central and western Pennsylvania coal fields.

"To attain their unmoral objective these companies, and certain others of lesser consequence, have utilized coercive and oppressive methods. Their actions have been destructive of all confidence between employer and employee and constitute an unwarranted, indefensible blow at the universally recognized principle of collective bargaining. The savage and dishonest acts of the before mentioned group has added to the burden of these honest coal operators who desire in every particular to operate in accordance with their wage agreements. The most full information as affecting the representations which I make is available in the departments of commerce and labor.

"The federal government upon occasion, and from time to time, has intervened in the coal industry. Not alone the operators but the miners have felt the weight of its influence and regulated their policies accordingly. In all respect, the mine workers now inquire whether the federal government desires to intervene to maintain the morality and integrity of the existing agreement in the bituminous coal industry.

"If it should occur that the federal government is disposed not to intervene for the protection of a meritorious wage agreement might the mine workers believe that their own efforts in that direction may be considered as being justified?" Respectively,

John L. Lewis
President.

TO MAKE EFFORT TO STOP PRODUCTION OF WINE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(A. P.)—Prohibition enforcement officials have uncovered an old fashioned spigot from which a large supply of wine has been leaking annually into illicit trade, and they are shaping a plug to stop it.

Several hundred thousand permits, issued by revenue collectors before prohibition became effective and forgotten by many officials, they found, have given the apparent authority of the government for production of two hundred gallons of wine annually by each holder.

The house cleaning incident to the reorganization of the prohibition forces has exposed these permits to view, and Assistant Secretary Andrews, the treasury's prohibition field marshal, has drawn up a regulation revoking all of them. It will be promulgated within forty-eight hours.

The assistant secretary also has hraped a plug to stop the leak of sacramental wine into non-sacramental channels.

He plans to dry up these little rivulets through an agreement he has reached with Jewish leaders, whose churches are the largest legitimate users of sacramental wine. New regulations under which sacramental wine may be obtained are expected this week, permitting withdrawal, probably, of only about two or three per cent. of the amount that has heretofore been taken out for alleged religious use.

TO RAISE THE HEDGE FENCE SHOAL LIGHTSHIP

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Arrangements for raising the Hedge Fence Shoal lightship, sunk by the Danish freighter M. C. Holm on November 9 and now lying in ten fathoms of water, have been completed. The derrick Century and the wrecking lighter Commission, both of which assisted in attempts to raise the sunken submarine S-51 off Block Island last September, arrived today and began salvage operations.

OBITUARY

Matthew F. Griffin

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Matthew F. Griffin, former head of the government secret service bureau in this city, and known throughout the country for his work in running down counterfeiters, died today at his home here.

He was President Cleveland's personal bodyguard and was detained to guard baby Ruth Cleveland when whispers of a plot to abduct her for ransom were heard at the White House.

Griffin, who was 71 years old, was convicted in September, 1924, with seven co-defendants of conspiracy to substitute water for $5,000,000 worth of whiskey stored in government warehouses and sentenced to three months and 15 days' imprisonment.

MITCHELL AND SHENANDOAH COURTS DRAGGING ALONG

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(A. P.)—Triple consideration of air service controversies, by the Mitchell court-martial, the Shenandoah court of inquiry and by congress itself, is in prospect for December.

It was a virtual certainty tonight that the Mitchell trial would overlap the opening of congress, and that sessions of the Shenandoah court would be extended about as long as the army tribunal continues to function. Aside from these two phases of the air controversy, congress simultaneously will have before it the recommendations of the house select committe which investigates government air services and, in all probability, will also be in receipt by that time of the findings of President Coolidge's air board.

Plans of the Mitchell defense and prosecution counsel have been revealed in a way that points unmistakably to a stormy and prolonged fight. The prosecution already has decided on some thirty witnesses who will be called to rebut every important issue developed by the defense. Among those it will call for this purpose are Major General Charles P. Summerall, who was president of the court when it first met but was excused after the defense had challenged his right to membership on the trial body; Brigadier-General Hugh A. Drum of the general staff, and probably Major Generals Mason Patrick, chief of the army air service, and Dennis E. Nolan, deputy chief of the general staff.

MARRIAGE ANNOUNCED OF YALE FOOTBALL PLAYER

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Announcement of the marriage of Miss Doris Thompson of West Haven, to E. M. Wolfe, of Coshocton, Ohio, Yale 1927 and a member of the Yale varsity football squad, was made last night at the Yale-Harvard football dance in Boston, it became known here tonight. The ceremony took place in Tuxedo, N. Y., August 30.

In consequence of the announcement of the marriage, it was reported here tonight that Wolfe would tender his resignation to the Yale faculty tomorrow.

The announcement of the marriage came as a surprise to the members of the Yale football squad as well as to other friends of Wolfe at Yale. He was regarded this year as one of the dependable substitutes on the varsity squad. He was sent into the Yale-Army game and prevented an Army touchdown by tackling a West Point player so hard but a few feet from the goal line that the latter fumbled, the ball being recovered by a Yale player.

Wolfe is 25 years old and prepared at Andover. Miss Thompson is the daughter to Mrs. Howard Thompson, of 56 Elm street, West Haven. She is prominent in social circles.

Queen's Body in Sandringham Church

The Simple Funeral Service Was Attended by King George, the Prince of Wales and Other Royalties.

SANDRINGHAM, England, Nov. 22—(A. P.)—With ceremonies almost as simple as would have been accorded a humble villager, Queen Mother Alexandra's body was borne early this morning on a wheeler biet by household servants to Sandringham church. It was followed by Princess Victoria and Princess Marie of Greece, the tiny cortege moving along the private path so often used by Alexandra in walking to church.

Without ceremony the coffin was deposited in front of the altar and covered with the queen mother's own standard as a pall, with a few family wreaths disposed around, but no crepe hanging or candles.

Vigil will be kept by four estate servants until the body is taken to London. The funeral service, held later, was attended by King George and Queen Mary, the Prince of Wales, other royalties and most of the regular congregation. The king himself walked to the church and carried their majesties' joint wreath and cross composed of pink and white flowers and dark violets blossoms much beloved by the queen mother.

The minister did not preach a sermon, but delivered a tribute to Queen Alexandra. No further services will be held until the funeral, but the church will be open daily for visitors to file past.

PROHIBITION SURVEY OF THE MODERATION LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—(A. P.)—The prohibition survey of the Moderation League, Inc., made public today in New York, brought a statement tonight from Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, in which he declared "the Moderation league will fool no one, but the liquor dealers and the deluded wets who are financing it."

"The Moderation league," he said, "is an imported Canadian wet organization, advocating beer and light wines. Its statements are neither accurate nor convincing. Their alleged drunkenness arrests in 350 cities show 8,000 more in 1914 than in 1924, not taking into account the increased population.

"Taking this increase into account and comparing drunkenness arrests in 1917, the last wet year, with the five dry years following, the average annual decrease in the nation is over 350,000.

"In license days drunkenness arrests amounted to one and one quarter millions yearly, and only 20 per cent. of those intoxicated were arrested. Now a far greater per cent of public drunks are apprehended and yet the arrests are fewer."

ENFORCING SUNDAY BLUE LAW IN NEW JERSEY

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Hundreds of Middlesex county residents today had their names taken by the police in the second crusade of the month against violators of the vice and immorality act, New Jersey's old blue law. The offences include driving an automobile, selling newspapers, riding on trolley cars, buying food or drink of any kind, and all forms of amusement, such as attending the theater or playing games. Many of those listed were "second offenders" according to the police.

The names were taken under orders from Prosecutor Joseph E. Stricker, and the lists will be presented to the grand jury as were the lists taken two weeks ago.

The law enforcement league of the county, largely made up of ministers, on Friday presented a resolution to Prosecutor Stricker which stated that the authorities in attempting to enforce the law "were trying to make a farce of it."

WATERBURY NEW $600,000 Y. M C. A. BUILDING DEDICATED

WATERBURY, Nov. 22—(A. P.)—Waterbury's new $600,000 Y. M. C. A. building was dedicated this afternoon. Speakers at the exercises were Mayor Francis P. Guilfoile, ex-Governor Charles A. Templeton, Rev. Dr. John N. Lewis and ohn A. Coe, president of the Waterbury Y. The key to the building was presented to Mr. Coe by David C. Griggs in behalf of the building committee. The speakers lauded officers of the Y. M. C. A., especially Herbert S. Smith, generalsecretary. The building will be open to public inspection all this week.

S. O. S. CALL PICKED UP FROM UNIDENTIFIED SHIP

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Nov. 22.—(A. P.)—The operator at the Palm Beach Radio Company's station reported tonight that he had picked up an S. O. S. call from an unidentified ship in the North Atlantic. The call was heard from 5.30 to 5.50 p. m.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(A. P.)—A faint distress signal from an unidentified ship was picked up by the naval communications station here at 6.30 tonight. Efforts to establish the identity or location of the ship were unavailing.

WOMAN IN WATERBURY SUFFERS FROM POISONING

WATERBURY, Nov. 22—(A. P.)—Mrs. Harriet Alard, of 104 South street, was taken to St. Mary's hospital this afternoon, suffering from poisoning. Mrs. Alard went to church this morning and there met a friend, John Burns, of West 94th street, New York city. She went to a restaurant with Mr. Burns and then went home. Arriving home, she complained of feeling ill and sent her daughter for a doctor. She was taken to St. Mary's hospital where her condition is reported as not serious. The police are investigating.

REPORTS OF EARTHQUAKE NEAR FALL RIVER SUNDAY

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Reports of an earthquake in this vicinity poured into the city early this morning. Excited householders called the police and telephone operators to learn what the disturbance was. The operators reported that all lights on incoming lines suddenly flashed. Newport, R. I., and Warren, reported that they also felt the shock.

Trolleys Restored To New Haven Road

Vice President Buckland Says the Road Will Provide New Rolling Stock, Tracks and Equipment.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—The right of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad to hold street and soburban railway systems in New England, which a federal court had forbidden in 1914, has been restored to it by Judge Francis A. Winslow in Federal court here.

The securities of the subsidiaries, including those of the New England Investment and Securities company, have been held in trust for the New Haven since the 1914 decre, as it never has been possible to dispose of them at a reasonable figure.

The railways whose control returns to the New Haven by Judge Winslow's decision are the Berkshire Street Railway, the Vermont Railway, the New York & Stamford Railway and the Connecticut Railway.

Judge Winslow gave as the principal reason for his decision the change in transportation conditions since 1914. Trolley lines that might at the time have been considered competitors and whose absorption by the New Haven would have violated the Sherman anti-trust law, were not such today, he said.

The judge also mentioned the fact that no purchaser for the securities had been found. He said that he was convinced of the good faith of the New Haven's contention that no sale had been possible.

The New Haven's plans for the development of bus lines as feeders to the railroad entered the case through the petition of the chief opponent, the Connecticut Motor Stage Corporation, of which the Hartford & Springfield Railway company is one of the members. Patrick Healey, president of the corporation, submitted an affidavit protesting against the modification of the 1914 decre

To this affidavit Judge Winslow replied that the Connecticut law provides that any one could operate motor busses on permission of the Public Utilities Commission. The objection of the bus corporation, he said, virtually sought to have the court sanction, by indirection, a monopoly in its favor. The bus corporation was referred to the Public Utilities commission and the Connecticut courts for redress.

Regarding conditions of today, Judge Winslow said that trolley service from door to door does not compete with railway service from station to station, but rather is complementary to it. He remarked also that traffic congestion requires close co-operation among public carriers serving closely associated communities.

E. O. Buckland, vice-president of the New Haven, promised the court that in taking back the subsidiaries involved the railroad would provide new rolling stock, tracks and equipment.

Moorfield Storey and John W. Dixon appeared for the New Haven, and Special Assistant Attorneys William D. Whitney and Major Alexander B. Royce for the government.

PATOKA ENCOUNTERED PHOSPHORESCENT SEAS

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 23—(A. P.)—The Navy aircraft tender Patoka has reported a recent encountering of phosphorescent seas, so bright that a newspaper and ship's order would be read on the open deck at night.

The illuminated seas, the ship's commanding officer reported, were encountered on a recent trip from Port Arthur to Key West, north of the western end of Cuba. The Patoka is now taking part in maneuvers of the scouting fleet and is due here in a few days. "This vessel," the report stated, "crossed a phosphorescent band about six miles wide which extended as far as could be seen in a north and south direction.

"One half hour previously and for for about a half hour afterward the band was visible as an incandescent line in the horizon. The change from the sea of ordinary appearance to the phosphorescent band was distinct and marked.

"The line was less than 400 feet from plain sea to highest light, in the band strong shadows were cast upward under the ship's awnings. On the stern large print could be read from the light of the wake. The wake showed marked red and green colors beside the phosphorescent hue present. The border along the ship's side was about six feet thick.

"Every white cap was alight and the night being dark and clear this made a weird effect as if the sea was reflecting the stars and milky way.

BRIAND HAS LIKING FOR AMERICAN FILMS

GENEVA, Nov. 22.—(A. P.)—Aristide Briand, France's foreign minister, is a movie fan. Locarno found this out during the recent big security conference. When, worn out by a long day's fatiguing negotiations, M. Briand wanted to get relaxation and escape from high politics, he drove to the solitary cinematograph theatre which Locarno glories in, and sat gleefully throughout the whole show. He displayed a special liking for the American films. On one occasion he played a little joke on the newspapermen, whom he likes from the very nature of things, for M. Briand himself is an old reporter.

Surrounded by several of his fellow French delgates, he left his hotel one evening on what looked like a mysterious mission. He was immediately interrogated as to his destination by a score of correspondents.

"It's very important," said M. Briand with a twinkle in his eye, "and you can come along with me."

The correspondents hustled into other automobiles, but the journey ended at the door of the moving picture palace.

They took with them as guests Secretary Mellon, Senators Smoot of Utah and Lenroot of Wisconsin; Representative Tilson of Connecticut, and Mrs. Tilson; Solicitor General and Mrs. Mitchell and Major and Mrs. W. S. Grand, III.

FRENCH CABINET RESIGNED AFTER DEFEAT IN CHAMBER

Painleve Fell on the Question of Consolidation of National Defense Bonds—Vote Was 278 to 275—Painleve Walked From the Room Without a Word—Chamber Has Adjourned Until Tomorrow.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Growing discontent with Premier Painleve's financial proposals, even among the government's supporters, finally brought about his fall today, less than a month after he had reconstituted his ministry to meet the wishes of the radical groups in the chamber.

The defeat of the ministry came when the chamber refused by three votes to accept Article 5 of the proposals, providing for enforced consolidation of the short term debt, although a previous motion for the elimination of the article had been defeated.

The vote on the main question was 278 to 275; and on the earlier vote, to reject Article 5, M. Painleve had only a majority of 25 with 26 communists abstaining. When the article came up for final acceptance, the communists voted against the government, and the switching of other votes completed the defeat.

There was a dramatic scene in the chamber. M. Painleve, after the announcement walked from the room, followed by his ministers. Aid much excitement, M. Herriot, leader of the radical socialists, moved adjournment which was taken until Tuesday next.

After the final vote the ministry met hastily and presented their letter of resignation to President Doumergue, who immediately began conversations looking to the formation of a new ministry. The ministry considered most likely in political circles would be a concentration government designed to command the support of the centre and moderate left, and not relying for its existence in a crisis as did that of M. Painleve upon the votes of the extreme left.

While numerous names are mentioned as possible premiers, including those of M. Briand and Raoul Peret, former president of the chamber of deputies, political experts would venture no prediction, and President Doumergue himself, after consulting with M. Painleve, M. De Selves and M. Herriot, withheld action until tomorrow.

The actual rock on which the ministry was wrecked was fear of what was regarded as inevitable heavy inflation and a deep-rooted dislike for a "default" as the opposition characterized forced consolidation. Such consolidation, said its opponents, would create a panic among the holders of national defense ebonds, who would see a similar rate for their securities and rush to exchange them for cash at a time when the treasury was depleted and unable to meet its obligations except through a new issue of notes.

The resignation of the ministry makes it impossible to effect consolidation of the short term notes amounting to 2,500,000,000 francs, and there will be no alternative but to print more notes. Consequently M. Painleve will ask immediate authority from parliament for the issuance of 1,500,000,000 new currency to reimburse the holders demanding payment He may possibly request both senate and chamber to hold a special session tomorrow to rush through the measure.

THREAT OF DISTURBANCE IN BITUMINOUS FIELDS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Threat of labor disturbance in bituminous coal fields, seen in the appeal to President Coolidge today by leaders of the miners' union with respect to enforcement of the Jacksonville wage scale, has been given official consideration, but comment has been withheld.

This is the second reference to the federal government of the soft coal wage scale troubles, but in the former case, Secretaries Davis of the labor department and Hoover of the commerce department were named, nad no action resulted.

At that time, Cabinet members said that it was not the duty of the executive to enforce any civil contract, though naturally the administration stood for the keeping of wage agreements by all concerned. John L. Lewis, president of the miners' union, in public addresses declared that large corporations were breaking the scale, and that serious trouble would ensue if matters were not corrected.

Nevertheless, reports have indicated an increase in the coal mined in former union fields by companies which are no longer operating under the wage contract. Production of bituminous coal generally has been on the increase during recent months, nad geological survey reports indicate that it is running above 12,000,000 tons a week.

SAYS MINERS ARE READY TO CONFER WITH OPERATORS

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—(A. P.)—Anthracite miners are ready to confer with the operators regarding an end of the strike, "on a fair give-and-take basis of collective bargaining," Ellis Searles, editor of the Mine Workers Journal, said today at a church forum meeting in Richmond Hill. The men are ready to enter a two to five year contract, he added, but "will not arbitrate the price at which they may sell their labor," nor give up their right to strike.

"The operators are demanding a contract which would provide for arbitration each year of the wage rates for the following year," Mr. Searles declared, "with a provision that the men shall remain at work while the arbitration is in progress. Such an arrangement would mean that the miners would agree never to strike under any possible set of circumstances. Such a proposition is absurd.

"When the anthracite operators say they are in favor of a long term contract with the mine workers they deliberately attempt to fool the public. The miners have repeatedly tried to get the operators to sign a long term contract but the operators have invariably refused.

"The fact is, the anthracite operators want frequent strikes so that they may impose upon the public by selling the waste and bug dust that accumulates each year at their mines."

WHAT WAYNE B. WHEELER SAYS ABOUT PROHIBITION

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(A. J.)—Prohibition enforcement has been a failure, ayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League agreed today but only from the viewpoint of the wets.

"One by one the leaks in the prohibition dam are being corked," he said, "while enemies of prohibition continue to decline enforcement is a failure. It is—for them."

SENATOR EDGE'S VILLA AGAIN BURGLARIZED

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 22.—(AP)—For the third time in as many years, the villa of U. S. Senator Walter E. Edge was broken into and ransacked last night, but as usual little, if anything was taken, so far as could be learned tonight, although every room was apparently thoroughly gone over and the contents of closets and drawers strewn over the floors.

NAVY MAN DROWNED IN NARRAGANSETT BAY

NEWPORT, R. I. Nov. 22—(A. P.)—The explosion of a boiler tube on a navy launch in Narragansett Bay today caused the drowning of Sydney Irving Tucker, 28, of Dover, N. H., attached to the torpedo station here. Tucker leaped from the launched, of which he was engineer, but failed to re-appear.

ANTHRACITE OPERATORS DEMAND A RETRACTION

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP)—The anthracite operators' conference has served upon the American Fair Trade League a formal demand that the latter organization retract the "false and libelous" charge that hard coal producers were mulcing the public through a resizing plan forced upon dealers.

The demand was served upon the league in a letter signed by Walter Gordon Merritt, of counsel for the conference, and addressed to Edmond A. Whittier, secretary.

Referring to a statement issued by the league November 11, in which the mulcting charge was made, with the assertion that it might be found necessary to prosecute certain dealers for fraud although "the real offenders are those operators who were compelling retailers to accept adulterated coal." The letter said:

"Those statements by you are false. Last spring the operators agreed with the retailers upon a program to standardize the size and quality of coal in order that the public should receive what, in effect, would be a certified product. The action was taken openly after a public announcement setting forth in detail what was being done. It should have had the hearty support of your league at the time thereof, because it standardized the product without deteriorating it, and thereby reduced the opportunity for fraud. It did not result in mulcting the public or increasing the returns of the operators. It was done in cooperation with the retailers, and at their suggestion, and was not forced upon them. The anthracite operators believe that, in so doing, they were serving the public interest.

"You further state that the charges made by you were the result of an investigation, but, so far as we are able to ascertain, you did not investigate a single colliery or confer with a single operator. On the contrary, you proceeded to try convict and punish the operators without a hearing—a policy repugnant to the American sense of fair play. No investigation worthy of the name could possibly confirm such charges as you have made.

"As counsel for the anthracite operators' conference, therefore, I demand a retraction of your false and libelous charges."

LITTLE CHANGE IN THE CONDITION OF COL. COOLIDGE

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Nov. 22—(A. P.)—Colonel John C. Coolidge, father of the president, failed today to show the continued improvement which have been noted since his recovery from the severe attacks of last Wednesday. His condition, however, was not described as radically changed from yesterday.

Major James E. Coupal, physician to the executive who is here in connection with the proposed removal of Mr. Coolidge to Washington for the winter, told newspaper men shortly after 5:30 o'clock this afternoon that although the patient had been able to sit up briefly he was not feeling as well as he had been Saturday.

It was learned that Mr. Coolidge had suffered another series of heart blocks but Dr. Coupal declined to discuss their number or severity.

It was represented that Colonel Coolidge's appetite had suffered no diminution, or in other respects had his condition failed.

No progress was made in discussion between Major oupal and Mr. Coolidge on the projected Washington trip. It was indicated, but Mr. Coolidge is still said to have an open mind on the subject. Major Coupal, who is staying at the Coolidge homestead, remained indoors most of the day and only one visitor saw the colonel.

THOUSANDS FILE PAST THE BODY OF CLARA MORRIS

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(A. P.)—Several thousand persons, including many former associates, filed past the body of Clara Morris, at one time America's most widely known emotional actress, as it lay in state today in "the Little Church Around the Corner."

Funeral services will be held in the church at 4 o'clock tomorrow. Burial will be in Kensico cemetery.

Miss Morris died on Friday at New Canaan, Conn., in her 79th year. She had been an invalid for twenty years.

THEFT AND BOOZE SALE AGAINST FRANK ST. MARTIN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 22—A clever ruse on the part of Lieutenant of Police Frank McLean, landed Frank St. Martin of 101 Union street in jail about 2 o'clock this morning on charges of theft of a sum of money and violation of the liquor law. St. Martin and his family occupy four attic rooms on a block on Union street. About midnight Saturday two local men, Theophile D. Marcoux and Ernest Beaudelles visited his place to buy a couple of drinks with the former acting as host. Marcoux stated that he and his friend received the drinks of liquor. He gave St. Martin a $20 bill but the latter failed to return his change and an argument started. St. Martin then ejected both men from the house and Marcoux went to a restaurant where he met two friends, Arthur Pelletier and William Blouin, two local young men. He told them his story and about that time found that his pocketbook, which had contained a second $20 bill was missing, making his loss a total of $40. The young men decided to help him recover his money as he was inclined not to take any action in the matter.

Lieutenant McLean was notified and he went to St. Martin's home and ordered him to come along to police headquarters to be searched. With the forethought that if the man possessed the missing pocketbook and money he might attempt to dispose of it in some way Lieutenant McLean had warned Pelletier and Blouin to follow him as he walked to the police station with St. Martin. Pelletier was equipped with a flashlight. In a dark section near the site of the new hotel the two young men saw St. Martin throw something to the sidewalk behind him as he walked beside the officer. Pelletier picked up the object and found that it was Marcoux's pocketbook, which was easily identified at police headquarters by cards and other matter which bore the owner's name. $18 in bills was contained in the pocketbook, leaving $32 unaccounted for. Marcoux claimed at the time that it was the second time he had been short-changed by St. Martin. In addition to the theft charge St. Martin will face another charge of making two sales of liquor. His case will be heard this Monday morning.

WILLIMANTIC PEOPLE URGED TO MAIL EARLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 22—The fact that Willimantic will not have Christmas mail and package delivery for the first time in its history is causing not only merchants and newspapers to stress the fact that early shopping is essential, but a special effort is being made by the postoffice department to induce the public to cooperate in getgeting all mail delivered before the holiday. The slogan of the department is, "Shop Now and Mail Early. No Christmas day delivery. Mail early for delivery before Christmas." Once more the plea for secure wrappings and legible writing goes out. Strong paper and heavy twine are highly recommended in the list of instructions, and the use of special delivery stamps to expedite delivery is requested. Postmaster Frank M. Smith calls special attention to the time of mailing to insure delivery before Christmas. Gifts and cards addressed to points within one day's travel should be mailed not later than December 20; within two days, not later than December 18; within three days travel, not later than the 16th and to distant points not later than the 14th. Parcel and cards for local delivery should be mailed not later than December 22.

H.B. MORRISON RECEIVES LIEUT.'S COMMISSION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 22—Harry B. Morrison, one of the four sons of the late Colonel John H. Morrison, who enlisted in the service during the World war, received notification Saturday from the United States war department of his appointment as second Lieutenant in the Medical Administrative Reserve corps of the United States Army. It is expected that his commission will arrive within a few days. The assignment is to the First Corps Area, subject to call.

Lieutenant Morrison served in the medical department with the twenty-sixth division during the world conflict, with the rank of sergeant. He had previously enlisted for the war with Mexico. He was in France for a number of months. Lieutenant Morrison entered pharmacy work while a student at the Windham High school from which he graduated. He is now a registered pharmacist and manager of a local drug store.

Lillie Bycell, a tenant in the Girard block on lower Jackson street will be arraigned in police court this Monday morning to answer to a charge of violation of the liquor law as the result of a successful raid on her place staged at 7.30 o'clock Saturday evening by Police Officers Arthur Hurley, F. Rudolph Laramee and Nicholas Orlando. While Officer Hurley prohibited Mrs. Bycel with a warrant Officer Laramee invaded a rear room of the house and returned with one quart bottle filled with alcoholic solits, another bottle containing about one pint of the powerful suff, a bottle partly filled with ginger ale, used as a chaser, and a whiskey drinking-glass. Mrs. Bycel furnished bonds for her temporary release.

Funeral services for Mary E. Kenfield were held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of her son, C. F. Kenfield, 1158 Main street. Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead of the M. E. church officiated. The remains will be taken to Scotia, N. Y., today (Monday) for burial. Avery and Van Zandt were in charge of arrangements.

Department Inspector Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury of Norwich made her annual visitation to Mary Todd Lincoln tent, Daughters of Veterans in connection with the regular meeting held Friday evening in the G. A. R. hall. Some 35 members were present and guests in addition to Inspector Atterbury included Department President Mrs. Nellie S. May of New London, Commander Orrin Price of the Norwich G. A. R. and Commander A. P. Benner and Adam Ounts of the local G. A. R. post. An appetizing supper was served at 6:30 o'clock on tables prettily decorated in red, white and blue favors. Mrs. Minnie E. Mathieu was chairman of the supper committee, her assistants being Mrs. A. Vantine Anderson, Mrs. John Meehan and Mrs. F. H. Williams. A social hour followed the repast. Mrs. Atterbury was awarded the mystery box. Later in the evening Department Inspector Mrs. Atterbury was presented with a beautiful Wallace Nutting picture and Department President May was given a vase of exquisite design.

As the outcome of a collision of automobiles near Uncles Corner, at South Coventry, last Thursday evening, Capt. William A. Wolfe of South Coventry has been summoned by State Policeman Henry Heinold to appear in the Coventry town court next Tuesday evening to answer to a charge of reckless driving. Captain Wolfe had driven his truck out of a driveway and turned into the highway as cars were approaching from both directions. The owner and driver of one of the cars, Malcolm M. Misteln turned sharply to the right and struck a telegraph pole. Additional damage was caused to his machine when Wolfe's truck struck the front of it.

Wanted—a potential G. O. P. to receive the aldermanic nomination from the third ward. That appears to be the cry of local republicans as the city elections draw nearer and the vacancy on the party ticket remains unfilled. Nelson A. Daniels, chairman of the republican city committee stated Saturday that republican possibilities in the third ward were getting as scarce as Buck Beer signs. Former Selectman James M. Smith, chairman of the ward committee, continues to decline the candidacy and indications still point to an uncontested vote.

The appointment of Captain Lulu Sehl, commanding officer of the local Salvation Army corps for some time, to the statistical department of divisional headquarters at Hartford was made known Saturday. Captain Sehl will enter upon her new duties this Monday. She had been in this city since last February and during that time had won a wide circle of friends, many of whom attended the services at the Army Citadel Sunday and bade her Godspeed and success upon her leave-taking. Captain Sehl delivered a farewell address in conjunction with the service.

Willimantic lays claim to what it believes to be the smallest combination sugar, tobacco and confectionery store in captivity. One that fits snugly in a corner showwindow and is only 70 inches deep, 24 inches wide and seven feet high has been opened here and is on the plan of those conducted in larger cities.

Coroner Arthur G. Bill indicated that an inquest on the, mysterious death of Guiseppe Distefano, who was found dead with a bullet wound in his throat two weeks ago Friday morning, 24 hours before he was to become a benedict, would be held the early part of this week in this city. The completion of an investigation which is still under way is being awaited. Theories continue to conflict as to whether death was caused by suicide, murder, or suicide by force of influence, of a second party.

Judge Foss imposed a fine of $5 and costs, amounting to $13.95 Saturday morning on Gail Shamback of this city, who was charged with violating the parking ordinance of the city. Shamback was the man arrested at 9 o'clock Friday forenoon by Deputy Sheriff William E. Jackson for parking his truck on a restricted area of Bank street and within ten feet of a hydrant.

Miss Helen Smith won the first price for upper classmen in the poster contest at Windham high school for the presentation of All of a Sudden Peggy. Joseph Taige won first prize for freshmen and Dorothy Wheeler, second. Ralph Wolmer was awarded a special prize.

PLAINFIELD

PROMISED LEGACY FOR TRIP TO TEXAS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Nov. 22—Mr. and Mrs. Kelly of Houston, Texas, nia Mrs. Kelly of Pleasant street, left town Saturday for a trip to Houston Texas, to visit an aged aunt of Mrs. Kelley. Some weeks ago Mrs. Kelly received a letter from her aunt, urging her and her husband to come to Houston to take care of her, on account of her feebleness, with a promise of a legacy of $20,000 at her death. Although a great deal of love exists between aunt and niece, Mr. and Mrs Kelly do not appreciate the idea of leaving Plainfield, so the trip to Texas is to try and induce the aunt come back here with them. Mr. Kelly is the telegraph operator at the railroad station here.

Clarence Bateson, a local hunter of some note, brought down a beautifully colored partridge Saturday, besides some rabbits and grey squirrels, which were very much envied by numerous other young hunters. It was admirable to hear the modest way that Mr. Bateson gave his dog, "Morty," the credit for his catch.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ledger and daughter were business callers in Norwich recently.

Ernest Wilde has resigned his position with C. N. Mathewson, as automobile and radio salesman.

The social party held in vestry of the Congregational church on Thursday evening was a gratifying success. The entertainment committee fulfilled their charge with marked enthusiasm, and produced some well appreciated local talent. The first number was a violin solo by Mrs. Arthur Moffit, followed by a humorous reading by Mrs. Carl Gallup. Raymond Roode demonstrated his skill at cartooning, and the Boy Scouts quartet rendered two favorite ballads. Herbert Phillips rendered a violin solo, and Ida Butler and Doris Generous a ukulele duet accompanied by Miss Helen Gallup. Mrs. Irving Flagg gave a piano solo and Alfred Royle led the entire audience with old time songs. Several games were played by both young and old, followed by refreshments of ice crea mand cake.

Several arrests have been made by Officer Urquhart of the state police in regard to the stealing of cement from Connecticut National Pavements Co., which reports 1,560 bags missing.

At 5:30 a. m., on Saturday, a fire broke out at the home of Lena Imhoff on the Canterbury road. Before the fire company could be notified the house was burned to the ground. The fire company worked on a wood pile and saved that, together with a load of lumber, which was to be used in the building of a garage. The house was a new one, recently ybuilt by Antonio Gerosia and sold to Mr. Imhof. The fire started at the chimney above the ceiling.

At the evening services of the Congregational church on Sunday, an address was given by Rev. H. M. Kingsley, of New York city, on the Progress and Development of the Colored People of America. A solo was rendered by George Inglis, accompanied by Mrs. Augusta Nolan, pianist.

WESTERLY

WESTERLY MAN'S BROTHER PROBABLY KILLED BY TRAIN

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 22—Word was received in Westerly on Saturday forenoon by Ernest Jones that the body of his brother, Arthur Jones, of Slocum, R. I., had been found that morning beside the tracks of the New Haven railroad and that he had apparently been struck by a train while walking from Slocum to Kingston. Mr. Jones took the 10:33 accommodation for Slocum.

Just how Jones met his death is unknown, for an inspection of the track had been made and at that time there were no indications of a fatality. Only a light engine and caboose passed the spot between the time of the track inspection and the reported finding of the body.

Westerly firemen were called Saturday morning about 8:15 o'clock to respond to an alarm from Box 45, Beach and Elm streets. Two pieces of fire apparatus responded for what was thought to be a chimney fire at the Litman store on Beach street, but the recall sounded just a few minutes after the firemen arrived on the scene. It was reported that soft coal was used in the stove in the upstairs apartment, occupied by Mrs. Alice M. Burdick and family, and as it ignited a burst of flame came out into the room and Mrs. Burdick's son, Robert, rushed out and pulled in the fire alarm. There was no damage.

Recorded in the office of the Westerly town clerk it appears: Nov. 19. Robert W. Perkins as ancillary receiver of the Shore Line Electric Railway company to Albert L. Saunders as administrator of the estate of Alzada A. Saunders a first tract of land one and nine tenths acres with a 95 foot frontage on the north side of the Shoro road.

A second tract of land three and sixty-three one hundreds acres with a 95 foot frontage on the south side of the Shore road:

A third tract of land, triangular shape one-eighth of an acre on the east side of Winnapaug road. All the above tracts being formerly the right of way of the Shore Line Electric railway.

John L. Breen et al to John S. Hebb a lot or parcel of land on the north side of the Watch Hill to Westerly highway and along Pasadena avenue.

Frank W. Coy Real Estate company to Lewis F. Harder et ux as joint tenants and not as tenants in common tracts of land the first being lots Nos. 71, 70, 69, 68, 74, 75, 67 and 76.

The second tract being Lot No. 36 on Misquamicut road to the Pawcatuck river, all located at Watch Hill.

Nov. 20 Bertha Seidner to Joseph Kessler et al a certain lot or parcel of land at Pleasant View beach on the east side of Benson avenue.

The work on the United Theatre building of Westerly on Canal street is being pushed along towards completion. On Saturday the plate glass windows in the two store fronts on either side of the main theatre entrance were put in place. The mouldings, top and side pieces are of copper. With these in place the work of plastering and finishing the interior can continue uninterrupted.

Sunday morning about 1 o'clock Connecticut state troopers, five in number visited Pawcatuck, and unannounced also "rung in" on two crap games while they were in progress.

Christy Lebastian, 93 Liberty street was the first one tavored by the officers visiting the premises with a search warrant, when they found four men "rolling the bones."

Vido Congelisio, near Oak Farm, North Stonington road was then visited where some four men were found with a possible knowledge of the "African game."

The proprietors and frequenters will be arraigned this (Monday) morning before Judge William A. Wilcox of Pawcatuck in a session of Stonington town court in the Borough hall town court room.

Dr. William A. Hillard was called Saturday morning to attend Santo Panciera, employed by the Walter G. Hiscox company, when he had sustained a fall from the roof of the Camp cottage at Watch Hill. Examination showed a broken rib, several fractures of the arm, wrist and broken thumb. The injured man was taken to the Westerly hospital, where he was given treatment.

District Deputy Noble Grand Sherman of East Greenwich with suite of officers made his official visitation Saturday evening to Narragansett Lodge, No. 7, I. O. O. F., of Westerly. Floyd Young, noble grand. Following the work of the evening, refreshments were served, card games played and a social time enjoyed.

Announcement was made at the Sabbath morning services of the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church that the new hymnals in use that morning were the gift of an interested member who had noticed the worn condition of the old books in use. On a rising vote of thanks it became known that the donator was Mrs. Albert H. Langworthy. The new hymnals were an edition of 1925.

The death of Edwin Prentice Chapman, 90 occurred Sunday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Elbert W. Clarke in Clark's Falls. The deceased was born at Pendleton hill, September 28, 1835, the son of the late Prentice and Martha Church Chapman. He married Caroline L. Whitford in Sterling, Conn., and to them were born three children, Ernest D., Arthur E. and Addie Clara Chapman Clarke. Mr. Chapman established and for over fifty years conducted a general store in Clark's Fall, the business which he disposed of about six months ago.

Mrs. William Marr of Millinocket, Me., arrived in Westerly Friday to be the guest, for ten days, of her mother, Mrs. David F. Stillman, and her sister, Mrs. John T. Johnson of Dixon street.

Mrs. William C. Smith of New York is the guest, for several days, of relatives and friends in Westerly.

Albert P. Kenyon of Pawcatuck, following a week's vacation, has returned to his duties in a local office.

Miss Jessie Aitken of Westerly has been the guests, for several days, of relatives and friends in Boston.

William S. Nichols returned to his home in East Providence Saturday night after being the guest of his brother, Thomas P. Nichols, and sisters, in Westerly.

John C. Bentley of Plainfield, N. J., has been the guest, for several days, of relatives and friends in Westerly.

Among the Westerly people who attended the Yale-Harvard football game in Cambridge Saturday were Henry Harris, John Mooney, Dr. M. H. Scanlon and M. Walter Flynn, Jr.

On Saturday morning the New England expressed was reported over an hour late so that anxious football fans for the Harvard game in Boston expected to arrive there at a late hour. The Everglades express, which was also late and left the Westerly station on the New England express time, had two coaches added at New London to care for the local express travel to Boston.

BREAK AT TRACY STORE DURING SATURDAY NIGHT

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 22—Sometime during Saturday night burglars entered Tracy's hardware store, on the avenue of the same name. Entrance was gained by means of the basement window. Some pennies were taken from the cash draw and the big safe was opened by means of the key, which is left hanging at night on the tumbler knob.

There wasn't a copper in the safe it only contains Mr. Tracy's records and books. A check up on the merchandise had not been completed Sunday. A half-dozen breaks have been made here within a few months, but perpetrators do not seem to be looking for a big merchandise haul. For the most part thy visit the empty registers and cash draws. Thirty-eight years ago the late J. E. Leonard purchased one of the first big combination safes to be owned in the village. The safe was for the protection of his books in case of fire, and, costing several hundreds of dollars, was valuable. He adopted the custom every night of hanging the combination key on the knob, with full particulars how to operate it. There are fifty or more safes in the borough today and at night if everyone was brown and a fine tooth combed run through the remains, the burglars wouldn't get enough coin to purchase a Sunday school tract.

REPORT NEW SIDING POSSIBLE AT JEWETT CITY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 22—It is possible that some of the new railroad dope, as touching the interests of Jewett City, is to come true and even now the plans may be in process of perfection. It is rumored that the Jewett City siding may be connected where the break is, between the Fenner house and the north end of the Nimger coal shed.

This plan would necessitate another bridge over the Pachaug river parallel with the present one. These improvements would give a siding here over 3,000 feet long, then, when two sixty-car freights were on the road, and the dispatches found it expedient to cross them at Jewett City, it would be accomplished without delay, and the necessity of having to figure on Bishops, Peades or Shetucket. When these turnouts were built, if Dan Preston Sid Williams, Oat Winchester or John Cobleigh got up here with the otc Pequot or Mohegan, with thirty cars, they laid off a trip to congratulate themselves and their firemen. Today one of the big 13-hundreds will sail down the line with a train so long that the engine drives and stoker are washed up and on their way home at Midway, before the buggy passes the Submarine Base.

Sunday in the borough was like a spring day. Overcoats and heavy wraps were unnecessary with the mercury at 1 p. m., nearly up to summer heat. A local man who came down by trolley from Putnam, in the afternoon, had to report a series of unseasonable sights he noted enroute. Below Putnam a number of men were playing at golf without coats or hats. Near Dayville a man was seen husking corn in the field in his shirt sleeves. Below the Dyer dam boys were playing two-o'-cat, with one of the batsmen barefooted. Just above Wauregan seven cows, out of the lot, were taking a stroll down the trolley right of way enjoying mouthfuls of green grass nibbled here and there, as in early spring. Any person that can remember back 50 years, in this section anyway, easily recalls the skating and coasting parties of Thanksgiving day. Now it would seem more pertinent to go on a cow-slipping trip.

Charles Wojtkun, 48, died of pneumonia on Thursday at his home on Brown avenue. He leaves his wife and eight children. He had lived here for 26 years and owned the block known as the Beehive, on Brown avenue. In the solemn requiem mass at St. Mary's church, on Saturday morning, Rev. J. J. Tyler was celebrant, Rev. R. P. Morrissey deacon and Rev. J. J. McCabe, sub-deacon. The latter officiated at the burial in St. Mary's Cemetery Hourigan Bros. were in charge of the arrangements.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthu Ceurl, of Portland Me., have been guests at Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Zegeer's.

Arthur Rieux and Ernie Raney stand high in line on the Red Cross canvassing. Their territory is from the railroad crossing to Green avenue. Friday night they had collected $49.50. Alex and Andrew McNicol and Ulderic Jodoin were assigned from Palmer avenue to Hawkins Hill, Mary and Russell streets and they have sent in $41.60 Walter Hebert and William McGovern have from the railroad crossing to Trac yavenue. Only part has been covered and they have $32.25. George Wilcox and John Tracy have finished their section from Tracy avenue to Green avenue, and turned in $31. William Clark had Hill street to junction at Wilson and $25.25 was received. The latter two sections are reported finished. Eight other sections have been partly canvassed. Others will not start until tonight (Monday). Voluntown has reported 37 names.

Luckily, though the cat may have nine lives it has no biographers.

Paddy the Beaver Becomes Thoughtful

Who for the future has no thought
Some day a lesson will be taught.
—Paddy the Beaver.

Most people seem to think that the members of the Squirrel family are the most thrifty of the little people of the Green Forest. But this isn't true. There are other people quite as thrifty as Happy Jack Squirrel or any of his cousins. Probably it is because Happy Jack and Chatterer the Red Squirrel and Stripped Chipmunk are seen more often than the others that they have been so long looked upon as the thriftiest of all animals. But there is one of the little people of the Green Forest who begins to think about and plan for the future long before Happy Jack Squirrel gives so much as a thought to the matter of a winter store of food. This is Paddy the Beaver.

The members of the Squirrel family seldom think about winter supplies until acorns and nuts and seeds are ripe. Then they work hard and fast for a short time. But Paddy the Beaver has to look far ahead, and plan; often he works some time before he actually begins to harvest his food supply for the winter. You see, Paddy and his family must have enough logs in their food pile under the ice to last until the ice disappears.

Now Paddy the Beaver is wise in the ways of his kind, and way back in the summer when many of his neighbors were concerned chiefly in the care of their babies or in having a good time Paddy was thinking of the winter to come. Peter Rabbit ran across him several times up the Laughing Brook above his pond and down below his pond. Each time Paddy appeared to be thoughtful. Peter didn't notice this at first, but later he did.

"You look very thoughtful, Paddy; have you something on your mind?" Peter finally asked.

Paddy nodded slowly and gravely. "Yes, Peter, I have a great deal on my mind," said he.

"What is it?" asked Peter, filled with curiosity as usual.

"A most important matter," replied Paddy.

"You look as if it were," retorted Peter. "What is it?"

"It is the problem of making sure of enough to eat next winter," replied Paddy.

Peter laughed right out and Paddy looked most annoyed. "What is there to laugh at, Peter Rabbit?" he demanded sharply.

Peter looked a wee bit ashamed, as of course, he should have. "I beg your pardon, Paddy. I do, indeed," said he, trying to be polite. "It struck me as funny to hear any one talk of next winter when last winter is hardly forgotten. I don't believe any one else is thinking of next winter, and I don't see any reason why you should. It will be time enough to think of winter when winter is somewhere near. Now, honestly, don't you think so?"

Paddy shook his head most decidedly. "That may be all right for some folks," said he, "but not for me or mine. If we waited until then we would be likely to starve to death. We cannot afford to take any such chances as that. I know there are some people who never take thought for the morrow, but how such people get along is more than I can understand." Paddy looked very hard at Peter as he said this, but Peter only grinned. Then Paddy turned his back on Peter and walked out on his dam, where he sat for some time looking down the Laughing Brook.

"It looks as if I will have to do a little exploring," said he at last. Then he sighed.

HELPED THROUGH CHANGE OF LIFE

Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during this Critical Time

Baltimore, Md.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help me through the Change of Life and for a broken-down system. I had been complaining a long time and dragging along had tried other medicines which did not help me much. I read in the newspapers of the Vegetable Compound and after taking a bottle I felt better. I did not stop with one bottle, but took it through the whole critical time and am now practically a well woman. I have two daughters whose health was very bad before they married and I was worried about them. I got the Vegetable Compound for them and it helped them, and after they married it also helped them in bearing their babies. This is a great and good medicine for all complaints of women, and I recommend it to all."—Mrs. L. GINGRICH, 1875 N. Gilmor St., Baltimore, Maryland.

The Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine for women of middle age. Let it relieve you of nervousness, that feeling of strain and those annoying hot flashes so common at this time.

DANIELSON

SALE OF LARGE BUS LINE AFFECTS DANIELSON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, NOV. 22—The New England Transportation company, the organization that is to operate the bus lines in reality owned by the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. company, have negotiated the purchase of the Interstate line, operated out of Danielson by Herbert J. Barnett.

Mr. Barrett has been operating buses between Danielson and Providence and between Danielson and Williamantic, with Hartford connections for a long time. The lines are well established, operated as regularly as express service on a high class railroad and every day in the year on time. The business that has been developed is profitable, no doubt a factor of great importance with the negotiators for the business.

Rumors of this sale have been current here for the past ten days, but Mr. Barnett has refrained from making any statement relative to the deal, though acknowledging that conferences relative to the sale were being held.

No definite information was available here Sunday as to when the New England Transportation company is to take over the bus lines operated by Mr. Barnett, but it is believed that this is a matter of the immediate future.

It is understood that the railroad company is to take over Mr. Barnett's bus equipment, which is of high quality and has rendered splendid service. Mr. Barnett is to retain his garage business here and the automobile agencies that he has maintained for a number of years.

Operated by the New England Transportation company, the lines that Mr Barnett developed will be in effect a part of the New Haven road's transportation system. The lines run over the most direct route between Providence and Hartford and the one most favored in making the journey between the capital cities of Connecticut and Rhode Island.

Another bus line operates over the Providence-Hartford route through Danielson. There is nothing at this time to indicate that this line, having both terminals, will not continue in operation as it has for the past year or more.

It is indicated that business interests here and in neighboring towns will exert themselves especially during the next 30 days to share in as large proportion as may be possible in the plethora of money that is to be released about December 10th., in Christmas club savings. There will be nearly $120,000 of this money. Live businessmen are fully alive to the fact that they can share in the distribution of this for Christmas gifts by being prepared with new and attractive stocks and in shouting their fares from the housetops. Danielson has no great reason to fear outside competition. Its business overheads are much smaller than in the cities that attract its business from Danielson, and it can sell as cheaply as anyone. On this basis, Danielson's business interests will go after the Christmas club money it has been saved to spend. The effort will be to have much of it spent

Of interest to students of the school, members of the Alumni and friends is the announcement of the Junior class dance to be given in the assembly hall of the school on the eve of Thanksgiving. The Junior class has invited the students and alumni to attend.

For the time being there were places between Morin avenue and Elmville where the tracks of the trolley company cut across the new concrete highway. This is but a temporary arrangement. When the trolley service is abandoned in the near future these crossings will disappear. The tracks have been put across the concrete and ballasted with dirt for the time being. Just south of Elmville the tracks are now on the westerly side of the highway, just opposite to where they have been for more than 25 years.

Three meetings at the Nazarene church on Sunday brought to a close a special series of revival meetings that have been in progress daily for well over a week. Mrs. Carrie Crow Sloane has been the evangelist at these meetings, which have attracted an increased attendance.

There isn't an Indian anywhere hereabouts that was not willing to admit on Sunday that the Indian summer weather of that day was not about the best variety of Indian summer weather heard about in this section of hunting ground in the past decade. It was a marvelous day. Motor traffic just about reached mid-summer proportions during the early hours of Sunday afternoon and did not slow down until well into the evening. A temperature of 65 degrees was recorded here. Not so bad, considering the coal strike, and everything.

At the home on North Main street, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, funeral services for Mrs. Harriet Hammond Danielson, wife of Henry M. Danielson, were conducted by Rev. Rovet C. Stimpson of the Danielson Methodist church. Relatives and numbers of friends attended the service. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were William H. Putnam of Hartford, Leon Warren of New Britain, Arthur Paine of Providence and W. Irving Davis of Danielson. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Further concrete work with the building of railings and with developing the permanent surface of the new bridge across the Assawaga river at Main street will be done during the current week. The bridge will be practically completed this week and likely open for travel about mid-December. The detour now necessary is such a short one that no one has been greatly inconvenienced while the road-building program was in progress.

In observance of Thanksgiving, business and the rural free delivery service will Danielson on Thursday. It will be a full holiday for employes in manufacturing plants and in the majority of the stores in town. The postoffice will observe a holiday schedule of hours that it held for the Pilgrims, there be suspended. While Thanksgiving in Danielson for the great majority of people still retains the significance

The Civic federation has expressed its appreciation of the generous manner in which the public responded recently to its tag day appeal.

The wear and tear of the motor traffic through Main street the past few months has worn the permanent paving in some places so that there are ruts close to the trolley rails, a condition that requires care to avoid skidding.

UNCONSCIOUS WOMAN PROBABLY STRUCK BY AUTO

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 22—Mrs. Lulu Whitford, 38, colored, wife of Hezikiah Whitford of 88 Oak street, was picked up on High street, Sunday night in an unconscious condition as she lay on her back on the right side of the state highway near the junction of Pierce street about 7.35 o'clock by Dr. William C. Thompson. She was taken to the Westerly hospital by the doctor where it was found that she had a bad cut on her forehead, that her right leg was fractured and that her collar bone was broken, besides sustaining other numerous cuts and bruises. She was given medical attention by Dr. John Champlin, Jr.

Report was made to Westerly police patrolman Robert Kessell that a woman had been struck in the road and he visited the place, only to find a pool of blood in the roadway. He notified Sergeant of Police Michael Curtin, who went to the hospital and who later reported the case to Medical Examiner Dr. Michael H. Scanlon. The police are at a loss to explain just how the woman got in the highway, in that condition and think that she either jumped, fell or was pushed from a passing automobile. Report also came to the police department that she had purchased a quantity of liquor earlier in the day from a certain joint and the police are now engaged in further investigations.

Some people are so mean that they even make their attempts at politeness disagreeable.

LOUIS A. BODO RETURNS TO HOME IN PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Nov. 22—Louis A. Bodo of Putnam who has been at North Hampton with his police dog, Otto Walthous, aiding in the effort to discover Miss Corbett who has been missing for ten days from Smith college, returned home today. The dog followed the trail to the back door of the Mount Tom summer house but the caretaker said the girl had not been there. Mr. Bodo said that at one house to which the dog led the searching party it was reported that a young woman had stopped there several days ago and sold a dress and a woman's coat for which $16 had been paid, but that the searching party had been unable to determine whether the clothes belonged to Miss Corbett or not.

Henry L. Benoit who was recently admitted to Windham county bar expects to begin the practice of law in Putnam after the next session of congress is through its work. He is one of the clerks of the United States senate and he will leave for Washington in a few days. The clerical force of both houses has a week's work preparatory to the meeting of congress on Dec. 4th.

Charles Bean has been on a business trip to New York.

Mrs. Margaret O'Brien Welch, widow of Thomas Welch, died at her home on High street Thursday morning at 5.30 o'clock after a short illness. Mrs. Welch was 64 years old and had lived in Putnam for 50 years. Her husband up to the time of his death was an employe of the Putnam Woolen company. Mrs. Welch has four children, the Misses aSdie and Katherine, and Peter and John Welch, all of Putnam; also two brothers, William and James O'Brien. The funeral services were held at St. Mary's church Saturday morning at 9 o'clock and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Fred Girard of Chappell street was fined $100 and costs and given a 30 days jail sentence, which was suspended six months for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Thursday afternoon Girard's machine was in collision with another car in East Putnam.

The Putnam High school football team defeated Southbridge high Saturday afternoon, 28 to 6. Putnam now has the clean record of eight victories and no defeats. The last game of the season will be played Thanksgiving morning when Killingly high will come to Putnam.

George Harrington of Ring street who has been spending several weeks in the south has returned home.

MAN AND WOMAN HURT IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 22—Ben Kirshed of this city sustained a broken left arm when his Dodge sedan was bowled over on its side in a collision with a Buick car operated by Henry Bernard, also of this city, at the intersection of Valley and Church streets at 10 o'clock tonight. Bernard was driving north on Church and Kirshen was heading east on Valley street. Bernard was thrown on his left side. A woman passenger in the Kirshen car was badly shaken up but escaped uninjured. Both cars were considerably damaged. Officer Edward P. Leahy investigated the accident and notified both drivers to appear in police court Monday morning.

ANDOVER MAN CHARGED WITH STEALING GASOLINE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 22—John Bonkowski of Andover was arrested this evening by Deputy Sheriff Allison J. Frink on a charge of theft. The allegation is that the man has stolen large quantities of gasoline from the state highway department supply station in Andover. He will be arraigned in the town court Monday before Justice of the Peace Faulkner. Bonkowski spent some time in a Willimantic lockup after his arrest.

MYSTIC

The remains of Martin White, 89 years old, Nov. 16th were brought here from Fair Haven, Mass., Friday forenoon and taken to Elm Grove cemetery chapel. Funeral services at 1.30 p. m. were conducted by Rev. Lowry P. MacLennen, pastor of the Old Mystic Methodist church, of which Mr. White had been a member for many years, serving in offices of the church and faithful in attendance. He was the oldest member of the church. Mr. White lived in the Wolf Neck district on the old turnpike road until five and a half years ago. His wife died and he sold the farm to Frank Clyde and went to live with his sons in Fair Haven, Mass. Two sons accompanied the body here and owing to the short notice of the funeral services only a few of his friends could attend. Those present from Old Mystic besides the pastor were Harold Williams, Mrs. H. O. Williams, Mrs. W. D. Beckwith, Mrs. Joseph Desley, Miss Genevieve Frink, Miss Annie Williams and Miss Delia Williams. He is well remembered by all the older inhabitants for it was his custom after the day's work was done on the farm to drive down to the village, get his mail and stop in the post office and engage in the topics of the day.

Rev. Arthur F. Fowler, D. D., came here Saturday from Norwood, Mass., where he has been since his return from England. He is at the M. D. Stile's residence, Park Place, where he spent last winter. Sunday he preached in the Noank Baptist church at both services. Mrs. Fowler will join him today, Monday. During their stay here last winter they made many friends who are glad to have them here again.

In giving the list of officers elected at the last Mystic Grange meeting the name of Joseph D. Austin was omitted. He was elected to serve on the executive committee for three years. This is a most important office. Mr. Austin is an active member and will fill the office in a most capable manner.

Miss Harriet Park spent the week with Miss Louise Wheeler in Wolf Neck district.

This (Monday) evening Benevolence chapter, No. 21, R. A. M., designated as Stonington night. A large class of candidates, most of them living in Stonington, will receive the Royal Arch degree and members of the chapter residing in Stonington will be guests of the chapter.

Cornelius Miner of Quiambaug lost a valuable horse last week. It dropped dead while working in the field plowing.

Mrs. Charles F. Vincent of Groton was a visitor here Friday.

Mrs. Fred Wilcox of Westerly visited Mrs. John Jones Friday.

Mrs. W. S. Smith of High street was a New London visitor Friday.

Henry Chesbro, Elwood Lathrop and William Noyes were at Quonochontaug after a visit with Mrs. George Wells in Old Mystic.

Mrs. Charles H. Eccleston of Denison avenue spent Friday with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Tift of Old Mystic.

The Dinty Moore club met with Mrs. C. F. Congdon Friday afternoon. First prize was won by Mrs. Newell and second prize by Miss Chapman. Those present were Mrs. Eva Burdick, Mrs. C. C. Dodd, Mrs. Sarah Barstow, Mrs. Ruth Newell, Mrs. Elizabeth Jewell, Miss Callie Chapman, and Mrs. Frank Chesbro, substitute. Mrs. Congdon served dainty refreshments and a social time was enjoyed

PENDLETON HILL

Victor, the champion coon dog of this vicinity treed, and his owners, Birdsey G. Palmer and family, shot their first coon this season, the coon weighing 10 pounds. It is no fault of Victor that he has not treed every coon for miles around. There has been so much sickness in his owners' family that Thursday evening was Victor's first opportunity to hunt coons, although he begs hard to be allowed to go hunting every time the men of the family take a lantern.

Mrs. James H. Cook attended a coon dinner in Jewett City on Sunday.

The wild cat again! But from the stories afloat, one would judge that the animal seen hereabouts was much larger and more wild than a bob-cat. Estimates of its weight vary from 50 to 75 pounds. Dogs are afraid of it, in fact no one seems anxious to encounter the animal. Its cries are terrifying and make the nights hideous for many people.

Miss Pearl Bennett has been the guest of her sisters in Providence for the past two weeks.

Miss Carrie Ryder is suffering from an attack of grip as are others in this place.

Mrs. Charles H. Cottrell is the guest of Miss Bertha Lewis of Voluntown this week.

Mrs. Martin O. Chapman and daughter, Alice, are spending some time with Mrs. Chapman's sister, Mrs. William Hiscox of Jewett City.

Mr. and Mrs. George Palmer and son, Marvin, the Misses Kitte and Cecile Palmer, Masters George Malcom and Charles Cottrell, Mrs. Henry Johnson, and daughter, Mildred and Mrs. Sarah Ryder Brown were dinner guests at the Palmer homestead last week. Other guests were detained on account of grip.

It is reported that Delanois Rood and family are soon to move to Glasgo, where Mr. Rood and his father Charles H. Rood are employed at the finishing mills.

Richard Ray Palmer is reported as quite a bit improved.

J. G. Palmer's sow took her family of nine to the forest, a mile or more from home. Madam returned after six weeks with her entire family, each weighing fifty or more pounds. It would appear that this mother knew that acorns and other nuts were the best food for young pigs.

The chicken pie supper this week at the parsonage, for the benefit of the church promises to be a great success.

Miss Sarah D. Palmer and Mrs. Harris Boardman will give their Thanksgiving party at that time.

George Palmer and Benjamin Gallup have been working the Voluntown roads preparatory for winter traffic. The Voluntown lived almost divides our parish into two equal parts.

NORWICH TOWN

There was a representation of 90 or more girls from the several Congregational church of Norwich, New London, Stonington, Colchester, Hanover and Taftville, in attendance at the Young Woman's rally of the Eastern Connecticut branch of the Woman's board of missions, held Friday evening in the chapel of the First Congregation church, Norwich Town. Prior to the evening's programme which included two intensely interesting addresses, the company of girls assembled for a picnic supper, each one bringing their own repast.

The hostess of the entertaining church comprising the members of the missionary and social communities of the Young Peoples Christian Endeavor society, served delicious cocoa. Greens, and autumn berries, formed the decorations on the several tables which had been set for the occasion. The chapel was trimmed with flags of all countries. The roll call was responded to with cheers or songs, by the groups of girls from the several churches. A song of welcome was given by the Norwich Town girls, and the visiting girls answered with a "Thank You," song.

The inspirational singing of "America The Beautiful," was followed by the opening address by Miss Miriam Woodbury, of New York, who spoke interestingly on Home Missionary work. Miss Woodbury is field secretary of the Congregational Home Missionary society.

The work in foreign countries was portrayed by a stirring address on Foreign Missions, by Miss Helen Frances Smith, who is connected with the woman's board of foreign missions in Boston. Mention was made of the special workers overseas who are maintained by the girls. The song, "Follow The Gleam," was sung by those present, as a pledge of acceptance of the challenge given by the speakers.

Miss Abby Willard of Colchester, president of the Eastern Connecticut branch, led in prayer, which concluded the very interesting meeting.

At the Norwich Town church, Miss Jessie E. Hyde is chairman of the missionary committee, and Miss Esther Durr, is chairman of the social committee. During their stay in Norwich, Miss Smith was a guest of the Misses Lucas of Sachem street; while Miss Woodbury was entertained at the home of Miss Ella Norton, 138 Washington street.

George Kinney of Roosevelt avenue, returned Saturday evening from seven days' business trip to Millers Falls, Turners Falls and Greenfield, Mass.

NEW CRISIS IN TACNA-ARICA PLEBISCITARY SITUATION

ARICA, Chile, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Another crisis has been reached in the Tacna-Arica plebiscitary situation. The Chileans assert that it is impossible for them to proceed in the work of the commission until an election law is approved and emphatically declare their intention to abstain until their demand is met.

Agustin Edwards, head of the Chilean delegation, on instructions from his government withdrew yesterday from participation in the commission's work. He presented a note to General Pershing head of the commission, phrased in vigorous terms, declaring that the government had instructed the delegates to abstain "from all proceedings of the commission, or subsidiary bodies, unless the proceedings related strictly and directly to regulations for registration and voting, which constitutes a fundamental precept of the award and the first duty of the commission itself."

Senor Edwards asks General Pershing to include in the agenda of the next meeting a resolution in which the election law committee is ordered to issue a report not later than December 10, to be approved by the commission not later than December 15, registration to begin not later than December 20 and close January 10, so that the plebiscite might be held February 1.

FOUND COTTAGES FILLED WITH CONTRABAND LIQUOR

EAST BREWSTER, Mass., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Two officers of the state police found two cottages filled with contraband liquor at Ellis Landing here today, arrested eleven men and seized 800 cases of whiskey. Two men escaped. Two rifles and a shotgun were found in a third cottage, where the arrests were made, and two automobiles and a dory were also confiscated.

Shortly after the raid, word came that the Sandwich coast guard had found an abandoned 40-foot motor boat, the C-5993, at anchor half a mile from Ellis Landing with 200 cases of champagne and whiskey, valued at $25,000 aboard.

TO COPE WITH SPREAD OF BANDITRY IN MOROCCO

TETUAN, Spanish Morocco, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Banditry is spreading in Morocco quite in contrast to the rebellion, which for the present at least, is on the wane.

Spanish officers are of the opinion that this new menace is due to the fact that the bandits probably are cast offs from Abd-El-Krim's army and have been driving by hunger to attack the tribal villages in the Spanish zone. Measures have been taken to cope with the situation.

CONNECTICUT TROLLEYS

There is reason for general satisfaction in the decision of Judge Winslow of the federal court in ordering the return of the trolley lines owned by the New Haven road through the Connecticut company to the New Haven's control. It is a matter of eleven years since they were placed in the hands of trustees named by the court for the purpose of disposing of these holdings in order that the railroad should be divested of its electric lines. These trustees have been drawing $25,000 a year but they have not been able to find a purchaser. It would have been impossible for them to have sold the lines without doing so at an unwarranted sacrifice. That the lines should be returned to the owners has been generally conceded for a long time. Such action has been recommended by the legislature and now the railroad is once more to get possession of what it bought for a large sum, even ah it did its water transportation lines after a period of litigation.

In rendering his decision Judge Winslow referred to the fact that transportation conditions have changed. There was the time when there was a demand for the breaking up of such a system because it was regarded as against the law and detrimental. Today the effort is directed toward forcing the railroad combinations.

In the changed conditions, however, it is to be realized that the New Haven road will get possession of its electric lines again only when trolley lines are fast giving way to bus lines. In the decade big changes have been made. Hundreds of miles of trolley road have been abandoned while conditions have forced many into a sad state of repair and a decided change in equipment.

But with conditions regarding the lines what they were there was little else to be expected. The trolleys still have a most important place in city transportation and a company that has something to look forward to in the business field is bound to be much more of a transportation asset than one which is being faced by the possibility of being sold out. The return of the lines to the New Haven road accords with Connecticut sentiment.

FOLEY GUILTLESS

It is easy at times to make a mountain out of a molehill if the maker is permitted to construct his own story of the transformation. It is likewise easy to make charges which indicate a serious condition if there is no further effort to get at the facts.

In connection with the Shenandoah investigation it has been evident that there was a determined effort to get away from the facts as they existed. There was a disposition to create a wrong impression in the first place concerning the position which the dead commander had taken regarding the flight on which the big airship was wrecked. Then came the statements by the widow of the deceased and the disposition to attach greater importance to her comments than to the facts which existed or to the conditions which prevailed and were accepted. This concluded with the bringing of charges against the judge advocate of the inquiry, the claim being that Captain Paul Foley tried to get Mrs. Lansdowne to change her testimony.

Naturally such a charge was expected to hurt, but whether it did or not it was bound to be brought out into the open. That airing has been had and the result is that the court of inquiry has completely exonerated Captain Foley. Not only is it found that he is not guilty of seeking and endeavoring by improper means to influence a witness about to testify before the court, but it is maintained that what he was charged with doing was "an obligation imposed by lawful regulations upon the said Captain Foley as judge advocate to make a preliminary examination of witnesses" and that he "has in no wise been guilty of improper or unethical conduct as such judge advocate."

Thus is the mountain reduced to nothingness from which it was constructed seemingly for the purpose of creating an entirely wrong impression concerning the whole inquiry. It was naturally a charge that could not be ignored but when delved into it fell of its own weight. The result carries its reflection only on those who made the charges.

SYSTEMATIC SAVING

Even as "great oaks from little acorns grow", the Christmas club idea for encouraging savings has grown from slender beginnings to great proportions. It is not only providing millions for use at the holiday season but it has fostered a vast amount of thought upon the importance of systematic saving with results far greater than can be measured by the participation in the actual clubs.

It was 15 years ago that the idea of saving a certain amount weekly to be turned over just before Christmas was advanced. Its merits were recognized not only by individuals but by banks. The result has been that it has experienced steady growth until it is estimated that there will be a distribution of more than $314,000,000 among about 7,000,000 next month and that more than 6,800 banks are acting as depositories for this large sum. This will represent an increase of about $70,000,000 over the previous year and mean that the members will receive on an average $44.82.

But how strong an impression the Christmas saving plan has made is to be gained from the fact that though there is nearly a third of a billion to be distributed next month it is not likely that all will be spent for Christmas presents. It has been found that the idea has been adopted with other objects in mind. This means not only the approval but the adoption of the systematic saving idea. Hundreds of thousands have found that if they can save for Christmas they can save for other things, a bank account, insurance or the much talked of rainy day. They not only can but they have been inspired to do it so that what was undertaken with Christmas in mind has developed in many directions. No better endorsement of it could be desired than the large participation.

Systematic saving is something which every individual should undertake if they have difficulty in reaching the same goal by other means. The Christmas saving club has been a capital vehicle for carrying this fact home to the people who were in need of it.

RELIEF FOR NEW ENGLAND

In protest against the rates asked for on bituminous coal for New England from the West Virginia mines, Chairman Ainey of the public service commission of Pennsylvania appeared before the interstate commerce commission and maintained that such rates would be unsound, unjust, unreasonable and unfair to the coal producers of Pennsylvania.

That such should be the sentiment of Pennsylvania can be readily understood. That state has a monopoly on anthracite and if New England adopts soft coal instead of anthracite it is going to mean that many will never use anything else and that would be a serious blow to the Keystone state. Also when coal consumers buy their product from another state it means that the tax which Pennsylvania imposes upon all coal mined is not going to be obtained and Pennsylvania has depended upon this tax for providing what would otherwise be paid by its people in taxes. Pennsylvania not only sees an impending blow against one of its big industries but a reduction in revenue. Pennsylvania is directly concerned because Pennsylvania is hit.

But what would work to the advantage and relief of the people of New England cannot be regarded as unsound, unjust, unreasonable or unfair just because it happens to change the coal market from Pennsylvania to some other state, especially when there has always existed such a monopoly that the consumer had no alternative but to submit when faced with a coal shortage.

Let Pennsylvania fuss and fume because it fears its hold on the New England coal consuming public may be broken, but by all means let there be some consideration for the fuel user and see that he gets relief in the case of a fuel emergency. Pennsylvania needs the awakening it is getting through the resort to substitute fuels.

HELP THE FIREMEN

In these days of increased traffic the difficulties of drivers of fire apparatus are greatly increased. A prompt response is of much importance when calls to fight fire are given. Under such circumstances the right of way belongs to the fire fighters. It is only what it should be and those who are required to yield should do so willingly.

A bit of cooperation when the fire apparatus siren is heard is all that is required, but it is not always given. Probably Washington is not the only city where this failure exists but there the chief of police has given warning that unless better cooperation is shown drastic action will be taken.

That certainly is fair warning and should be heeded. All that is required is to pull the car into the curb at the sound of the siren and wait until the apparatus has passed. It requires but a brief stop and it may be the means of saving lives and much property. What is amiss at is to avoid hampering the fire fighters, and that is excellent advice whether it involves their response to the alarms or the blocking of the way about the scene of the fire. Fire apparatus and fire fighters should be given every assistance possible through cooperation. Help them by keeping out of the way.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Oatmeal will remove lamp smoke stains from a wall.

Beef neck is juicy, well flavored and cheap, and it makes good pot roast and excellent stews and soups.

When beating chairs and sofas cover with a damp cloth and the dust will adher to the cloth and not rise in the room.

Arrange corned beef hash in mounds with slight hollows in the centers, and into each cavity drop an egg. Place under broiler until the eggs have set.

A little cornstarch added to the salt in the saltcellar, will prevent hardening. Proportions are half a teaspoon of cornstach to two tablespoons of salt.

Make a funnel out of a piece of wrapping paper for pouring sugar, tea, coffee and cereals into their proper receptacles. These funnels prevent waste.

To prevent the formation of a hard crust on top of bread brush it over with butter or oleomargarine as soon as you remove it from the oven.

A charming gift for the October bride consists of a center compote, two smaller ones for the ends of the table and four candlesticks of amber glass trimmed with black.

Dry your orange peels and grind them to a coarse powder. This can be used to flavor cakes, sauces, puddings, etc. Lemon peels may be used the same way.

Buy grapefruit and oranges according to their weight, the heavier the better. Avoid thick skins as this usually indicates that the fruit is dry and pulpy.

To mend a hole in graniteware or tin pans mix putty with linseed oil until soft and apply it on the outside of the hole.

Vinegar will remove the disagreeable odor of paraffin from earthen and tinware. Dip a rag into the vinegar and scour the vessel with it.

MOUSE TRAPS

Mice are canny things and unless the trap is clean they will avoid it. After a mouse has been caught in the trap, the trap should be thoroughly scalded and aired. Then all scent will be gone except the smell of the bait. Incidentally, try using a piece of bacon for bait instead of the usual cheese and see if you do not have better success.

DISGUISED RADIATOR

The problem of the unsightly radiator may be solved by covering it, top and front side, with an Indian print, preferably one whose design is copied from an oriental rug. A Florentine composition head placed on the top of the radiator completes the transformation.

REMOVES BROWN STAINS

A solution of borax and water, pretty strong, will remove brown stains from baking dishes. Let stand in the solution over night.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Juice sucked from a lemon will dissolve a fish bone if you are unfortunate enough to swallow one.

It is wisdom to train babies when they are very young to sleep and rest for some period during the day. A nap in the morning and another in the afternoon, with an early bedtime as well, is what little folk need to keep them healthy and well.

To remove the blackheads steam the skin lightly by holding on it a facecloth wrung out with hot water. Apply a lather of pure soap and allow it to remain on for a few minutes or until it begins to dry; then wash off well. Gently press out the blackheads, using a soft cloth over your fingers to prevent breaking the skin. Lastly, rinse the skin in cool, then cold water.

While baths, properly given, are luxurious and leave a patient highly comfortable it is not for this purpose alone that they are given. They soothe and often induce sleep. They cleanse the skin and stimulate its action. They safeguard the body against further trouble by aiding elimination.

RICH IN VITAMINS

The tomato is one of the most important vitamin foods known to man. Catchup and other tomato products offer a mighty pleasant way to get the vital vitamine which your system absolutely must have. Meat is short in this vital spark. So when you use catchup or chili sauce at the table you not only contribute greatly to the enjoyment of the meal, but you add an element of prime necessity to health.

WONT GET MOLDY

If a bottle of olives once opened is not used immediately two or three tablespoons of olive oil added to the liquor in the bottle will help preserve them and prevent mold. The air cannot penetrate the little layer of oil and the flavor of the olives is thus preserved.

LININGS ARE MORE QUIET

Linings are much quieter again this winter. The better the coat the plainer the lining, generally of chiffon velvet, moire or embroidered ninon. In self color, a shade or two darker than the fur. The gorgeous brocades and violently patterned silks are relegated entirely to the evening wraps and cloth coats.

POLISHED TABLES

The way to remove hot-water marks on polished table tops or papier mache trays is to treat them with a paste made of olive oil and salt. The paste should be left on for half an hour and then rubbed away with a cloth. If the first application does not succeed, repeat the process, which rarely fails to give good results.

THE PART TO SAVE

When cutting a large onion with the intention of using just part of it, cut it so the remaining piece contains the root. Then the onion will not dry out so soon.

SMALL, BUT IMPORTANT

When buying a shopping bag or pocketbook, see that it has a small pocket or compartment to hold change, coins and tokens. It certainly saves time and irritation to be able to locate these small articles quickly.

DICTATES OF FASHION

One of the newer shawls is fashioned of a soft wool crepe and hand embroidered in colors.

Lovely new bags are of needlepoint embroidery, exquisitely fine and are mounted upon metal tops.

The new hats reveal the increasing vogue of small tailored shapes of velour in the rich autumnal colors that are flattering.

Tiny sweaters or jumpers for the small boy or girl are handknitted. They have an amusing border of ducks or rabbits in white wool.

A tiny little parasol that looks like a top reveals itself upon close inspection to be a figured silk handkerchief twisted about a small handle.

Whether you roll 'em or not, you must have some sort of fancy buckle on your garters, to be smart. Among the newest ones are initials of rhinestones.

A shawl of white crepe de chine has a very long fringe of white silk that shades into violet. Bunches of flowers are embroidered over the surface in heavy wools.

Very new and smart are two-piece dresses with the top of cashmere and the circular skirt of velveteen. A band of velveteen finishes the V neck and the cuffs.

To tuck away in the coat pocket, there is a small handkerchief of brilliant crepe de chine edged with ribbon and further ornamented with a little flower and bud of the same ribbon.

Artificial flowers are worn very large. Huge chrysanthemums the size of cabbage, or huge dahlias pinned to the shoulder, just a bit back off the shoulder. These always match the dress.

For formal afternoon wear, the cape is likely to be of lighter fabric, to match the frock. Already for evening the velvet or metal brocade cape is widely accepted, whether as part of an ensemble or as a separate wrap.

APRON FRONT

Slim frocks showing the straight silhouette are, in the majority of cases, treated with a pleated apron effect at the front, which ties at the back with string belts of the same material. Floral-patterned materials are particularly sponsored in this respect. Organdie collars and cuffs, with narrow floating panels, from the shoulder at the back, are very popular.

SCARFS ARE POPULAR

An ideal drapery for the neck and shoulders is to be had in the long stole-like scarfs of malines, which are exceedingly popular. Gold and silver are colors for evening wear embellished with fine traceries of self-color. Ombre effects and solid colors of bright tints are worn with the gay prints and pastel shades.

JADE POPULARITY GROWS

Jade is apparently more popular than ever before and is successfully combined with other materials, with crystal, amethyst or rose quartz, often the jade being exquisitively carved. Sapphires and emeralds alternate in a necklace of platinum links, from which hangs a sorrecous double pendant, one part a sapphire and the other an emerald carved in an exquisite East Indian design.

SEWING HINTS

Use a chair with a high seat when stitching on the machine. You will find it is much less fatiguing than one with a lower seat.

A new spool of cotton will often tangle when used on the sewing machine. Cut a piece of cloth larger than the spool, and put on the post under the spool. It will keep it steady.

To tuck away in the corner of a trunk or bureau drawer are puffy little leather bags that hold all the necessary sewing materials for mending.

Try doubling the cotton when threading the needle for button sewing and afterwards making four threads in all. It means just half the stitches necessary to sew on the buttons and a large-eyed needle will easily take the two strands together.

POINT IN SEWING

If you've ever seen French girls at work, sewing, you've noticed them gathered around a table, according to a recent number of Vogue. The material is supported; it can't slide or stretch. But the average women sews sitting in a chair. She should do her pinning, at least, and preferably her basting, at the point where she does her cutting out. Use plenty of pins. If one of the edges is a bias baste at once and in small stitches to prevent stretching. This is one of the chief causes of "that home-made look."

ENTER SHAWLS

There is no immigration quota law in effect when it comes to shawls. Their ability to enter and engage upon successful and popular American careers does not depend on whether they come from Spain, Italy, Japan or Chine. The general rule laid down, however, for the evening shawls now so decidedly popular is that they be of white crepe de chine at least 54 inches wide, heavily and elaborately embroidered in flower designs of brilliant coloring and possess handknotted fringe 18 to 36 inches in depth.

ECONOMY IN THE SMALLER ONES

When selecting cretonnes for covers or draperies, bear in mind that small allover patterns are much more easily matched and are therefore not wasteful in the cutting. Large vases, birds, etc., must be joined accurately to be effective.

EARRINGS LARGER

Earrings are longer and larger than ever, if possible. The latest almost touch the shoulder. Exceptionally beautiful things are among the late exhibitions in the jewelry and specialty shops. In one pair a ring of white jade hangs from a string of brilliants and onyx. Topas and brilliants are linked in another charming example. Onyx and crystal is an ever-favorite combination, particularly with women who frequently wear black and white.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Only two women in France hold air pilot's licenses.

Cuba now has a woman judge—Senorita Teresa Ruiz Rojas.

Oklahoma's women are not entitled to hold major state offices.

Women are now fighting on both sides in the Moroccan war.

Women cigar makers in this country number close to 50,000.

Of the 124 members of the London City Council, 21 are women.

More than 50 cities in the United States now have policewomen.

Germany's only female fire fighting body sports a green uniform and high heels.

Collecting bacteria at various altitudes up to 3,000 feet was accomplished recently at East Boston Airport, Mass., by Miss Gertrude Rogers, of Quincy, Mass.

UNUSUAL CURTAIN MATERIALS

New versions of the old-fashioned madras curtains have been designed by one of the most notable fabric creators in France and, in patterns, reproduce the old-time effect of exquisite needlework.

A PRACTICAL APRON

There is a certain smartness about the new aprons which are always stamped for embroidery and show a new feature in the padded holder or pan-cushion which buttons on over one pocket.

RECIPES

Sweet Pancakes: One pint milk, two teaspoons powdered sugar, one cup of flour containing baking powder to make thin batter, four eggs, two tablespoons of melted butter. Beat whites and yokes separately. Stir butter, sugar and one cup of flour, containing baking powder, into yolks, then add milk and whites of eggs. If needed, more flour. Bake in small cakes, butter each and pile with any kind of sweet jelly between powdered sugar on top.

Banana Fritters: Three bananas, one cup flour, one and a half teaspoons baking powder, two tablespoons sugar, quarter teaspoon salt, one-third cup milk, one teaspoon lemon juice, one egg. Mash the bananas fine, mix the flour and seasoning, combine with the bananas, alternating with milk; add lemon juice and lastly the egg beaten light. Drop by spoonfuls into deep fat and fry. Drain on paper and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Stories That Recall Others

Changed His Mind?

The minister was asking a group of children what they intended to be when they "grew up." One little girl answered, "I always wanted to be a farmer's wife." Then came the boys' turn. All but one little fellow has set forth their desires. Turning to him the preacher said:

"And what do you intend to be, my boy?" Rather reluctantly came the answer.

"Well, I had meant to be a farmer."

Had to Rely On Mother

When mother refused to stop dinner preparations to sew a button on sonny's new suit that he might hurry to keep a "date", sonny with dignity such as only one of "17" can muster called for needle and thread and said that he would take care of it himself.

"There is the black thread and a needle on the buffet," said his mother.

Beginning bravely he broke off the thread and thrust it at the needle remembering no doubt the manner in which he had seen his mother go at the job. But this needle and thread behaved queerly. The thread did not go where he sent it. And his dignity crumpled before 15 minutes of unrewarded effort, and he was back in the kitchen inquiring:

"Say, haven't you any bigger needles than this in the house?"

Mother came to the rescue as mothers always do and new respect for a homely task was written all over sonny's countenance as he watched the deftness with which in other hands more skilled than his, the contrary thread went through the diminutive eye of the needle.

From Small Beginnings

Maxim Gorky, the Great Russian Novelist

If anyone is discouraged in trying to make life into a success he should remember Maxim Gorky, the great Russian novelist. Gorky's life reads more like a novel than do many of the books that pass as novels. Name almost any occupation and you will find that Gorky at some time in his life worked in it, struggling to keep from starving.

His father and mother died while he was still a child and so he very early came into the struggle of life. He was badly handicapped at the start, for he was born with an unpronounceable name in an unpronounceable place. "Who are you? Where were you born?" you might ask him. "I am Alexei Maximovitch Pyeshkov, and I was born in Nizhni-Novgorod."

Like Mark Twain, he has made his pseudonym his better known name.

His first job, at 9 years of age, was to help take care and to help sell big Russian boots. He has served as a gardener, and at different times as cook, and as baker. He has been a peddler, a wandering laborer working at odd jobs of every sort, a sort of surveyor, a lonzshoreman, member of a steamboat's crew, and, in fact, almost anything where willing hands and hard work were needed. He learned to the full what mistery, want, hunger, anxiety, backache and weariness are. He earned from hard, first-hand experience what sort of people make up the great fate-tossed masses. All this he wrote in his books, with the accuracy of a camera making photographs of life. If the books have unpleasant passages, passages that are raw and bleeding, it is because life has such passages. When you read Gorky's books you live in the rough with "the great unwashed," and you see in the hearts of common people the sympathy and the ferocity that Gorky saw. You learn to sympathize with them in their bitterness and rebellion.

Gorky became a writer because, in his flitting from work to work, he became secretary to a lawyer who liked him and helped him kindly. That kindness turned Gorky from a practical tramp into one of the world's leading writers. All that he has done to reach success has been to try to tell the truth about life. For him writing a novel is not the telling of a gilded lie but the presentation of stark and bleeding truth.

Pupils Proletarians

In Moscow's public schools at least 80 per cent of the pupils are children of the proletariat. Boys and girls in the young communist party, the preparatory course for membership in the adult communist party, number 50 per cent of the pupils. Children of peasants and workmen are between 40 and 60 per cent of the total and those of employes or members of permissible professions are between 20 and 40 per cent. The others are children of employers or well-to-do persons.

WEDDINGS.

Beany-Day

Saturday morning at 10 o'clock in St. Andrew's church, New York city, Rev. Cashin united in marriage Donald C. Beany of 29 Linden street, New London, and Miss Irene Day of 268 Franklin street, this city. Only members of the immediate families were present. The groom is employed by the Standard Oil Co., in New London and the bride has been a stenographer at the J. B. Martin Co., office. They are to reside in New London.

Ralph-Hutton

Miss Hilda Acel Hutton of Old Mystic and Lowell Frances Ralph of 17 Ashley street, Mystic, were married at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, at the Mystic Congregational parsonage by the Rev. F. G. Chutter. The attendants were the bride's sister, Miss Betty Hutton, of Smith's Falls, Ont., and Ernest Stenhouse of Westerly, R. I.

The bride wore a gown of emerald green brocaded chiffon trimmed with gold ornaments and hat to match with gold trimming. The maid of honor wore a blue brocaded chiffon dress with silver ornaments and silver metallic hat. After the ceremony a wedding dinner was held at the Mohican hotel in New London. Mrs. Ralph is a graduate of the Memorial hospital training school and has been public health nurse of Mystic for the past four years. Mr. Ralph is a graduate of the Wentworth institute of Boston. Later in the day Mr. and Mrs. Ralph left on an extended wedding trip through Maine and Canada.

Olson-Scofield

Charles M. Olson of No. 94 Laurel Hill avenue, proprietor of the Dolco garage, and Miss Florine Letitia Scofield of No. 33 Center street were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Clark, No. 33 Center street. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church. Mrs. Walter M. Buckingham was the matron of honor and the best man was Walter M. Buckingham.

As the bridal party entered the parlor Mrs. William S. Elliott played the bridal chorus from Lohengrin and after the ceremony Mrs. Elliott played Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The bride was very charmingly gowned in white moire with chantilly lace with pearls and a court train. Her tulle veil was caught with chantilly coronet and pearls, and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Buckingham wore a gown of yellow and white crepe and carried yellow chrysanthemums. The home was attractively decorated by Geduldig.

The bride received many handsome wedding gifts. Only members of the two families and a few intimate friends were present at the wedding.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Olson left for an automobile trip of a week and on their return will reside in a newly furnished home at No. 17 Ann street. They will be at home after January 1st.

The bride is the daughter of Frank L. Schofield of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., is a graduate of the Norwich Free academy and the Chautauqua School of Physical Education. She has been an instructor in physical culture at the Norwich Free Academy for several years and will continue teaching at the academy this year.

Mr. Olson is the son of Mrs. Josephine Olson and is manager of the Dolco garage in Thamesville. He served with the United States forces during the World war. Both Mr. and Mrs. Olson are popular with their many friends who extend them best wishes for a happy married life.

Copp-Tirrell

At 6 o'clock Saturday evening, Webster Duane Copp, of No. 24 Slater avenue, and Miss Mary Agnes Tirrell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Tirrell, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, No. 297 Broadway. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Samuel H. Howe, D. D., pastor of Park Congregational church. The house was beautifully decorated by Hawkins, the color scheme being yellow and blue.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Helen B. Tirrell, as maid of honor and by Mrs. Mortimer T. Farley, of Weston, Mass., as matron of honor. The best man was Fred Copp, a brother of the groom. The bride was beautifully gowned in white crepe back satin, her gown trimmed with orange blossoms, and wore a veil of tulle with grape blossoms and rose point lace. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor and matron of honor were gowned in yellow chiffon, trimmed with silver and carried Ophelia roses. Mrs. Tirrell wore platinum gray satin trimmed with fur.

A ribbon aisle for the wedding party was formed by Misses Marion Bailey, Eleanor P. Norton, of this city, Katherine Cosgrove, of Marlboro, Mass., Lucy Morgan, of West Roxbury, Mass., Mary Lowe of Fitchburg, Mass., Elisabeth Sevin, Mrs. Beatrice E. Peterson, of this city, and Mrs. Stanley J. Sullivan, of Willimantic. The bridal chorus from Lohengrin was played by Miss Annie L. Taft.

Following the ceremony there was a reception with refreshments, Mrs. Berkoff catering. The bride received many beautiful wedding gifts including silver, furniture, china and cut glass. On their return from their wedding trip the bride and groom will reside in a newly furnished apartment at No. 221 Broadway.

The bride is well known and popular with her many friends. She is a graduate of the Norwich Free academy and of Simmons college. She has been employed at the Chelsea Savings bank. Mr. Copp is a graduate of the New Haven High school and holds a position of state bank examiner. He is a World war veteran. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Copp extend them hearty good wishes for a happy and prosperous future.

Surprised On Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Deschamps, of Norwich avenue, Taftville, were completely surprised Saturday evening when neighbors and friends called to celebrate their 20th wedding anniversary. Singing and dancing passed the evening pleasantly and lunch was served. A beautiful dinner set was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Deschamps.

ONE KILLED, FOUR INJURED WHEN AUTO ROLLS OVER AT QUAKER HILL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON Nov. 23—Ray Nelson, about 32, married, of Uncasville, was almost instantly killed; Arthur E. Dunnmire, married, of 311 Williams street, this city and James Elwood, 16 Walker street, this city, are patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, the former seriously injured, and Nelson's twin brother, Roy Nelson, Uncasville, and Floyd Freer, Waterford, sustained slight injuries, as results of Dunnmire's automobile overturning at Quaker Hill on the Norwich-New London highway, late this afternoon.

Dunnmire, suffered a possible fracture of the pelvic bone and a possible fractured spine. Elwood received severe abrasions and contusions to his arms and legs, while the dead man's twin brother and Freer suffered bruises and contusions. They were taken to their respective homes.

The automobile, a Studebaker touring car, driven by Dunnmire, with Freer occupying the front seat with the driver, had, it is understood, been to a place in Montville, where liquor was procured. About 4 o'clock the car was started for New London and Dunnmire evidently decided to speed the machine for it was observed travelling over the macadam highway at an excessive rate of speed. As Quaker Hill was reached the machine was going from one side of the highway to the other, and finally when near a point where the trolley road enters the main highway Dunnmire apparently lost control of the car, for it skidded badly and then overturned, rolling over three times.

Dunnmire was caught between the steering rod and seat and was terribly crushed, while Ray Nelson, occupant of the rear seat with his brother, and Freer, was caught in such a manner as to cause his head to be crushed. Ray was dead when the machine finally stopped rolling in a ditch and passing autoists went to the rescue of the victims. Nelson's body was removed to an undertaking establishment after Dr. M. E. Fox, medical examiner of Montville, and Dr. J. J Donohue, Montville, had arrived to administer to the injured.

Dunnmire and Elwood were stretched out on a nearby veranda and were given medical treatment while awaiting for the ambulance to respond to a hurry call. Dunnmire was unconscious and did not regain consciousness until on his way to the New London institution.

The automobile was a complete wreck as a result of the trio of catapultings.

Following the accident State Police Officer Bernard Kenerson, Groton barracks, arrived on the scene and after conducting an investigation he issued orders calling for Dunnmire to be detained at the hospital, provided he survives, and when his condition permits he will be arrested and arraigned in court on a technical charge of manslaughter.

Evidence of some of the occupants of the automobile being in possession of wine was revealed with the finding of one or more bottles of liquor.

Dunnmire has before been involved in automobile accidents.

The Nelson brothers married sisters, Mary and Clara daughters of John Clark, Montville, two years ago.

PLUNGES OVER BANK ON JEWETT CITY ROAD

After a collision on the Jewett City road Sunday night about 8 o'clock a Dodge truck belonging to Schwartz Bros., Inc. of this city, and driven by Leo Buszynski, an employe, plunged down a steep 40 foot bank towards the railroad track above the "tunnel," but came to a stop 30 feet down the bank before it landed on the Norwich & Worcester railroad track.

The truck stayed upright and apparently slid down the bank sideways till its right rear wheel was buried to the hub in the soft dirt and the left front wheel, which was minus the tire, also held in the soft dirt.

The driver was arrested by Constable Joubert of Lisbon on the charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. He was brought to Norwich police headquarters where he was held until a member of the Schwartz firm gave bail for him. Buszynski had a gash in his forehead which was treated by Dr. L. I. Pratte of Taftville before he was brought to the police station.

Before going over the bank the truck was in collision with a Ford coupe driven by John F. Houlihan of Killingly, who was headed for home. The Schwartz truck was coming in the opposite direction, but when it hooked into the coupe, it swung around and crashed through the highway fence before it made its plunge down the bank. A woman in the Houlihan machine was injured and was treated by a physician.

Because of the position of the truck at the foot of the bank where it threatened to fall over on the railroad track, word was sent to the road officials and an employe was sent there to warn trains and trolley cars that were to run past this point. But the truck was too firmly planted in the dirt to make it likely that it would topple over onto the railroad tracks.

OBITUARY

Mrs. C. H. W. Foster.

New Bedford, Mass., papers state that Mr. and Mrs. Carl O. Foster (Betty Howland) have been called to Charles River Village by the death of Mr. Foster's mother, Mrs. C. H. W. Foster. Mrs. Foster was a very prominent socially and the news of her death caused great sorrow.

There is Norwich interest in the announcement, as her daughter-in-law is a native of Norwich. The second little daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. Carl Foster was named Mabel, for Mr. Foster's mother.

Fr. Fox Gave Mission Here

Rev. Matthew Fox, 56, the Franciscan missionary preacher whose death in New York was announced on the telegraph page of The Bulletin Saturday, was one of three Franciscans who gave a mission in St. Patrick's church Norwich, about 1918, during the pastorate of the late Rev. John H. Broderick. He is well remembered in Norwich as a preacher, noted for his persuasive eloquence in winning sinners back to the fold.

Father Fox had a sister who was a nun in his native country, which according to the dispatch was England.

Will Pay Doctor's Bill

In a workmen's compensation finding in the claim of Domenico Brogno, of 172 North Main street, an employe of the Norwich gas and electric department, who had an infected index finger on July 27, Commissioner J. J. Donohue has made the award that the doctor's bill of $10 should be paid by the respondent-insurer. There was no claim for disability.

Gave 900 Souvenirs First Day

Visitors from Norwich and vicinity continue to inspect the handsome new store of the Gilbert Furniture Co., in the former F. M. C. A. building. For the opening day, Walter E. Gilbert had prepared 900 souvenirs, expecting the supply to last for at least half the week. They were gone at the end of the first day.

Wood Cutting Case Tried

Judge C. B. Waller in the common pleas court here Saturday morning took the papers after hearing the trial of the suit of Michael Lubchen vs. Arthur Lucy, in which the plaintiff sues for $250, which he claims as the value of lumber cut from his place.

Attorney Telley E. Babcock appeared for the plaintiff and V. P. A Quinn for the defendant.

$1 Silk Hose for 7 Cents

The manager of the Model Booterie, Main St., Norwich, was more than pleased Saturday with the success of his special sale of the previous day, which was widely advertised. One feature—a 13-minute sale of $1 silk hose for seven cents, drew a great crowd. Fifty pairs of hose allotted to this special sale went like hot cakes.

Thanksgiving Sugar

This is the day when the sugar to be distributed to needy families will be apportioned by the Norwich United Workers. Last year 100 lbs. of sugar was put into one-pound bags by the helpers at 9 Washington street.

Otis Library Reading Room

The reading room of the Otis library was in charge of Miss Sadie J. Dawson, Sunday afternoon. There were 105 visitors.

JUNIOR CATH. COUNCIL VISITS ALMSHOUSE

Much praise was given the Junior Council of Catholic Girls for the splendid manner in which they entertained the household at Norwich almshouse, Sunday afternoon. This has come to be an annual affair and included several instrumental and vocal selections, with Miss Catherine McVeigh at the piano. The soloists were Miss Anna Carroll, a clever singer, who rendered Red Hot Mama, in her usual form; Miss Margaret Casey, with Let Me Call You Sweetheart; Miss Gertrude Hammil with I'm Alabamy-Bound; Miss Mary Foley with He's Living the Life of Reilly; and Miss Anna Hazam in Hard Boiled Rose. The feature of the afternoon was the Charleston, very gracefully done by Miss Norene Shea.

The club was fortunate in securing the services of Roderick F. Sullivan, the accomplished tenor, who delightfully entertained with three solos, and was called to respond to several encores.

The success of the affair was due to the painstaking efforts of Daniel O'Brien, who coached the girls for this annual Thanksgiving entertainment. The visitors were most cordially received and greeted by Supt. and Mrs. Charles E. Ellis.

Those taking part were Barbara and Katherine Sullivan, Anna Carroll, Anna Brennan, Helen Mahoney, May O'Brien, Julia and Celia Cook, Gertrude Hamill, Madeline Fitzgerald, Mary Foley, Anna Hazam, Norene Shea, Anna Berringer, Catherine McVeigh, Elisabeth and Margaret Fahey, Dolly Tobin, Margaret Casey, Alice McNally, Margaret Sheridan, Catherine Twomey, Florence Taber, Miriam Sullivan, Mildred Langlais, Mary Caulfield, Margaret McCarthy and Stella Guertin.

Ice cream, cake and candy for all, with tobacco for the men, were distributed during the afternoon. The girls were rewarded for their kindly deeds by having a very enjoyable afternoon.

Knocked Step off Trolley

Harold Dunleavy of Abington, Mass., was arrested on the charge of evading responsibility here Sunday evening, after an automobile he was driving on Boswell avenue knocked a step off a trolley car near St. Regis avenue. Dunleavy drove away but the car crew got his Massachusetts license number and the police made the arrest.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

Miss Ella M. Norton entertained Miss Miriam Woodbury, of New York, for a short time during the week.

When G. Wyman Carroll gave a dinner of ten, followed by cards, Thursday evening, the prizes were won by Lucius Briggs and Mrs. Walter T. Camp.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Corey, of Slater avenue and Mrs. Corey's sisters motored to Meriden at the week end and were the guests of friends.

Channing P. Huntington, who spent a portion of the week with his mother, Mrs. Channing M. Huntington, at the Wauregan, has left for St. Petersburg, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Shields, of Crescent street, William H. Shields, Jr. with Miss Julia O'Connell of West Town street, attended the game in Boston Saturday.

Miss Mabel S. Webb, instructor in art at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y., will arrive Wednesday to pass the Thanksgiving holidays at her home on Rockwell Terrace.

Mrs. Grosvenor Ely and her daughter, Miss Frances Dana Coit have been spending several days at Hotel Traymore, Atlantic City, while Mrs. Ely was visiting her daughter who attends Miss Madiera's school in Washington.

Miss Eleanor Plant Norton left Sunday afternoon to resume teaching in the Friends' school, Germantown, Pa. having been the week end guest of her aunt, Mrs. Edward D. Fuller, while in Norwich to attend the Copp-Tirrell wedding.

Mrs. Donald H. Hemingway, of New Haven, who has been visiting her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Chase, of Sachem Terrace, received many social attentions during her stay. Mrs. Hemingway returned to New Haven Saturday.

Mrs. George G. Lamb, of Boston, who was the guest for a short time of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Minnie Lamb Byrnes, of Union street before sailing from Boston on S. S. Savannah, has reached Winter Haven, Fla., where she expects to pass the winter.

Eben Learned and his daughter, Miss Constance Learned visited the former's sister, Mrs. Mary L. Ely, while in Boston to attend "The Miracle." Mrs. Ely has also had as her guest recently her sister, Mrs. Henry R. Bond, Jr., of "Harbourview," Pequot avenue, New London.

During the week, Mrs. Charles V. James, of Broad street gave an informal tea for Mrs. Thomas Tufts, of Stonington, who was her guest. Later in the week, Mrs. James left for a visit with her sister, Mrs. Joseph Goulart, of New Bedford. Mr. James motored over for the week end and they returned Sunday evening.

STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE ON WEST MAIN STREET

Late Saturday afternoon Mrs. Patrick Diffley of 26 Kinney avenue was struck and knocked down near the corner of West Main street and Forest street by a touring car driven by Rudolph Greishamer of 49 Asylum street. It was reported that the woman had stepped out from behind another machine as she came from the sidewalk into the street so that the driver was unable to avoid hitting her. Mrs. Diffley suffered bruises and was attended by Dr. Paul F. Gadle. She was taken to her home.

FUNERALS

Walter G. Burdick

The funeral of Walter G. Burdick 55, was held from his home at Glasgo, Saturday afternoon with a very large attendance of relatives and friends. The service was conducted by Rev. J. W. Carter of the Jewett City Methodist church. Mrs. William Jeffers and Mrs. Irving Thornton sang, Abide With Me and Sun of My Soul. The bearers were four nephews, Leland Burdick, Fred Burdick, Benjamin Young and Floyd Johnson and burial took place in Rickstown cemetery, Rev. Mr. Carter conducting the committal service. There was a wealth of beautiful flowers. Undertaker C. A. Gager had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Moses Goldfaden

The funeral of Mrs. Moses Goldfaden was held Sunday from her home, No. 62 Elizabeth street, and burial took place in the United Sons of Joseph cemetery at Brewster's Neck. Undertakers Church and Allen had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Goldfaden died Friday evening following an illness of three weeks. She was 52 years of age and was born in Russia coming to this country when a young woman. For some years she lived in Cleveland, but for the last 35 years had made her home in Norwich. Mrs. Goldfaden was a member of the Congregation of the United Sons of Joseph.

Surviving are her husband and four children, Mrs. Harry M. Land, and Gerald Goldfaden, of this city, Mrs. Murray Zuckerman, of New London, and Herman Goldfadden, of Westerly. There are also six grandchildren.

Mrs. Fred Wohlleben

Many relatives and friends, some from out of town, attended the funeral services for Mrs. Fred Wohlleben held at her late home, No. 18 South A street, Taftville, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services were conducted by Rev. Edwin Gordon Crowdis, pastor of the Taftville Congregational church. The funeral remembrances were many and beautiful.

Burial was in Maplewood cemetery, Rev. Mr. Crowdis reading the committal service. The bearers were John Nicholas Leipold, Michael Leipold, Martin and William Wohlleben, Martin Krause and Charles Volkman. The funeral arrangements were in charge of George G. Grant of Taftville.

Entertained Waterford Young People

A group of twenty young people from Waterford with their pastor, Rev. G. H. Strouse, who came here on a strawride Friday night, were entertained by the young people of the First Baptist church. The pleasant programme was carried out under the direction of a committee consisting of Miss Marguerite Copeland, Miss Alice Sandberg, Miss Gladys Tortoiseshell, Miss Edna Jones, Merwin Leffingwell and Clinton Robinson, while the decorations in green and autumn yellow were arranged by Miss Tortoiseshell and Miss Dorothea Tucker.

Thin Weak Children Get Strong Quickly

Mother: Forget the nasty tasting, stomach upsetting cod liver oil and give the thin, puny, underdeveloped children McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets if you want to put roses in their cheeks; give them a good appetite and put pounds of good, healthy flesh on their bones.

Doctors know all about them and so does Lee & Osgood and all druggists, for they are in great demand because they are not laggards but show results in a few days.

They are not expensive either—60 tablets—60 cents and children take them like candy.

A very sickly child, age 9, gained 12 pounds in seven months and is strong and healthy.

One skinny woman gained 9 pounds in 24 days.

Ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets and if they don't do your frail child the world of good in 30 days your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.

ACADEMY BEATS STONINGTON BY ONE POINT IN THRILLING GRID BATTLE

The Brown and White clad warriors from Stonington seemingly at the pinnacle of their season came to Norwich Saturday afternoon with high hopes for an easy victory over the N. F. A. only to be sent back to the Mallnes by the sea with their colors drooping at the end of a 14 to 13 score. Some 1200 spectators on autumn's most beautiful Saturday enjoyed the brilliant duel between the Red and White players of the Academy and the Brown and White of Stonington.

The Academy putting up a terrific battle won by the narrow margin of one point due to the fine kicking of Norm Courbois. Throughout the whole four quarters, the game was nip and tuck with neither team sure of the victory until the final whistle was blown. Two local teams first touchdown came in the first few minutes of the second quarter. Pheno Tombari broke away for a beautiful run of twenty-five yards around right end and brought the ball within ten yards of Stonington's goal line. On their first play the Academy sent Ed Brewer through center for a three yard gain and on second down Tombari again carrying the ball advanced it two yards nearer to the goal. Radio Ed Brewer tore through center for four more yards and on their last down Academy again gave the ball to Tombari who took it across the line for the N. F. A. initial touchdown. Norm Courbois went back and sent a beautiful kick squarely between the goal bars for the point after touchdown. Stonington brought the ball down the field and put it across the Academy goal line exactly three minutes after the N. F. A. had scored their initial touchdown. Tombari kicked off and Duke catching the ball ran it forward twenty yards before being downed. McCaffrey lost a yard on their first play and on the second Lavoni plowed through center for a gain of seven yards that gave Stonington first down. McCaffrey threw a pass forward to Brver that netted eleven yards and another first down. Tirressi on the next two plays gained fifteen yards on an off tackle run and a twelve yard forward by McCaffrey. McCaffrey on the next play took the ball off left tackle for a gain of three yards and on second down Lavoni plowed through center for four yards. Tirressi on the following two plays made another first down on rushes through the center of the line. McCaffrey ran wide around the right end and went eight yards before an Academy man downed him. Cronin hit center and plowed his way through for Stonington's first touchdown. Lavoni went well back of his line of scrimmage and sent the ball between the crossbars for the point that tied the score.

The second touchdown for the N. F. A. came in the third quarter when Eddie Brewer intercepted a forward thrown by McCaffrey. A Stonington player tripped Brewer and the Brown and White players were penalized fifteen yards. On their first two plays the Academy made only three yards but on third down Norm Courbois broke away for a beautiful eighteen yard run around right end. Clarence Brewer made four yards on a short end run and Tombari threw a forward pass to Courbois that netted another four yards. The Brewer brothers and Courbois on three line plays gained six yards. On the next play Stonington was penalized half the distance to their goal for being off side. As C. Brewer went across for the local team's second touchdown the Academy rooters went wild with excitement. Once more Courbois dropped back and sent the ball over the crossbar for another pretty goal.

The Stonington players started the fourth and last quarter determined to score if it was humanly possible or know the reason why. The period started with Tirressi plunging through the center of the line for five yards and first down, Lavoni and Tirressi on the next three plays made eight yards and on last down Cronin plunged through center for three yards and first down. Cronin again hit center and this time made seven yards. Tirressi also tried center but was only able to make one yard. Cronin again took the ball and went across the line for Stonington's second touchdown. As Lavoni went back to try for the goal complete silence reigned on the sidelines and only the voice of the Stonington quarter-back could be heard on the gridiron.

As the ball came back and the kicker started his leg into motion the Academy line in almost a solid body came crashing through and blocked the kick. As the ball fell to the ground it arose from the Brown and White rooters from Stonington and a cheer that rolled back and forth across the field came from the N. C. A. section.

Norm Courbois and Tombari were the outstanding stars of the contest. Courbois ripped off several beautiful runs that brought forth cheers from both Norwich and Stonington fans. Tombari also got away for long gains that helped the Academy to score both of their touchdowns. Radio Ed Brewer at fullback and tore through the Stonington line as though it was tissue paper and ripped off some long gains. Schwartz and Polsky on the line did some fine work.

Stonington also had a number of stars among whom were McCaffrey at quarterback, Cronin at full and Lavoin at left half back. Duke, Stonington's captain, got off some beautiful punts that sailed far down the field on each kick.

The following are the lineups for both teams:

Academy		Stonington
Waters, le		le, Bryer
Stefano, lt		lt, Adams
Connell, Fiddie, lg		lg, Pollard, Squadrito

EDDIE TRYON HOLDS LEAD IN FOOTBALL SCORING

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—(By the A. P.)—With but one more game to play, Eddie Tryon of Colgate is leading the intercollegiate field in the quest for individual scoring honors. The Maroon leader did not play Saturday, but despite this he maintains the lead which he has held throughout the season. Tryon has scored 14 touchdowns and has kicked 19 points after touchdown for a total of 103 points while Myles Lane of Dartmouth closed the season against Chicago last week with 17 touchdowns and a total of 102 points.

Tryon has a chance to improve his total when he leads the undefeated Colgate team against Brown at Providence, Thursday. Harlan Carr of Syracuse made the most impressive advance in the east Saturday when he scored all of Syracuse's 17 points against Niagara and elevated himself to third place in the east with 12 touchdowns, 2 field goals and 12 points after touchdown, for a total of 90 points. Borelli of Muhlenberg ranks fourth with 78 points with "Swede" Oberlander of Dartmouth fifth with 73 points.

There is little chance for anyone to overtake the flying Tryon even though he fails to cross the line against Brown. Carr is the only logical rival Tryon has in sight right now and the Orange ace will have to travel fast against Columbia Thursday to catch up with the Maroon captain.

The leaders follow:

Player College	T	FG	TP	Tl
Tryon, Colgate	14	0	19	103
Lane, Dartmouth	17	0	0	102
Carr, Syracuse	13	2	13	90

MICHIGAN AND NORTHWESTERN STARE HONORS IN WEST

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—(A. P.)—Football wraps up its gaudy blanket in the western conference for another year with Northwestern and Michigan sharing honors for the championship but with admirers of the Wolverines insisting that if Michigan had not played Northwestern in the famous "battle of the mud," Michigan would be alone in the spotlight.

Michigan and Northwestern finished their season with each having a defeat but with Northwestern holding a triumph over the Michigan eleven. Northwestern's only loss was to Chicago, Michigan smothered five conference opponents—Minnesota, Indiana, Wisconsin, Illinois and Ohio State. Northwestern's big ten victories were over Indiana, Michigan and Purdue.

Wisconsin's Badgers, by their 20 to 7 victory over Chicago take their place in the conference sun as one of four elevens which have lost only one game during this season of upsets.

Red Grange discarded his famous "77" sweater at Columbus by leading his fighting Illinois team to a 14 to 9 victory over Ohio State.

Northwestern, with its western conference season finished, fell before Notre Dame, 13 to 10.

Benny Friedman is one of Michigan's candidates for All-American honors, as a result of his forward passing ability and his achievement in leading the big ten scorers for 1925. He scored a total of 62 points, leading Kutsch of Iowa for this honor. Kutsch scored 49. Friedman scored four touchdowns, two field goals and 22 points after touchdown, while "Cowboy Nick" is credited with six touchdowns, three field goals and four points after touchdowns. Kutsch was out of two games with injuries.

TIGERS WIN CITY TITLE BY BEATING NUTMEGS

Sunday afternoon on J. B. Martin field in Taftville the Greeneville Tigers showing a furious offensive attack defeated the Nutmegs to the tune of 27 to 6. A forward in the second half went across the goal but the Tiger man who caught it was out of the zone limit and as a consequence no touchdown was scored.

The first half of the game ended with the score 6 to 0 in favor of Greeneville and the ball in the middle of the field. The last two periods were the undoing of the Nutmegs for the Tigers completely submerged the Nutmegs, who fell into an awful slump and were unable to stop the advance of the Greeneville players.

The following are the lineups for the game:

Tigers		Nutmegs
Boyd, Nelson, le		le, Kelly
Gay, Boyd, re		re, Carlin, Ludlow

The officials were: Referee, Haslam; umpire, Harris; time of quarters was 10-12-10-12.

FISHER SAYS HE IS THROUGH WITH FOOTBALL

WALTHAM, Mass., Nov. 23.—(A. P.)—Robert T. Fisher, head coach of the Harvard football team, said at his home here tonight that he was "definitely through" as Harvard's gridiron director. This was in line with his statement of last year that he would continue in his position only one year longer.

"I told the team before yesterday's game that this was my last day as coach," Fisher said. "When I said a year ago that I would resign I was urged to stay, and I said then that I would do so for one year only."

Coach Fisher said he would now devote his entire time to business. He is asociated with the Boston banking firm of Lee, Higginson and Company.

BRADFORD DYERS BEAT CENTERDALE AT SOCCER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

BRADFORD, Nov. 23—The soccer team of the Bradford Dyeing association defeated the Centredale Soccer Eleven at Douglas park, Bradford, R. I., on Sunday afternoon by the score of 4 to 2. The first half of the game was a fast one and the goals for Bradford were two by Aaron Tetlow and two by Carl Weall. E. Barrett scored the two for Centredale.

The outstanding star on the "Center" Eleven were Barrett, Crooks and goalkeeper J. Grayson. The pick of the B. D. A. players were Carl Weall, Aaron Tetlow, Peter Harrison and E. Billings. The officials were referee—Mr. White of Providence; linesman—for Bradford J. W. Hindle, for Centredale J. W. Harreaves. A good crowd witnessed the contest. On next Thursday the Bud of Hope team of Providence will be the opponents for Bradford and a very good game is expected as they are in second place.

TWO TEAMS TIED IN PACIFIC COAST CONFERENCE

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 22—Stanford's cardinal football team, conquering California's Bears 26 to 14 in the traditional "big game" at Stanford's stadium yesterday, went into a tie with Southern California for second place in the Pacific Coast conference. Stanford and Southern California have each lost one game—Stanford to Washington and Southern California to Stanford.

Meanwhile undefeated Washington romping over Puget Sound 79-0 in a non-conference game, held its position at the top of the conference.

Washington has only to bowl over Oregon, thus far a weak team, on Thanksgiving day to claim the championship. The Washington huskies have chalked up victories over Montana, Washington State, Stanford and California.

BRITTON WAITS CALL FROM HIS TEAMMATE

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 22—Earl Britton, Illinois, massive fullback, who closed his college football career Saturday with "Red" Grange, said today that he was not sure what he would do about playing professional football.

"It depends on Red," he said. "I haven't any dealings with any one but him. If he wants me I guess he'll send for me."

Dartmouth Football Slate

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 22—(A. P.)—Harvard, Yale and Cornell have places on Dartmouth's football schedule for 1926, announced here today. The schedule follows:

Sept. 25, Norwich; Oct. 2, Hobart; 9, Virginia Polytechnic; 16, Yale, at New Haven; 23, Harvard at Cambridge; 30, Brown; Nov. 6, Boston university; 13, Cornell at Ithaca.

SUSIE AND HER BOY FRIEND SEE THE YALE-HARVARD GAME AT BOSTON

Dear Sporting Editor: Every so often I get a wild desire to write and one of those desires is on me now. I read so much about the football game between Yale and Harvard that I want to tell the world what I saw down in Boston Saturday. Here goes, so stand by while I broadcast.

The Boy Friend says to me a coupla weeks ago, "How'd you like to see the Yale and Harvard football game?" "You betcha I would" says I. "So'd I," says he, "but I ain't got no tickets." Can you imagine him gettin my hopes up like that and then splashin' 'em all over with cold water? Well, I guess he musta been sorry 'cause a coupla nights later he comes up to my shanty to park in the parlor and inhale some of the heat my old man paid $23 per ton for. I was kinda cold at first, remembering the mean trick he'd played on me the last time he was up. Well, whatta you know? the first wise crack he pulled was "How'd you like to go to the Yale-Harvard game?" I was just gettin' ready to give him the air, when he pulled out a coupla red paste-boards and give 'em to me. What I read most took my breath away. They were tickets for the game. Whatta you know 'bout that? Well, I did what any girl would if her boy friend had given her a pair of them priceless tickets. No, I don't know where he got 'em, but with 'em selling for fifty bucks a piece, he musta pulled a Gerald Chapman act.

Well, anyway we went to the game. I got up bright'n early Sat. a. m., rolled the stockings, took the kinks outta the bob, picked out the old sport suit and sewed up the rip in the fur coat that belonged to sister Nellie. None of them college widows was gonna have anything on me. The boy friend looked pretty good, too, although he didn't have one of them 'coon coats that the college shieks wear, to cover up their poly suit and shirt.

Well, we grabbed the train down the station and was on our way. Saw several folks from Norwich on the train, one was an insurance man and his wife, the insurance feller was all dolled up in knickers. Friend wife was enjoying herself, too. Then there was a lawyer and another young lady. No, I don't mean that the lawyer was a young lady. Then there was a coupla kids that work on the Record on the same train. I was kinda 'fraid them two youngsters would get lost but I guess they were safe all right, being so young and innocent.

Things were pretty quiet as far as Putnam where we changed trains, and then, oh, boy, the sights we saw. I blush to think of them, even now. We played in luck all right 'cause we managed to get a seat all to ourselves. If anybody tells you that prohibition is a grand and glorious success you tell 'em they're crazy. I never saw so much liquor in bottles in all my life. Musta had a kick in it, too, the way these young fellers and girls acted. And cigarettes, why all those girls smoked more of them paper pills than I knew was made.

Well, we landed in Boston all right. The first thing we did was look up a place to eat. The boy friend steered me into a place which he said was the Walled Off. I guess it got its name from the fancy stone walls in there. It was one of those places where you grab a tray and your food and try and get a place to park. If you're outa luck you eat standing up. Guess me and the boy friend was born on Friday the thirteenth. Being in Boston we ordered beans. Heard a lot about Boston beans but they ain't no different from those you get in Norwich, only they cost more.

After munching the beans we went out to the place where they played the game. Gosh, what a crowd, it was bigger than the crowd at the county fair. The boy friend grabbed me and we took the underground right out to the park. The boy friend ain't so dumb 'cause he put a coupla Connecticut Cotokens in the cash box and got away with it. That's 20 cents more saved for furniture when I decide to make him miserable for life. Well, we got out to the field all right, although I gonta get a new pair of kicks, those I was wearin' are wrecked.

Gosh, that stadium is a big place, makes you think of those old Roman places you see in the movies, anti-theatres, I think you call 'em. On one side all the girls wore 'coon coats and red hats and on the other side the girls wore blue hats. Oh yes, they had 'coon coats, too. What a lotta cats and dogs musta been killed to make all them coats. I looked pretty good in sister Nellie's near squirrel coat too, only I wore a green hat. There's some Irish in me, but I guess most of the other girls that sat near me musta had some Scotch in them. We had good seats down at one end of the field and when one side would cheer I'd cheer with 'em and when the other side hollered I hollered with them.

Just before the game started some wise cracker put up on the score board "Harvard 54, Yale 7." His guess was just about as good as that feller's they call the Cloud Digger. The bands played and marched about the field, sounded about like John Swahn's bunch, only more of 'em. Then the teams come on the field, the Harvard boys in red shirts and the Yales in blue, their pants was just alike, a sorta dirty yellow.

Then the game was started by three men dressed in white knickers and white shirts. If the players were dressed like that I think they would look more sporty. Why don't you write some thing about that, Mr. Editor? Well, they started the game and first one team would have the ball and the other team would jump on the feller and throw him in the dirt. I'd hate to have to wash those players clothes the same as I do brother Joe's. Then they kick the ball around. Everybody said Yale was punk, but I don't know seeing as how this was the first game I ever saw. I guess everybody knew it was, too, for every time I asked the boy friend something about the game everybody snickered and the boy friend would say "Shut up, Susie, don't be so dumb."

Well after the game was over I says to the boy friend "Gosh, I had a good time but who won the game." "It was an immoral victory for Harvard" comes back the boy friend. I been trying to dope out what he meant but perhaps you can help me. Well we got home all right after we bought one of those prepared lunches in the station. Guess they been prepared about two weeks ago by a blacksmith.

Well, I hope you like this letter and maybe I'll write another some time 'cause I like sports so much, you see so many new ways of dressing.

Yours truly,
SUSIE.

MISSOURI TIGERS STAND OUT AS M. V. CHAMPIONS

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 22—The University of Missouri Tigers for the second consecutive year, stand as the champions of the Missouri valley conference gridiron, but with their hope of a perfect record shattered and their most coveted game lost.

Although defeated ten to seven in the traditional clash with Kansas at Lawrence yesterday, the Tigers retained the mythical valley title when Drake was downed by Iowa State by the margin of a single point at Des Moines.

Oklahoma defeated Washington 19 to 0. At Norman in the only other conference contest, the Oklahoma Aggies were defeated by Arkansas at Fayetteaville 8 to 7.

"Y" INDOOR LEAGUE IS CREATING MUCH ENTHUSIASM

The indoor baseball league recently organized in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium is calling forth much enthusiasm among the younger baseball fans, and judging by the interest manifested in the opening games the series promises to furnish some lively times for the lads. The league, which has been limited to six teams, was open to all boys in the city under the age of 16, regardless of membership in the association, and another league will be formed should a sufficient number of new teams apply.

The schedule of games for this week is as follows:

Thanksgiving Morning:
9:30—Pittsburgh vs. New York.
10:15—Chicago vs. St. Louis.
11:00—Washington vs. Boston.
Friday—6-7—Boston vs. Pittsburgh.
Friday—7-8—New York vs. Chicago.

JONES' GOLF TROPHY IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 22—The Havermeyer amateur golf trophy won by Robert T. "Bobby" Jones in September at the Oakmont golf course, at Pittsburgh, Pa. was destroyed early today when the Eastlake Country club, "Bobby's" home course, burned with damage estimated at $200,000.

The Havermeyer cup was one of the most prized possessions of the club representing "Bobby's" triumph in amateur golf.

"RED" GRANGE BEGINS CONTRACT TO BECOME PROFESSIONAL PLAYER

CHICAGO, Nov. 22—(A. P.)—Harold "Red" Grange today plunged into the business of capitalizing his gridiron fame by signing to play professional football, against the wishes of his father as well as George Huff, director of athletics of the university of Illinois, Coach Robert Zuppke and others who had hoped he would accept other offers held out to him.

Grange contracted with the Chicago Bears to play his first game with them in the Chicago National League park Thanksgiving day, against the Chicago Cardinals. Grange also signed Charles C. Pyle, a Champaign, Ills. theatrical man, as his manager.

Grange said that Pyle had merely acted as his good friend and adviser for the last few weeks and had spent his own funds investigating the countless offers made the football player Pyle's contract with Grange is for two years. While neither would discuss the terms, it was said that Pyle would receive 25 per cent. of Grange's earnings on the professional gridiron, in motion pictures and other ventures.

The 22-year-old star said he had decided to play professional football, instead of accepting other alluring offers because he had no training or experience that would have enabled him to accept the others. He said the public would be better satisfied if he turned his efforts to the field in which he had been most successful so he could earn money to repay his father for his sacrifices and also take up the burden of his 20-year-old brother's education.

Grange, in deciding to play professional football, is in a position to earn a fortune within the next few weeks on the chalk lines and another fortune awaits him in other fields. Although the terms under which Grange will plan professional football were not made public, it was reported that Grange's share of his Thanksgiving day game alone will amount to about $30,000.

The contract, it was said, provides that Grange shall receive ten per cent. of the first $5,000 that comes into the gate, 30 per cent. of the second $5,000 and 40 per cent. of all over this amount.

The promoters are figuring on a gate of $30,000. The price of tickets was boosted and when word spread that Grange would be in the game, the scalpers immediately asked from $5 to $5 with indications that the supply would not hold out for 48 hours.

Grange will finish the season with the Bears, playing six games, all of them here, with the exception of appearances in Philadelphia, December 5, and in New York the next day. After these games, the Bears with Grange and additional stars including Earl Britton, his co-star at Illinois this season, will invade Florida for games during the holidays.

When Grange arrived here today after thrilling 85,500 football fans at Columbus yesterday, the second largest crowd that ever saw a football game in America, there were so many promoters awaiting him with contracts in their pockets that the crowd looked like a reception committee to the Prince of Wales. There were offers to appear in movies, to write for newspaper syndicates and to do this and that. All were willing to pay Grange whatever he asked.

Grange said that he was leaving the university of Illinois temporarily but intended to return to finish his course.

"I have received many alluring offers," said Grange, "to enter fields of enterprise in which I have had no training or experience. I believe the public will be better satisfied with my honesty and good motives if I turn my efforts to that field in which I have been most useful in order to reap a reward which will keep the home fires burning.

"I am leaving college temporarily but will return later. To Messrs. Huff and Zuppke and my teammates, to the student body and alumni, to the publicity agement extended to me throughout the country, I extend my sincere appreciation for the splendid support and encouragement extended to me throughout my college football career."

YALE'S FAILURE TO BEAT HARVARD IS THE BIG UPSET OF SATURDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—This is the transition period of the year in sports—the returning indoors in the face of winter's advance.

Events that are to come take on added importance as football, proud of its 1925 demonstration of stability, packs its bags with a few choice offerings—the Cornell-Pennsylvania, Colgate-Brown and Syracuse-Columbia contests on Thanksgiving day and the service conflict of Army and Navy on Saturday.

The indoor season's first great program finds Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, opposed to Sailor Friedman of Chicago on Wednesday night in Newark, N. J., a 12-round test wherein a crown may fall. New Jersey does not permit decisions but Friedman can win by knockout or foul, or if Walker is incapacitated during the bout and finds himself unable to resume.

Yet the outstanding event of the week will be the opening of the most magnificent indoor arena sport has shown, the new Madison Square Garden in New York. Fifteen teams of cyclists, those sturdy fellows who wheel for six days and six nights, will start in the first New York grind of the year in the new building next Sunday at midnight, following several hours of sprint races on Saturday.

Completion of this $5,000,000 structure north of Times Square brings professional and amateur hockey into prominence in New York for the first time. Yale University has made the garden surface its home rink, and New York will be represented in the international professional circuit by a group of expensive veteran opponents of the ice game. Track meet, basketball, bicycle races, boxing—all have room in the new sport structure, and where the capacity varies from 14,000 to 20,000 according to the sport.

The waning outdoor schedule brings more than a score of colleges and universities into competition at Van Cortlandt park tomorrow in the annual intercollegiate A. A. A. A. cross-country championship, won last year by the University of Pittsburgh.

Major league baseball appears to be awaiting the end of the football season before indulging in its cold-weather effort for prominence. With its whisperings and actual trades, the New York Giants, however, have indicated an intention to rebuild the team that gained four straight National league pennants. By shifting a catcher, Mickey Devine, to Rochester, Providence, once in the old Eastern league which later became the international and which tried the present International brand of ball late last season has joined forces with the new eastern circuit, comprising New York, Massachusetts and Connecticutt cities.

Rich golf tournaments, product of increased public interest, have been announced for the winter, with $10,000 in prizes for the professionals. California and Florida will stake them. The sixteen-qualifier plan in the national amateur championship seems doomed. William C. Fownes, Jr., prospective president of the United States Golf association, will be delegated to discuss with British authorities the new ball that America commends, a lighter, larger sphere, necessarily of less carrying power.

Basketball hockey and track supporters, anxious for action against rival clubs, are preparing diligently for what promises to be a record-breaking season for indoor sport, especially in New York.

FORWARD PASSING GIVES BLUES ANOTHER VICTORY

HARTFORD, Nov. 22—A series of dazzling forward passes thrown by Harry Struhldreher in the last minute of play enabled George Mulligan's Hartford Blues to defeat the All-Norwalk professional football team here this afternoon by a 9 to 6 margin.

Norwalk was unable to make a single first down against the Blue line during the game but twice gained the necessary yardage by forward passing. The Norwalk touchdown came after these two long passes had taken the ball to the Blue five-yard mark and Meyers plunged over for the score. Struhldreher kicked a twenty-yard drop for the first score of the game.

"Tubby" Raub after playing an outstanding game was injured in the last quarter and had to be helped off the field.

JEWETT CITY TO HAVE A BASKETBALL TEAM

Jewett City will enter the basketball field this winter with a fast team that compares favorably with any of the aggregations in this section. Joe Faber will manage the five and has already signed up Harry Mills and Mondi Normandin, two of the fastest floor men in the state. Playing with them is Blake, Barry and Benjamin and Faber himself. The Jewett City team is now booking games for the season.

LOCAL BOY IS PLAYING WITH MANLIUS ACADEMY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

MANLIUS, N. Y., Nov. 23—John H. Barrett, Norwich boy now a student at the Manlius Military academy, Manlius, N. Y., has been selected as one of the eighteen players to make the trip with the cadet eleven to Staunton, Virginia, where on Thanksgiving the Staunton Military academy will be met. This is the biggest game of the year for both teams and a hard battle is expected.

Barrett has alternated at end and tackle this year. He weighs 175 pounds and is a scrappy youngster of ability. The Manlius team has to date scored victories over the Alfred second team, Oswego Normal and Stroudburg Normal, last year's championship normal eleven of Pennsylvania. They bowed to the Colgate and Cornell yearlings and played a scoreless tie with University of Pennsylvania Frosh who later defeated the Cornell Freshmen, 16 to 2.

The team will leave the Manlius Campus Tuesday morning and will stop over at Gettysburg. Pa., that night, continuing on to Staunton Wednesday. Edward Leary, Naugatuck boy is another Connecticut youngster who will make the trip.

TRIPLE TIE UNBROKEN IN N. E. CONFERENCE

STORRS, Nov. 22—Yesterday's contests played by New England conference teams failed to break the triple tie existing between New Hampshire, Maine and Massachusetts Aggies for first place in the conference.

Massachusetts Aggies defeated Tufts 6 to 4 at Amherst, Mass.; New Hampshire, in its closing game of the season, was tumbled from the ranks of the country's undefeated teams by Brown, taking a 33 to 14 defeat at Providence; and the Connecticut Aggies lost to Rensselaer at Troy, N. Y., by a 13 to 7 score. Maine and Rhode Island, the other two conference elevens closed their seasons a week ago.

HOW TO GET RID OF MUSCLE-LAMENESS

Beach Patrolman Advises this Treatment

After exposure to dampness and cold, and after hard exercise, muscles will stiffen up and get lame.

A beach patrolman at Atlantic City writes that he has found this treatment the quickest and most effective way to take out the stiffness and pain:

"Just put on a little of Sloan's Liniment. Don't rub. It's the liniment—not the rubbing—that helps. You'll get relief right away. I've tried all sorts of other things, but nothing gets results like Sloan's."

Hundreds of letters like this tell of the wonderful relief from muscular pain that Sloan's

CHARLES WILLIAMS DISCHARGED BY NEW LONDON COURT; LACK OF EVIDENCE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 23—When Charles Williams, an unoffending young man, was arraigned in the police court Saturday, charged with a felonious assault upon Philip Seller, who manages a little store on Bank street, Williams was discharged upon a statement of the case by the prosecutor, for there was no evidence to hold him for the crime alleged. Seller was beaten a week ago as he entered his home at night when he left his place of business. Williams loiters about a great deal and is addicted to the use of liquor, so the description given by Seller of the man who had attacked him seemed to point to Williams in the absence of anyone else who answered the description, and Williams was taken into custody. Seller thought, when Williams was brought into his presence, that he was the man. Later Seller was most uncertain as to that. He was questioned closely and could not connect Williams with the assault in the remotest way, except from the fact that he wore dark clothing. He could not and would not identify him by facial appearance. That sort of drivel was not the kind of evidence upon which to accuse a man of a serious crime and Prosecutor Hollandersky recommended that the case against Williams should be nolled.

Alfred T. Comstock of Uncasville was fined $2 in police court Saturday for carelessness in not having his license with him when he was operating an auto in this city. Comstock drove on the left side of a street beacon, and for that he was stopped by Policeman Graham. "Show me your operating license," was the request of the policeman. This Comstock could not do. He said he had left it in other clothes than those he was wearing. He was ordered to court and was told to have his license with him when he appeared. Saturday he produced it but he was fined as provided by the statutes. Comstock was similarly fined a year ago, so he has now learned the lesson his penalties teach, he says.

Joe Pozella is to appeal in court Monday to answer for parking in a restricted section of Bank street just south of the custom house. Joe pleaded not guilty of the offense Saturday and as the policeman who ordered him to court was not at hand to tell of the occurrence the case went over till tomorrow.

Richard Shea, a minor, had an experience while operating an auto which he will try and steer clear of in the future. He had knowledge of the operations of autoes and took a machine without the consent of the owner. He started out and soon had driven the auto he was operating into the motorcycle of Joseph Grills, which was parked at the curbing on Jefferson avenue. The Grills machine was wrecked—damaged to the extent of $250 he claims and the claim appears to be admitted, for Shea's father has arranged to make good the Grille machine. Shea was prosecuted for reckless driving and for operating an auto without a license. For the first offense he was fined $25 and for the second he was ordered to pay $10. In view of the fact that Shea's father must pay the bill the fine for recklessness was remitted.

Miss Mary Lewis, Lyme, reported to the New London police late Saturday afternoon that she lost her purse containing $75 on Bank street, between State and Sparyard streets, earlier in the day.

Raymond S. McLean, son of Rev. Andrew McLean, a former pastor of the Groton Heights Congregational church, died at his late home, Portland, Me., last Friday. The body was brought to Groton and interred in Groton cemetery Saturday morning. Committal service was conducted by Rev. Henry W. Hulbert, pastor of the Groton Heights Baptist church.

Herman Beckwith, Niantic, was taken into custody, Saturday, afternoon charged with intoxication and evasion of taxi fare. Beckwith hired a public service automobile and when he concluded his ride he refused to pay the driver. Complaint was lodged with Lieut. James Sullivan and Beckwith was taken into custody. Beckwith was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $50 for his appearance in the police court Monday morning.

William S. Buchert, a soldier stationed at Fort Wright, was arrested Saturday night charged with intoxication, by Patrolman Frank Philopena. He furnished a surety on his bond of $50 for his appearance in court Monday morning.

Peter McKinnon, boatswain's mate, stationed at the United States Coast Guard academy, Fort Trumbull, complained to the police this morning that a seven jewel Elgin watch had been stolen from him, the watch having been taken from the receiving unit at the academy Saturday or this forenoon.

Mrs. C. B. Fengar, 27 Post Hill place, communicated with the police Saturday night, stating that she had heard a strange noise in the attic of her home and that she was suspicious that a crook was in the house. An officer was sent to the Fengar home and determined that the strange noise was caused by a piece of furniture stored in the attic having fallen to the floor.

The police are instituting a search for Mildred Xavier, 14, of Uncasville, who disappeared from her home Saturday afternoon, but so far the search for the girl in New London has not been rewarded with success. The girl, accompanied by a girl friend, was seen during Saturday afternoon to enter a Packard automobile and in which were three young men. Neither of the girls have been heard from since. The mother of the Xavier girl requested the local police to make a search for her daughter as soon as the mother was aware of her daughter having been driven away in the automobile. The Xavier girl wore a red coat with fur collar and cuffs.

An automobile, owned and operated by Mrs. Clare O'Connell, 15 Thames Terrace, Norwich, and a car operated by Frank Buckley, Mystic, were in collision Saturday evening on Washington street. Both cars were damaged.

Garage thieves appear to have started a campaign of burglaries for the purpose of stealing automobile equipment. Last Friday night the garage of William Ewamyk, 138 Jefferson avenue, was entered and three Chrysler balloon tires were stolen. Last midnight an attempt was made to burglarize the garage of A. E. Little, 26 Franklin street. The crooks were attempting to force an entrance to the place and the noise they made attracted the attention of Edward Hennessey, residing nearby. When Mr. Hennessey arose and turned on a light the thieves disappeared and it was not discovered until this morning that the break had been attempted, this being done when Mr. Little went to the garage and discovered evidence of the operations of the crooks.

An automobile, owned and operated by Guerino Menghi, 87 Smith street, was overturned on State street late Saturday afternoon, and although the machine was damaged Menghi escaped injury.

Menghi was operating his car, a seven passenger Hupmobile, easterly on State street and in passing the corner of Union street, a Paige car, owned and driven by Leon Parkhurst, colored, of 73 Hempstead street, and headed northerly, was about to be driven across State street. The car operated by Parkhurst was travelling at an alleged high rate of speed and before Parkhurst could reduce the speed of his car, Menghi's machine was struck with great force, the Paige car hitting the Hupmobile well to the rear and causing it to be slewed around and turned over on its side. Parkhurst was taken into custody by Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy charged with reckless driving and will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning.

John Cruise, a member of the local branch of the American Legion, reported to the police late yesterday afternoon that the box car and old house used by the legion in its frequent celebrations, and which had been stored on the premises of the Southern New England Telephone company, Washington street, had been stolen. The car and house had been in storage a number of weeks and when they were stolen Cruise, or members of the legion are not aware. It is known however, that the car and house were at their place of storage a few days ago.

Mrs. Andrew Secchiaroli, Waterford; Mrs. Robert Moore and infant daughter, Groton, and Thomas Metsler, United States Coast Guard patrol boat, 124, state pier, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged Saturday.

Mrs. William Manico, wife of Patrolman Manico, Williams street, who has been under treatment at Lawrence-Memorial associated hospital a week, will undergo an operation of a serious nature Monday morning.

An automobile, owned by Herbert L. Eaton, 150 Montauk avenue, and operated by Mrs. Dayton, crashed into a Chevrolet coupe, owned by George E. MacDonald, 32 Berkley avenue, on Montauk avenue this evening. Both cars were extensively damaged. The Chevrolet car was parked on the westerly side of the avenue when the car that Mrs. Eaton was driving, a new Moon touring car, approached a trolley car. It is believed that Mrs. Eaton became confused and lost control of her car for the machine crashed into the smaller car with the result that both cars suffered extensive damage to the front ends.

Ira Krupp, Lyme, came to New London this afternoon and while he went to the Hotel Mohican he parked his machine, a Hudson brougham, on Meridian street, between State and church streets. He absented himself from the car but a comparatively short time, but long enough for a thief to enter it and drive away. When Krupp discovered his loss he made it known to the police and a request was made of the state police and the authorities of Norwich, New Haven, Hartford and Westerly to be on the lookout for the stolen auto.

Paul Alfieri, 48 Pratt street, lodged complaint against Harold Lewis, of Fairview avenue, Groton, with the New London police tonight. Alfieri accusing Lewis of being guilty of evasion of responsibility. Alfieri declared that Lewis' machine collided with his car at the corner of Crystal avenue and Main street, and that although Alfieri's car was damaged, Lewis drove away without stopping to determine the extent of the damage.

The two family residence occupied by Abraham Gordon and Max Soltz, 41 Federal street, was damaged by fire this afternoon and for a half hour it was believed that greater damage than did occur would result from the stubborn blaze.

The blaze was discovered by members of the two families shortly before 4 o'clock and an alarm was rung in from Box 25, corner of Federal and Main streets. With the arrival of the department the fire had made its way to the partitions and produced a serious condition for the firemen to cope with. Holes were cut in the wall to enable the firemen to stretch the lines of chemical and after an hour's work the blaze was subdued. How the fire originated, it was not determined, but it is believed it started from a defective flue. The dwelling was damaged by fire about two years ago.

REAGAN AND RUSH GIRL MARRIED IN COURT ROOM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 23—Harry Reagan, a sailor on the U. S. Ship Bushnell, and Jessie Rush, a girl of 16 years, who has resided in Waterford, were married in the police court room after the court session Saturday. There they promised to love each other and forsake everyone else, clinging to each other "till death us do part." The ceremony was the out-growth of admiration each had for the other and which brought a serious charge against the young man, for he was charged with statutory rape. That complaint was to have been heard in the court Saturday, but better judgment prevailed and an agreement that the young pair should put on matrimonial harness and work together was reached. The girl's mother and sister were witnesses of the ceremony and Prosecutor Perry J. Hollandersky was the justice who tied the nuptial knot. Miss Rush met Reagan during his short term in the service of the government here as a sailor. They were together much of the time he was away from duty at liberty. That led to the declarations of affection and to the condition in which the pair found themselves when the complaint was made against Reagan.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theater

Charlie Chaplin in the Gold Rush and five acts of vaudeville at the Palace today. Last night's audience fairly shrieked at times and then a hush would descend upon the audience until the slightest cough would be annoying. Chaplin conclusively proved that he is the master of pathos as well as comedy. With his customary trick trousers, funny little cane and the Chaplin walk he presented at times a picture so pathetic that one would have to be indeed "hard boiled" that feel a tug at the heart strings. Just as we were getting ready to have a good cry the King of Comedians would then pull a piece of funny business that would send us off into ahrieks of laughter. The locale of the story is in frozen Alaska and to tell more would only be spoiling some of the two hours of laughter you are going to enjoy when you see this picture. We have seen some funny bits in pictures and on the stage but the scene where Chaplin and another prospector are manarooned in a snow bound cabin both without food and Chaplin's partner suddenly shows cannabilistic desires is about the best piece of comedy we have seen in either a movie or on the speaking stage.

The management announces a vaudeville bill headed by Emily Earl, the star of the Passing Show at the Winter Garden in 1923. Miss Earl does character songs nad impersonations and is said to be a talented performer. Ned Dandy's Royal revue is the "flash act" on the bill. Five girls and a boy in a singing, dancing and musical revue. Evans and Carter, two burlesque comedians who do their stuff in a knockabout fashion, Hodge and Lowell, another comedy team and The Sensational San Sone and Company are also on the bill.

The Chaplin feature will be shown twice each evening at seven and nine forty. At the matinees the feature starts at 2:30.

Announcement of Y. M. C. A. Annual Course

The management of the Norwich Y. M. C. A. takes pleasure in announcing what it considers a really first class course of entertainments for the coming season. The course includes artists of rare ability.

December 18th 1925—The New York Artists, consisting of Ellen Keller, an American violinist of international fame. William P. Kelgard, known as "The Philosopher of Folly," and a rare entertainer. Louis Cheney, pianist and accompanist, an artist of marked ability.

January 26th, 1926—White's Revue, a company of five young ladies, all exceptional artists. The White Bureau has no company of which it is more proud; the costumes are bewitchingly beautiful, and the program popular and brilliant.

February 16th, 1926—The Floyds, in an evening of magic and mind reading. This company has been termed "America's Premier Lyceum Entertainers." They have enjoyed great popularity for twenty years in the United States, Canada and Mexico. They have elaborate stage setting, beautiful costumes, expensive paraphernalia, and a real gift of entertaining.

Price for the course only $2.00. Tickets are now on sale at the Y. M. C. A. and Smiths Shoe Store, Broadway.

Breed Theater

Admirers of the enchanting Corinne Griffith have an opportunity of seeing that talented actress in a tempestuously dramatic role this week at the Breed where First National's The Marriage Whirl has just begun an engagement.

Never has the beautiful Corinne enacted a more trying role, and never has her triumph been greater.

Foremost in her support are Kenneth Harlan, Morrison Ford and Nita Naldi, each of whom contributes a striking characterization. New York and Paris form the background of the picture, which is a screen transplantation of the J. Hartley Manners stage offering, The National Anthem.

With Kenneth Harlan, Miss Griffith portrays an American couple tynical of hundreds who annually fall under the soul sapping spell of the pleasure-mad French capital, where the rising sun alone brings a respite from revelry. Clinging faithfully to a husband caught in the whirlpool of Parisian night life, the heroine fights a vain battle to save him, only to be forced in the end to turn herself fon succor to the staunch friend who once had hoped to win her hand. The latter is skillfully etched by Harrison Ford.

And the soulless interloper, a species with which Paris abounds, is presented with uncanny fidelity by Nita Naldi.

For a real insight into the vagaries of Parisian night life, see this latest First National picture, so ably directed by Al Santell and cleverly acted by Miss Griffith and her cohorts.

$18,000 a Year an Average

After 20 years, the graduates of the law classes of 1905 at Harvard have an average earning capacity of $18,000 a year each. There is one in the class who makes $100,000 a year and there are 17 who earn more than $25,000 a year. The class had 119 graduates and of this number 41 are earning $10,000 or thereabouts. Only four earn less than $2,500.

Honey Bath for Pearls

Baths in newly gathered honey are recommended by a European gem expert to restore the lustre to pearls that have grown dull, says Popular Mechanics. Treatments of 48 hours at two-week intervals for a period of about six months are said to produce the most satisfactory results and the honey should be removed with alcohol instead of water.

POETRY

Psalm 46

God is our strength, we need not fear,
Our hope and help is He.
Though mountains move and disappear
Amid a raging sea.

Although the waters surge and swell
Although the tempests roar,
God is our refuge! All is well
For now and evermore.

The Lord of hosts is with us here,
Who maketh wars to cease,
He breaketh both the bow and spear,
And guideth us to peace.

Fear not! Exalt Jehovah's might,
God is our strength and aid;
He watcheth o'er us, day and night,
We need not be afraid.
—Charles Nevers Holmes

An Unpraised Picture

I saw a picture once by Angelo.
"Unfinished," said the critic; "done in youth";
And that was all, no thought of praise, forsooth!
He was informed, and doubtless it was so,
And yet, I let an hour of dreaming go
The way of all time, touched to tears and ruth,
Passion and joy, the prick of conscience' tooth,
Before that careworn Christ's divine, soft glow.
The painter's yearning with an unsure hand
Had moved me more than might his masterdays;
He seemed to speak like one whose Mecca-land
Is first beheld, though faint and far the ways;
Who may not then his shaken voice command,
Yet tremble forth a word of prayer and praise.
—Richard Burton.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"So Al joined th' police force?"

"Yeh. Yuh know they've been after 'im for some time." —Chicago News.

Grey—Having your car repainted to match your wife's gowns, eh? Isn't it rather expensive?

White—It's cheaper than buying a gown to match the car.—Judge.

She—"What's that player doing over there?"

He—"He's just kicking the ball at random."

A pause.

She—"John, which one is Randolph?" —Dartmouth Jack-o'-Lantern.

Aristocrat—"My house in Toledo is full of antiquities!"

Plutocrat—"Can't you do anything to get rid of them?"—Buen Humor, Madrid.

Wife—"You said you'd have just one drink and be home by ten."

Reveller—"Really, my dear, you mistook me. I ahed'd have ten drinks and be home by one."—London Opinion.

"Is this a jungle scene?" asked the slightly intoxicated individual at a movie.

"No," replied his friend. "You are looking at the picture through the foliage on a woman's hat."—University of Iowa Frivol.

At a lawn party the husband of one of the guests arrived very late.

"I have come to take my wife home," he explained.

"Oh, my dear Mr. Blank," said the hostess, "why didn't you come sooner?" —The Continent.

"Thank you," said Jimmy, politely, when the neighbor gave him a piece of cake.

"That's right, Jimmy," said the woman, "I like to hear little boys say 'Thank you.'"

"Well," said Jimmy, "if you want to hear me say it again you might give me some more."—The Progressive Grocer.

KALEIDOSCOPE

The Washington monument was begun in 1848.

New aluminum produced in the United States in 1924 had a value of $37,807,000.

Occasionally an extra fine bred goldfish will bring $100 or $150 to a Japanese fancier.

Gas, carbon, phenol oil, pitch element and acetic acid all have been reclaimed from ordinary straw by chemical processes.

A fierce controversy is raging in Cairo, Egypt, concerning the recent appearance of a number of Moslem girls on the stage.

Of seventy-three young women attending a county teachers' institute at Atchison, Kan., sixty-seven had bobbed hair.

Sewing machines, containing thirty-five parts, small enough to hold in the hand and yet capable of light work, are being exported from Germany.

The oak pillars in an old church in Poplar, one of the London suburbs, are said to have been the masts of captured ships of the Spanish Armada.

True to the mother instinct, a moose cow, bunted her calf from a railroad track at Prince Albert, Saskatchewan and then blindly charged the oncoming locomotive. The cow was killed but her attack splintered a bar of the cow catcher.

Four prize-winning Holstein cows, owned by Cyrus Stouffer, Smithsburg, Md., which disappeared and which were believed to have been taken by cattle rustlers, were found several days later beneath a haystack on the farm, where they had burrowed.

Occupants of the Josiah Walker farm house in Woodwich, Me., noticed something leaking through the ceiling of one of the chambers. A neighbor was able to cut away a section of the roof and take out 125 pounds of excellent honey without being stung more than five times.

Thirty-five years ago Mrs. Fondelia Wilds, of Dover, Del., received a check for $3.10 for services in appearing before a justice of the peace in settling the estate of her husband. Mrs. Wilds kept the voucher, and a short time ago, remembering that she had it, presented it to the county for payment. The check, dated November 4, 1890, was honored at its face value.

A zealous peace officer at Normange, Tex., intrusted with the collection of a judgment of $100 against the Southern Pacific lines, halted a train, and with a long chain and a lock anchored the engine to a siding. Then the officials demanded that the sheriff remove the attached property from the railway right-of-way. However much he wished to comply with the request, there were fundamental difficulties in the way, and the sheriff had to admit defeat.

The condition of the Irish pig trade is described as the worst for thirty years. The Irish pig is being driven from the British markets, mainly owing to the competition of the Danes. Before the world war Ireland had 976,000 pigs while Denmark had 900,000. Now, Mr. MacKenna, a member of the dail, estimates Denmark has 1,890,000 pigs and the Irish figures have declined. He also attributes the Irish decline to the high cost of feeding stuffs, to the part failure of last year's potato crop, and to a more or less widespread disinclination to breed pigs.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—Hardening of rediscount rates to 4 per cent. by the Federal Reserve banks of Cleveland, Philadelphia and San Francisco leaving New York as the only central institution with the 3 1-2 per cent. charge, was generally ascribed by Wall street as the excuse for the sharp reaction in stocks this week. The selling was based on the theory that the higher rediscount rates would result in heavy withdrawals of interior funds from New York, thereby curtailing the supply of loanable funds on stock collateral. Call money rates, however, have not yet reflected this restriction of stock market credit facilities.

Outside the stock market, two of the greatest financial developments of the week were the heavy oversubscription of the $100,000,000 Italian loan, and the further collapse of the French francs to a new low level for the year.

Wheat prices advanced 5 to 9 cents a bushel above last week's closing quotations in reflection unfavorable weather reports from the Argentine, and reduction of crop estimate in other foreign countries. Cotton futures were reactionary early in the week but closed slightly above last Saturday's final quotations as a result of the brisk rally today which followed the publication of a downward revision of 88,000 bales in the government crop report.

A sharp break in Polish slotys to 15.00 cents, a new 1925 low, was the only important development in the foreign exchange market, outside the weakness of French francs. The other leading European rates moved within narrow and irregular limits.

GREENEVILLE

The annual sale and supper of the Woman's Guild of St. Andrew's Episcopal church which was held Friday evening in the guild room was a great success, $165 being taken in. The committee is grateful to all who attended and helped make it a success. From 5 to 7 p. m. an inviting menu that included baked beans, potato and cabbage salads and other relishes, rolls, cake and coffee was served to about 150 persons. Pretty decorations of roses and Christmas trimmings of the tables and booths made an attractive setting. The sale and supper was under the general direction of Mrs. Fitch A. Dolbeare. At the apron table, Mrs. Erwid, Mrs. Frank Prodell and Mrs. Richard Seed were in charge; fancy table, Mrs. John D. Hall, Mrs. James Johnson; candy, Mrs. Howard Adams, and Mrs. Alice Baker; cake table, Mrs. William Banfield, Mrs. Charles Evans and Mrs. John McKinley; dining room, Mrs. William Mabrey, Mrs. A. Bernard, Mrs. H. Gordon, assisted by Miss Ruth Fitch, A. Winterbottom, Mrs. A. Ducharme, Mrs. Ebberhart Mrs. Armitage, Mrs. Haden, Miss Grace Schutte, Miss M. Wholley, Miss Iola Shaw, Miss Anna Gaucher; supper committee, Mrs. J. Telford, Mrs. Edward Risley, Mrs. W. Hamilton and Mrs. A. Brosofke. Mrs. W. H. Taft was in charge of the tickets.

TAFTVILLE

Mrs. Thomas Brown was surprised Friday evening at her home on Germania avenue by a number of her friends in honor of the first anniversary of her marriage. She received a number of gifts. The evening was spent socially, with games and music and refreshments were served by Mrs. Brown, assisted by her sisters, the Misses Troeger.

Mrs. Eugene N. Monty was the leader of the meeting of the Young People's society of Christian Endeavor held Sunday evening in the vestry of the Taftville Congregational church.

After spending the past week as the guest of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Linderson of North Third avenue, Master Philip Linderson has returned to his home in Gurleyville.

HOLIDAY FUND GROWS FOR STATE SANATORIUM

To succeed the late Mrs. Frederick A. Byrnes, as solicitor for the holiday fund for Uncas-on-Thames, Norwich state tuberculosis sanatorium, Mrs. James Lewis Smith has consented to serve, with Miss Mary E. Richards. Miss Richards and Mrs. Byrnes inaugurated the fund in 1919, six years ago. The public immediately took a practical interest in its growth and each holiday it has provided comforts and cheer for the 160 or more patients at the sanatorium.

Remodeling West Side Garage

The remodeling of the front of the West Side Garage on West Main street is rapidly progressing and will probably be completed within two weeks. The front of the garage building and the front of the property which Louis Rosenberg recently purchased have been cut down and moved back 18 feet from the sidewalk line. In front of the two buildings, which are to be connected, there is being laid a cement driveway for the three gasoline pumps. A canopy is to be erected over the driveway.

Miss Armstrong Teacher

For the eleventh year, Miss Sarah A. Armstrong has begun teaching one of the classes at the Saturday sessions of the sewing school, at the United Workers' house, No. 2 Washington street. As usual, the club work is in charge of Miss Alice W. Coggswell.

STORRS FACULTY MEMBERS WILL ADDRESS FARM BUREAU ANNUAL

Speakers from Storrs and from the state board of health will be on the programme for the annual meeting of the New London County Farm Bureau which is to be held in this city at the Buckingham Memorial with morning and afternoon sessions on Friday, December 4. The meeting is open for all those interested in the work of the farm bureau in New London county.

The session will open at 10.30 a. m. with an address by the Farm Bureau president, Imbert Fellows, of Norwich Town. Arthur H. Davis of Waterford, secretary and W. W. Service of Preston, treasurer, will present their reports immediately after.

Brief reports will be presented at the morning session by Walter T. Clark, county agent and Miss Gladys Stratton, home demonstration agent.

LESSONS ON FRIENDSHIP FROM MOVING PICTURE

A helpful meeting was held at the Y. M. C. A., Sunday afternoon at the usual hour, 4 o'clock. After the singing of hymns, scripture reading prayer and vocal solos by Hugh Kinder, the impressive moving picture, "The Man Without a Country," was shown, on the screen. It portrayed Philip Nolan who was led by another to become a traitor to his country; he was banished forever from his native land and thereby lived a most lonely life. Between the reels General Secretary Edwin Hill gave a brief talk on "Loneliness." The speaker among other things said: "The picture you are seeing today depicts great loneliness; how lonely must a man feel when he has no country to call his own. Philip Nolan brought this all upon himself; he did not appreciate his country, but instead became a traitor and thereby lost his country. Happy is that man who values properly his country, and especially when that country is such a country as ours. Then there is the loneliness that comes to a man who has no friends, and there are such in the world; unusually it is their own fault. A man to have friends must show himself friendly. Many a man is buried in what is called 'Potter's field'; there was no one to own the body. There are men living today who have few if any friends, and they are certainly to be pitied. Friendship is one of the biggest assets of human life. What a blessing to have a friend to whom you can go in your sorrow, in your problems, in your difficulties. We all like to unburden our hearts at times; it seems as though we must do this or lose our grip on life. Let us all cultivate friendship. While the loneliness of a man without a country or a man without friends is terrible yet there is another loneliness that is even worse and that is suggested in Ephesians the second chapter, and the twelfth verse, "Having no hope and without God in the world." There is no loneliness like the loneliness of the man living without God in the world and there seems to be too many such." Those of us who enjoy the companionship of God should do all we can to bring others into that blessed companionship. Let us not be men without a country, but let us love our country. Let us spread the fine spirit of friendship, and above all else let us be true to the God who gives us all things worth having."

Lewis R. Church operated the picture machine.

CONNECTICUT MANUFACTURERS DISAPPROVE SETTLEMENT

The Manufacturers' association of Connecticut, representing 800 leading industrial concerns of the state, has transmitted to President Coolidge a resolution adopted at the annual meeting of the association in which the temporary debt arrangement with France was deprecated tending to weaken French prestige and credit and hinder a rehabilitation of normal business conditions throughout the world.

The resolution which commends the terms of the settlement of the Italian debt and cites this as an example to be followed in other negotiations, recommends that France be advised that the government of the United States is now prepared to reopen negotiations and arrange a settlement along generous lines.

The action of the association is further evidence of the importance which the large business interests of the country place upon an early settlement of all foreign debts and is in line with a similar communication recently addressed by the Illinois Manufacturers' association to Senator Borah, of the committe on foreign relations.

SUCCESSFUL RUMMAGE SALE FOR INDIAN MISSIONS

The members of the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women were highly gratified Saturday evening, at the end of their two days' rummage sale for the benefit of the national Catholic Indian missions, recently described by Rev. John S. Woods.

So liberal were the donations of new and worn clothing that about $75 will be realized from the sales, while two big boxes of garments, etc., will go forward today (Monday) to the Central Mission, Odahah, Wisconsin. One of these boxes was started by Mrs. H. B. Davenport with the generous gift of three handsome pairs of new blankets.

The president of the council, Mrs. Roderick F. Sullivan, of River avenue, Laurel Hill, had general charge, with Miss Anna McCrory, chairman of the sale, which was held in the vacant store, 45 Broadway.

The members of the council and their friends took up the work with such enthusiasm that there is a probability the sale may become an annual event.

Five Before Police Court

There were five prisoners before the city court, Judge Arthur F. Libby, Saturday morning, charged either with intoxication or breach of the peace. Two men were each fined $5 and costs for intoxication and being unable to pay went to jail. Another man paid a fine of $5 and costs for intoxication. Breach of the peace cases against two local men were continued for six months.

Paid Fine in Springfield.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 21.—John E. Fitzpatrick, aged 38 years, who lives in Stafford Springs, Conn., pleaded guilty to the charges of operating an automobile while he was under the influence of liquor and drunkenness in the district court on Thursday and he paid a fine of $115.

The scaffolding has been removed from the home of White Cross Council, Knights of Columbus, on Broadway, and the building is very attractive in its new coat of paint.

WILL STOP PUBLISHING MOTOR VEHICLE REGISTER

Publication of the Connecticut motor vehicle register, giving the ownership and a general description of motor vehicles registered in this state, in numerical sequence according to their registration numbers, will be discontinued by the state motor vehicle department at the end of this year. The response of the public has been insufficient to support it, the department announces.

In the place of it, the department than $1,250 subscriptions have been use of police departments of the state and other special subscribers.

The department has undertaken several times to publish a motor vehicle register for the benefit of the public as well as the police agencies, but has been compelled to give it up for want of enough public support to cover expenses. The 1925 register is being issued in twelve installments, ten which have been sent out to date, and the subscription price is $4. Less than $1,250 subscriptions have been received and the income has fallen far short of the cost to publish it. More than a quarter million motor vehicles are listed in the register so far and it follows that the cost of publishing increases in proportion to the increase in registrations.

Thirty-five of the thirty-seven regular police departments of the state are subscribers to this year's register.

RED MEN'S ANNIVERSARY WITH COUNCIL MEETING

The observance of the fourth anniversary of Mohegan tribe, No. 94, Independent Order of Red Men, was combined with the first meeting of the New London-Middlesex counties Red-Men's council in Steiner hall Saturday evening, having an attendance of over 100 in which eight tribes from this vicinity were represented.

After the council had been called to order by Alfred H. Ligourie of New London, with B. H. Rose of that city as temporary secretary, the following officers were elected: President, Benjamin H. Rose, New London; vice president, William Dowling, Essex; secretary, Fred Fordham, Middletown. Meetings of the council are held monthly and it was voted to hold the next at New London at a date that is to be determined.

Clyde Whitman, acting sachem, presided at the anniversary meeting, introducing the visitors who included Great Sachem E. J. Wilson of West Haven, Great Guard of the Forest Rickert of New Haven, Past Great Sachem Ligourie of New London, Past Great Sachem John E. Morrison of Westerly, from the Rhode Island reservation.

The Red Men's degrees were conferred by Menuketesick tribe of Essex and Nonowantuc tribe of New London.

Refreshments and an entertainment that was given entirely by members of the order under arrangements by Johnston B. Banfield, chairman, closed the most interesting evening.

MOOSEHEART LEGION HELD SUCCESSFUL CARD PARTY

A very successful whist, pinochle and cake sale was held at Moose Home last week by Women of Mooseheart Legion, with Mrs. Teresa Watters in charge. The prizes were awarded as follows: Whist—ladies' first, Mrs. Mary La Valle, hand embroidered towel, embroidered and donated by Miss Margaret Sadusky; second, Mrs. Irene Burns, white enamel kettle, donated by Mrs. Bessie Phillips; gents, first, George Morse, leather belt donated by Mrs. Betty Geofert; second J. F. Donahue, pearl cuff links, donated by Mrs Ida Monrbe; consolations, Miss Margaret Sadusky and Chas. Prodell. Pinochle, ladies' first, Mrs. H. Brown, 6,790, boudoir cap donated by Mrs. Mary Hunter; second, Mrs. Manchester, 6,290, towel donated by Mrs. Hilda Jensen; gents, 1st, Mr. Corn, 6,480, box of handkerchiefs, donated by Miss Pauline Wunderlick; second, Bernard Wunderlick, 6320, silk socks, donated by Mrs. Mary LaValle, consolations Mrs Carolina Hastedt, 3,900, and Mrs. Herring. The scorers were Miss Pauline Wunderlick on pinochle and Mrs. Ethel Hoelck on whist. A cake sale was held after the card playing and a good sum was realized.

Generous to Indian Missions.

After Rev. John S. Woods, of the National Bureau of Catholic Indian charities, Washington, D. C., had spoken in St. Mary's church, New Britain on a recent Sunday of the needs of his mission, the collection was $1,031.

There is a possibility that Father Woods may give a talk in Norwich again and show Indian reels of the national bureau's schools on the desert.

A Merited Tribute.

A former teacher at Norwich Art school, Miss Juliet Warner Robinson, now of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, was among many interested in the recent public memorial tribute to Ozias Dodge. Miss Robinson writes: "I am very glad that they had such a meeting, as Mr. Dodge had done so much and so well for the school."

School Children's Gifts

As in former seasons, Norwich pupils will carry gifts of food supplies to their teachers today (Monday) and Tuesday, to be used toward the Thanksgiving dinners for needy families of the town. This custom began years ago, when Mrs. Fannie Fenner, then city missionary, requested each child to donate one potato, or one apple, or one of each. Now the aggregate of donations is very large.

Service at Sheltering Arms

Rev. H. A. Hunninger, pastor of the First Evangelical Lutheran church, held a service at the Sheltering Arms at 3:30 Sunday afternoon.

The full service of the United Lutheran church book was used. The church choir assisted the pastor, those participating being Mrs. Anna Hero, choir leader; Mrs. H. Hunninger, the Misses Marie Hunzinger, Elizabeth Zerull, Margaret Hunzinger, Margaret Seidel, Hattie Hunzinger, Olga Grebe, Olga Zachae, Irene Werth, and Otto Philipp.

NORWICH TALENT IN PROGRAMME OVER RADIO

The Thanksgiving eve programme to be broadcast from Station WCAC, Storrs Agricultural college, should prove of much interest to the Norwich Radio fans, as this entertainment will be given by Norwich talent. Sponsored by the Norwich Radio club, the program will include local favorites who have taken part in some of the amateur theatrical performances given in this city, including the latest "Princess Bonnie" which has proven so popular with the Norwich public.

This program, which is to be sent out on Wednesday, Nov. 25, at 7:45 p. m. and on a wave length of 275 meters will consist of the following numbers:

PAPER MILL WORKERS ARE GIVEN COMPENSATION

Workmen's compensation awards for two employes of the Inland Paper Board Co., of Versailles have been made by Commissioner J. J. Donohue. In the case of George Peltier, R. F. D., No. 4, Norwich, who suffered a strained back Aug. 3, it is directed that the claimant shall be paid $24.75 for two weeks compensation and the doctor's bill shall also be paid.

In the case of Herbert McCabe of 195 Summit street, who had a fall, May 22, wrenching the muscles of his back by striking a hard surface, the award is that his doctor bill shall be paid and he shall receive compensation of $65.58, which is for 4 6-7 weeks at $13.50.

No Compensation Jurisdiction.

By a finding by Commissioner J. J. Donohue in the workmen's compensation claim of Francis Paquette of 284 Central avenue against John and James C. Adams of 125 Prospect street by whom he was employed on September 28, when a pile of ties fell upon and injured one of his fingers, the ruling is that the claim for compensation and medical attention must necessarily be disallowed and dismissed as the commission has no jurisdiction since the employer employed less than five men.

HOLYOKE FIREMAN WAS HANDY IN NORWICH

About 1:15 o'clock Sunday afternoon the fire department was called out by telephone for a small fire at the residence of Joseph Enos and family, No. 29 Union street. Mr. Enos, Jr., accidently brushed against a curtain with the cigarette he was smoking and a short while later smoke was smelled in the house. Investigation showed that the curtain had taken fire. A man who is said to be assistant chief of the Holyoke fire department, was driving down Union street at the time and noticing the excitement in the house he stopped to investigate. Learning that there was a fire in the house he went in and grabbed the blazing curtain from the window.

In the meantime a call had been sent in to the fire department and they made a quick response. Well, said the Holyoke fireman, here comes the other chief, so I guess I'll be going. Funny I had to come all the way from Holyoke to beat you to this fire, he said to the local firemen as the apparatus pulled up to the scene. The Holyoke visitor then left without anyone learning his name. The damage caused by the fire was confined to the curtain.

At 2:04 o'clock the department was called out by 'phone for a grass fire in the rear of Nos. 89 and 91 Franklin street. A careless smoker is blamed for the blaze which was quickly extinguished. The property is owned by Ashley T. Boon and Thomas Burns.

Four hours later, at 6 o'clock, the department responded to a call for a fire in an automobile in front of No. 14 North Thames street, the fire was caused by a short circuit, there was little damage to the machine which is owned by Jacob Shiturm, of No. 84 Washington street.

Saturday afternoon at 12:49 o'clock the fire department received and answered a telephone call for a supposed fire at No. 12 North Thames street. The family occupying the house had been warned not to use a chimney in the house. They secured a plumber to look over the stove and he reported that the stove was all right and that so was the chimney. So a fire was started in the stove and in a few minutes there was a hurry call to the department for help. It was learned by the firemen that the chimney had been cut off down to the roof level, which was the cause of the house filling with smoke.

The house is occupied by Israel Siegal and the property is owned by Beit Bros.

Given Miscellaneous Shower

Miss Verne Smith, of the Lisbon road, was given a miscellaneous shower Thursday evening in honor of her approaching marriage to Fred Thuber, of Providence, R. I. Many pretty gifts of linen and china were received, music and singing were enjoyed and a buffet lunch was served.

Miss Smith also received a console table and an electric lamp from the inspecting department and office help of the J. B. Martin Co.

Telephone Service Button

Henry A. Lord of 85 Broad street, wire chief of the telephone company, is in the October list of awards of service buttons, having 25 years service with the company.

BANK OF FRANCE TO ADVANCE GOV'T 1,500,000,000 FRANCS

Senate Adopted 173 to 103 Premier Painleve's Bill—Chamber Had Previously Passed the Measure 243 to 44—Action Defers the Solution of France's Political Crisis—M. Briand Has Postponed Decision on Forming of Cabinet Until Today—Impression Prevails in Political Circles in Paris That M. Briand Will Decline.

PARIS, Nov. 23—The solution of France's political crisis has again been deferred, M. Briand, who was asked by President Doumergue to form a new ministry, conferred with the various political leaders during the early evening, but at length requested the present to permit him to continue his efforts tomorrow.

The impression in political circles was that he would eventually decline.

Among those with whom M. Briand consulted after his meeting with the president of the republic this afternoon were Paul Boncour, Louis Loucheur and Senator Dausset, a member of the debt commission. M. Briand, who more than once has been the man of the hour in the most acute situations of his country, told the president that he was extremely unwilling to head the new cabinet, although ready to help in any way out of the present complicated situation. But M. Doumergue prevailed upon him at least to consult with his friends and come to a final decision later.

The Painleve government executed a sort of posthumous function, while M. Briand was looking into the political situation, and successfully appealed to the chamber and senate for authority for a new advance of 1,500,000,000 francs by the Bank of France to the state to take care of immediate demands on the treasury.

The senate adopted M. Painleve's bill by 173 to 103 and the chamber by a vote of 243 to 44, the nationalist bloc and socialists abstaining.

The bill met with the sternest disapproval of the nationalist bloc in the chamber. The nationalist spokesman declared that the bloc could not vote against it, because of France's urgent need, but refused to assist the defunct government to enact one of the measures in its financial proposals. With the socialists they abstained, and it required two votes before a quorum could be obtained and the bill passed.

It was announced during the course of the debate that the additional advance would not involve the issue of more paper money, but bank officials made it known that if the government wanted more advances it would be necessary to print more bills and raise the limit of circulation.

This aroused lively opposition, especially in the senate, but the alternative of the government defaulting its obligations immediately due secured enactment of the measure.

HOW STATE PROPERTY HAS INCREASED IN VALUE

HARTFORD, Nov. 23.—(AP)—The property owned by the state has increased in value, or through purchases during the past year by $4,328,101.73 to an aggregate of $67,126,596.37, according to inventory just completed by the comptroller's department. More than one half the total, $36,661,470 is made up from the item which includes improved roads, bridges and ferries under the jurisdiction of the highway commissioner.

The Connecticut state hospital at Middletown is the most valuable state property, this year's estimate being set at $4,095,392. The capitol and annexes are next in value at $3,188,471.95.

The valuations set on other properties in the custody of the various state departments are as follows:

NOEL SENTENCED TO DIE IN THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Harrison W. Noel, convicted last week of the murder of Raymond Pierce, Montclair negro taxi-cab driver, and confessed slayer of six-year-old Mary Daly, also of Montclair, was today sentenced to die in the electric chair on the week of January 10.

Noel showed no emotion when brought before Judge Edwin C. Caffrey for sentence. His counsel, William A. Wachenfeld, announced he would go to Trenton tomorrow to seek a writ of error from Chancellor Walker, which would automatically stay execution until the case could again be taken up in court on appeal.

Neither Noel's father nor mother were in the courtroom although Howard C. Barber, a New York welfare worker and friend of the Noel family, was present.

Noel was taken back to the county jail immediately after sentence was imposed. A motion by Mr. Wachenfeld asking that the court include in the record of the trial minutes of the hearing that was held to determine Noel's sanity was denied.

FUNERAL OF EMOTIONAL ACTRESS CLARA MORRIS

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Gray-haired men and women who had seen Clara Morris in her days of triumph as an emotional atress joined with friends and celebrities of the state today in her funeral servie at the "Little Church around the Corner."

Before and after the service conducted by the Rev. Dr. Randolph Ray, rector of the church, hundreds of persons filed past the coffin where the actress lay.

The honorary pallbearers included Otis Skinner, John Drew, David Warfield Thomas Meighan and Richard Carle. Burial will be in Kensico cemetery tomorrow. Until then the body will lie in the church from which Joseph Jefferson, Edwin Booth, Richard Mansfield and other famous actors and actresses have been buried.

PROHIBITION AUTHORITIES PREDICT A DRY CHRISTMAS

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—Prohibition authorities today predicted a dry Christmas, despite the fact that four men and 100 cases of champagne were captured on a rum runner off Sandy Hook by the coast guard today. They base their prediction on the reduced smuggling operations off New Jersey and Long Island.

Officials admitted the presence of a new rum fleet off the Jersey coast but said that this was far out at sea, with no unit of the squadron nearer New York than Cape May.

MAY PARDON CHAPMAN SO HE MAY BE EXECUTED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—(AP)—Pardon for Gerald Chapman, so he may be executed for murder in Connecticut, was given consideration by officials today, but no decision was announced.

Chapman was a fugitive from Atlanta penitentiary, where he had served part of a twenty five year sentence. When captured after the killing of a Connecticut policeman, and was loaned to state officials for trial on the murder charge. After fruther study of the case, however, it was intimated today that Attorney General Sargent had concluded a pardon by President Coolidge from the federal sentence was necessary to give the state full jurisdiction to carry out conviction there.

The case was discussed again by Mr. Sargent with Hugh Alcorn, State's Attorney, and George W. Cohen, assistant federal attorney for Connecticut, but all refused to disclose the nature of the conference.

Mr. Sargent later called on President Coolidge, but whether on this or other matters, was not made known.

Chapman's attorneys meanwhile are planning habeas corpus proceedings in Connecticut on the contention that the federal government is unable to release him to the state for execution. This proceeding, atuomatically staying sentence, will allow the further discussion here, if necessary, of legal points.

AUTOMOBILE HOLDUP BY GUNMEN IN BRONX

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Six gunmen in an automobile today held up a truck of the O. W. Rylander company, of Waterbury, Conn., as it passed through the Bronx, en route to this city from Waterbury, Kidnapped the driver and his helper and drove of with the truck and its contents of $4,000 worth of silk and electrical supplies. The truck stripped of its merchandise, was recovered two hours later.

Cliff Adams, the driver, and Fred Spencer, his helper, both of Waterbury, reported to the police that the robber car drove them into the gutter and that six occupants, all armed, forced them to leave the truck nad enter their machine. One of the robbers then drove off with the truck as a police department car containing two patrolmen, passed by unaware of the robbery.

Spencer and Adams were ordered out of the robbers' car in Van Cortlandt park an hour and a half later. They then reported the robbery to the police. The silk and electrical supplies were consigned to New York companies.

TOLEDO TO TAKE CENSUS OF MORON POPULATION

TOLEDO, Ohio, Nov. 23—Wholesale arrests will be made by Toledo police in a general round up of morons starting tomorrow in an effort to bring a speedy end to the series of attacks on girls and women here recently.

The announcement was made tonight by Chief of Police Jennings who said that despite the fact that no more slugginss had occurred over the week end, the police department will open a strenuous campaign to protect the women of the city from the supposed maniac who is held responsible for the death of two women and injury to numerous others.

Included on Jennings' program is a complete census taking of the "moron population" of the city with a view to committing these people to various hospitals and institutions.

LEWIS AND MARKLE HELD LONG CONFERENCE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23—John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and J. Alvin Markle, of Hazleton, chairman of the joint committee of the anthracite operators negotiating committee and the general wage scale committee of the hard coal miners, held a long conference at the Union league here tonight. The meeting was behind closed doors and both men refused to discuss what had taken place.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 23—(A. P.)—A 'suicide' mother" was yesterday appointed by Chief of Police William Severyns in an effort to check suicides among minro girls in this city. That among minor girls in this city. That of the "mother" proves popular was intimated by Chief Severyns.

Policewoman Nan Atkinson, matron at the city jail, was named to be an adviser to girls contemplating suicide.

Mystery Letters Read In Rhinelander Case

Justice Morschauser Excluded All Women From the Court Room After They Had Declined to Withdraw.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 23.—(A. P.)—The last conceivable veil of reticence was torn from the Rhinelander annulment suit today.

Not only were the two "mystery" letters written by Leonard Kip Rhinelander to his negro bride, Alice Beatrice Jones, read in open court, but the defendant herself was taken into a private room so that the jury might determine the color of her skin with some of her clothing removed.

It was a day of one sensation after another. Counsel for the contending sides dropped their usual urbanity and interposed objections to one another's questions; the defendant broke into copious tears and almost suffered hysterics, and women were forcibly removed from the courtroom when they showed reluctance to give up their seats during the reading of young Rhinelander's letters. The day, however, ended quietly, when cross-examination of the young plaintiff ended and minor witnesses took his place.

When Lee Parsons Davis, counsel for Mrs. Rhinelander at length barked, "that's all" it was the end of almost a week of mental torture for the wealthy young plaintiff. Day after day he had been subjected to a merciless, bombardment of questions on intimate details of his love life, culminating today in the public reading of two of his love letters, whose unprintable nature made it necessary to have the courtroom cleared of women. He was tired when the ordeal was finished. He slumped down in his seat and the minor actors in the drama took up their part.

Mrs. Rhinelander suffered too, clinging to her mother's arms she had left the courtroom while her husband's letters were being read. She returned, wrapped tightly in a coat, to play an active part herself. Mr. Davis wanted the jury to see for itself the color of her skin in order to weaken Rhinelander's contention that he thought she was white. At first he wanted the court cleared, but Justice Morschauser suggested that the jury might retire to a private room. Mr. Davis acquiesced and the party, made up of Mr. Davis Isaac N. Mills, Leonard's attorney, Justice Morschauser, a court stenographer, young Rhinelander, Alice and her mother and the jury, filed out. Alice was in tears and shaking with sobs.

Ten minutes later the party returned, Alice alone remaing in the jury room. "Was your wife's colop just the same as it was at the Marie Antoinette?" asked Davis.

"Yes," the witness responded in a low voice.

The two "mystery" letters were centered about events that took place at this hotel in 1921 when Alice and Leonard registered there for a week as man and wife. The threat of their introduction last week had brought two adjournments in order that Mr. Mills and associate counsel might investigate them. Their nature was admittedly so startling that reports rose that the suit might be withdrawn rather than have them revealed. Settlements ranging up to $300,000 were reported but as quickly denied.

Today the plaintiff's attorneys returned to court and said "do your worst." Their defiance, however, was preceded by a statement from Mr. Mills in which he charged the defense with engineering a "deliberate attempt" to trap Rhinelander with force to withdraw the suit. Mr. Davis interrupted with objections, saying Mr. Mills' remarks were prejudicial and a deliberate attempt to bring about a mistrial. A few minutes later he asked that Justice Morschauser declare it a mistrial but his motion was denied.

Before the "mystery" letters were

PARKER HOUSE, BOSTON, HAS SERVED ITS LAST GUEST

BOSTON, Nov. 23.—(AP)—The historic Parker House, birth place of the famous "Parker house roll" and since 1854 one of Boston's most celebrated hostelries, served its last breakfast today. When the last guest had departed, preliminary steps were taken for the demolition of the building to make way for a modern struture of 700 rooms.

The name of Charles Dickens is prominent on the list of celebrated persons who at one time or another made the Parker House their home. Dickens spent a winter there, and recently the Dickens fellowship in Boston paid farewell to the rooms which he occupied and which have been kept since as a literary shrine. A dinner to President Grant and several members of his cabinet in 1875 was another entry in the hotel's history. Among the famous guests down the years were Patti, Bernhardt, Ada Rehan, Henry Irving, Edwin Booth, Mansfield, Clara Louise Kellogg, nad a host of others.

RUSSIA NOT THAWING TO THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

MOSCOW, Nov. 23—Refuting reports from abroad that Russia had changed her attitude toward the league of nations, M. Litvinoff, acting foreign minister, declared today in a carefully prepared official statement, that soviet Russia firmly intended in the future, as in the past, to stand aloof from the league of nations and similar organizations.

The Locarno security treaties, he added, would not alter the soviet foreign policy nor would the fact that Germany, a conquered and weak nation from a military standpoint, was entering the league alter the situation.

Dem. Reconciliation Committee Deadlock

Unable to Agree on Candidates For State Central Committee Chairman and National Committeemen.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Deadlocked, the so-called "reconciliation" committee of the democratic state central committee, appointed to bring in the names of candidates for state central committe chairman and national committeman to succeed E. A. Yeomans and Homer S. Cummings, respectively, adjourned at 7 o'clock tonight after three hours of debate. All eight members were present and although no vote was taken, it was said that four were for Mayor David E. FitzGerald, of New Haven and four for Peter FitzHenry, of Waterbury.

Thomas J. Spellacy, Alexander Sidney Lynch and James J. Walsh expressed themselves in favor of Mr. FitzGerald, while Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch, Judge Thomas and John McDonough were just as outspoken for Mr. FitzHenry.

The meeting was held behind closed doors and while nothing was given out for publication, it was learned that another effort would be made to prevent the fight being carried to the floor of the state central committee at its meeting here December 10. It was decided to hold another meeting of the committee at the office of Thomas J. Spellacy in Hartford, Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Before the special committee went into session, the advisory committee of the democratic party, and the executive board of the democratic women's clubs met and discussed the situation confronting the party in this state.

At the conclusion of the meeting, they were ready to forward their views to the special committee.

It was said that Mayor FitzGerald, Mr. Spellacy and Mr. Cummings came in for considerable criticism at the meeting, which was not open to the public or press.

John A. Cornell, of Bridgeport, presided at the meeting, which was held at the Hotel Taft. He said afterwards that when the meeting opened there seemed to be a spirit of antagonism in the air, but that after the first quarter of an hour, during which time some of the members had urged harmony, this feeling of antagonism seemed to disappear. It was not long, he said, before the whole assembly got solidly behind the resolution which was adopted.

One member who attended the meeting said later, in speaking of the resolution, that it would be a good thing, for it would mean that new men would be selected to lead the party instead of "swapping horses" as he characterized the present situation.

NOTHING FROM COOLIDGE ABOUT MINERS' LETTER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—(AP)—Although the letter from John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, asking whether the government intended to intervene with respect to enforcement of the Jacksonville wage agreement in the bituminous coal industry, was laid before President Coolidge today, no announcement concerning a possible answer was made. Among the president's callers during the day, however, were William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor and former treasurer of the Miners' Union, who was accompanied by Frank Morrison, secretary of the Federation.

Secretary Hoover, whom the Lewis communication named as having assisted in formulating the Jacksonville agreement, which, he charged, was being ignored by large corporations in some fields, was also at the White House, as was Attorney General Sargent. From none of the president's callers, however, could it be definitely ascertained that the coal situation had been under consideration.

After the call of the Federation leaders, which lasted more than an hour, Secretary Sanders announced that President Coolidge had invited them to discuss with him the references to labor legislation he intended to make in his message to congress.

COURT UPHOLDS DEATH SENTENCE OF BOY OF 12

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23—(AP)—The pennsylvania supreme court today upheld the death sentence of William Cavalier, 15 years old, the youngest boy ever sentenced in the state to the electric chair. Cavalier was convicted of murder in the first degree for shooting his grandmother for the purpose of robbery when he was fourteen and a half years old. The court held that his youth was no bar to his paying the death penalty, and quoted authorities that when the child reaches fourteen any special immunity or presumption of incapacity ceases and the infant is practically an adult in the eyes of the criminal law."

BYRN MAWR GIRLS TO BE PERMITTED TO SMOKE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23—(AP)—Byrn Mawr College today abrogated an old rle against students smoking and set aside one room in Ach Dormitory for the use of those girls who desire to indulge in the practice.

This action was taken at the request of the self government association in response to a petition presented to President Marion Edwards Parks last week.

"This does not mean that all students are smokers," said Miss Francis Jay, New York, president of the Self Government Association, in a statement. "A questionnaire sent out showed that many supporters of the change were not themselves smokers, and that, in fact, less than half of the student body smoked."

CHAPMAN TO APPEAR IN COURT NEXT MONDAY

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Gerald Chapman, under sentence to die at the state prison in Wethersfield, December 3, for the murder of a policeman in New Britain, will enter upon a new stage in his fight to escape the gallows next Monday morning at 10 o'clock when he will appear before U. S. District Judge Edwin S. Thomas in the board of pardons room at the prison. This was announced late this afternoon by Judge Thomas after he had signed a writ of habeas corpus prepared by the condemned man's counsel.

TAX REDUCTION BILL READY FOR PRESENTATION IN HOUSE

Revised Estimates Show the Measure in Its Final Form Would Reduce Taxes $336,236,000 Annually—Effects of the Reduced Tax Rates Carried on the Bill Will Be Be Felt Immediately Upon Its Enactment—The Measure Has Been Drafted on a Non-Partisan Basis.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—(AP)—A revenue bill slashing the annual federal tax burden by an amount placed by the treasury at $336,236,000, was completed today by the house ways and means committee.

Drafted on a non-partisan basis, the measure was unanimously approved by the committee, which directed Chairman Green to report it to the house on the opening day of Congress, December 7.

The committee felt justified in exceeding the $300,000,000 reduction limit which it had set, because of estimates that the treasury surplus for the current fiscal year probably would reach $330,000,000 instead of $290,000,000, the original figure.

Effects of the reduced tax rates carried by the bill will be felt immediately upon its enactment. Virtually every taxpayer will be benefitted by the measure. Income taxes alone would be cut by $192,575,000 under the committee program, and the revised rates would be effective on incomes of this calendar year. The congressional leaders plan to have the bill enacted by March 1, and the income taxes are not due until March 15.

The revisions in excise rates, many of which were repealed while others were reduced, and the reduced inheritance schedules, would be made effective upon the enactment of the bill. The changes in the occupational levies, many of which also were repealed, would become effective July 1, 1926.

While the bill was unanimously approved by the committee, some members indicated they would reserve the right to seek some changes on the floor of the house. Attempts probably will be made to repeal the automobile passenger car tax, which the bill cuts from five to three per cent., and to wipe out the provision allowing a retroactive reduction in inheritance taxes.

Revised estimates of the extent to which the bill as now drawn would reduce the government's annual revenue as prepared by the treasury, show that $270,000,000 will be lost next year as a result of the retroactive cut in inheritance rates. This was the principal item increasing the total of $336,000,000, first estimated by the committee as the amount of reductions it approved.

LOCARNO TREATIES ARE DEFENDED IN REICHSTAG

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Chancellor Luther defended the government's acceptance of the Locarno treaties in an impressive speech in the Reichstag today and requested ratification of the treaties on the ground that the restoration and conservation of genuine peace in Europe was bound to rebound to the political and economic advantage of Germany.

His speech dealt in detail with the significance of the security pact and arbitration treaties initialled at Locarno, which he stated represented in the last analysis an amplification of the covenant of the League of Nations.

The chancellor was given a respectful hearing by all parties, and the parliamentary decorum which prevailed was in strange contrast to acrimonious partisan controversies which have been waged over the Locarno treaties since the German delegates returned from Switzerland.

The adoption of the treaties next Friday by an overwhelming majority appears definitely assured, political leaders predicting that hte vote will be in the proportion of three to one in favor of the government.

Chancellor Luther informed the Reichstag that the present cabinet would resign after the treaties have been signed at London, making way for an enlarged coalition government which he said would be pledged automatically to pursue the policies inaugurated with the adoption of the Locarno treaties.

MITCHELL REPEATS HIS SENSATIONAL CHARGES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—Testifying as his own witness, Colonel William Mitchell held the stand in the army court martial today for almost five hours, reiterated under oath his sensational charges against the war and navy departments' administration of the national defense, and defied the prosecution to break down his defense by cross examination.

From the time he concluded the direct examination, which took less than two hours, he was subjected to rapid fire questions by the prosecution counsel Colonel Sherman Moreland, trial judge advocate, yielding to Major Allen Gullion for this cross examination. When the court adjourned, Major Gullion announced that he would conclude his examination within another hour of questioning.

Repeated assaults by Major Gullion apparently had little effect upon the air officer beyond stirring him at times to heated if not angry denunciation of the war and navy sytems for control of aviation. Clashes between Representative Frank R. Reid of Illinois, chief of the defense counsel, and Major Gullion grew exceedingly warm at times, but the court intervened with admonitions to them to address their remarks to it rather than to one another, and invariably the atmosphere lost its surcharge and tempers as well cooled down quickly.

MAIN BARN OF TOLLAND COUNTY FARM BURNED

ROCKVILLE, Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Fire late tonight destroyed the main barn of the Tolland county town farm, here, with a loss estimated at $15,000. It was the third fire in this section within a week with a total loss of more than $400,000.

Forty inmates at the farm, housed in the main building about 100 feet from the blaze, were greatly alarmed by the fire, which was swept by a high wind, but they were soon controlled by the officials with no injury to any of them.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON.

Colonel Mitchell testified before his court martial.

The Shenandoah court heard testimony as to the state of that ship's gas cells.

The new tax bill was ordered reported by unanimous vote of the house ways and means committee.

The Standard Oil company of California lost a decision in the District of Columbia supreme court in the Elk Hills litigation.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR WAS FOUND GUILTY OF ASSAULT

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Alberto Baccolini, musical director of the Boston Civic Opera company, today was found guilty of assault in the third degree, and was given a suspended sentence. The assault charge grew out of an altercation on the night of September 18, at the Manhattan Opera house when Baccolini was alleged to have struck Frank Sherman, a walking delegate for the Choristers.

FURTHER TESTIMONY IN MACRI MURDER CASE

LITCHFIELD, Conn., Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Some man other than John Bagnana, shot by Olympia Macri in the Palace theatre, New Haven, on February 26, last, was talking to Miss Macri on the stairway of the theatre an hour or two before Bagnana was killed, Joseph Massaro testified today at the second trial of Miss Macri charged with murder.

Massaro, who is floor director of the Palace, said that he saw the girl and man more than once as he walked about the lobby on that afternoon. He didn't know who the man was, but he was certain that it was not John Bagnano, whom he knew. The witness had never given this testimony before either at the previous trial or before the coroner.

After he heard two shots later, he rushed out to the sidewalk and pushed his way through a crowd. There he saw the girl standing over Bagnano "deliberately fire two shots at the body." He didn't know whether they "hit it or not," Massaro testified.

"Good enough for him, he got what he deserved," the girl addressed the body, according to the witness. He didn't "notice until after the shots were off that the man was Bagnano."

Joseph Errico, of New Haven, who was in the office of John Goggins, theatrical agent in the Poli building, at the time of the shooting and Samuel Parillo, a New Haven amusement agent who offered to "book Miss Macri for a singing act in Hartford," also testified today, the fifteenth day of the retrial.

Mrs. Marion Bagnano, sister-in-law of the man shot by Miss Macri, Mrs. Bagnano's cousin, who began her testimony Friday, was recalled as the first witness. She was cross-examined by Joseph Koletsky, defense counsel and then dismissed.

When court adjourned for the day, counsel was reading the record of the testimony of John A. Tierney, New Haven singer, given at the first trial. Tierney has since disappeared and could not be located by Stanley Giannelli, New Haven county detective. Samuel Weiner, another state witness at the former trial in New Haven, also could not be located for the retrial. By agreement of counsel, their previous testimony was read into the records.

TESTIMONY WITHHELD IN SHENANDOAH INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Discovery that testimony had been withheld from it aroused the ire today of the Shenandoah navel court of inquiry which aresult that three of the survivors came in for sharp questioning.

Arthur E. Carlson, aviation chief rigger, disclosed that he had tied up the internal gasing manifold fifteen minutes before the aircraft was wrecked. This separated one-half of the helium gas system from the other and was done, explained, to trim the ship, which was then down by the nose.

Asked why he had not testified to this upon his previous appearances Carlson said he regarded the matter as immaterial to the investigation. Pressed by Rear Admiral Hilliary P. Jones, president, Carlson with apparent reluctance said Lieutenant Charles E. Bauch, another survivor, had suggested to him that he say nothing about it unless asked specific questions by the court.

Lieutenant Bauch gave a slightly different version of the conversion. His account was that Carlson had asked him whether he should testify about this incident and his reply had been: "Of course, if they ask you about it tell them."

CONDITION OF COLONEL COOLIDGE IS IMPROVED

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Nov. 23—The condition of Col. John C. Coolidge, father of the president, was a great deal improved today and he passed the best day since his illness, it was learned.

No statements were available from either of his physicians. Dr. Albert A. Cram of Bridgewater and Major James F. Coupal, the president's physician, had nothing to say regarding the condition of the patient.

It was understood from other sources, however, that the colonel had been in good spirits and immediate recurrence of a severe nature was not anticipated.

Col. Coolidge was first taken ill with heart disease a week ago Sunday and although his condition was bad last Wednesday he has continued to improve with the exception of Sunday, when he failed slightly.

ANOTHER ITALIAN SUICIDES AT WILLIMANTIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 23—A fairly well dressed Italian believed to be about 35 years old and whose identity and place of residence remains undetermined leaped to his death from the railing of the stone bridge at the foot of Jillson Hill, near Thread Mill square into the No. 1 race-way of the American Thread company mills about 11:30 o'clock this morning. The force of the water running through the race-way carried the body some one hundred and fifty yards into the Willimantic River where it was found a little over an hour later.

In the mans clothing was found a pocketbook containing a $50 bill, a $2 bill and $1.40 in change. In another pocket was an empty envelope which gave the only clue to the young Italian's identity. Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton and Chief of Police McArthur studied the handwriting carefully under a magnifying glass. From badly faded letters the name Segeara Piride and the address 421 or 921 Washington street, Torrington, could be discerned. Taking into consideration the Italian custom of placing the family name first, it is the opinion of the officials that the man's name was in reverse to the one given above. The Torrington police were asked to conduct an investigation. The envelope had been mailed from Italy and bore the stamp of the Italian postal department.

Still another clue as to the man's recent whereabouts was furnished through the label of a new cap which he wore and which showed that it had been purcased from Saul Friedland of Norwich, Conn.

Upon the recovery of the body by Officer Grant Bombria, Former Chief of Police Edgar H. Richmond and John Kelley, Medical Examiner Dr. William L. Higgins of South Coventry was summoned in the absence of Medical Examiner Mason who is ill. Examiner Higgins declared death due to suicide by drowning and gave permission for the removal of the remains to Kilbourey Brothers undertaking parlors where the body is awaiting identification. Mr. Richmond was first to come upon the body.

Events immediately preceding the suicide show that the man had been prevented from leaping through the railing of the bridge shortly after eleven o'clock, by Eugene J. Dion a local realtor, who happened along and drew the young Italian back into the road as he tried to climb through the railing which sets on a three foot stone wall lining the west side of the span. The man was asked what the trouble was but his only reply in English was to cry out, "Trouble, Trouble Trouble!" at the same time showing much emotion and holding his head as if in pain. Mr. Dion induced the man to come with him to the store conducted by Gus Giraca on Main street where Mrs. Giraca attempted to determine his trouble in his native tongue. She could get no reply, however, other than that he did not know. His mind appeared to be hazy and she told him to go further up the street to the Mike Mazzola store. The stranger walked up Main street about one hundred feet to the corner of North street and then turned around and walked back down toward the Thread Mills. At 11:30 Raymond Gervais, aged 10, and his brother, Paul, aged 6, of 54 West Park street and pupils at St. Mary's Parochial school saw a man walk down the sidewalk and climb quickly over the bridge railing. He dropped some fifty feet into the rushing water of the race way and disappeared. Others came along about that time and upon being told what had happened notified the police. About the time that he talked with Mr. Dion the man's action had attracted others including William Bushnell of 46 West Park street. The Italian said that he was going to jump into the river but when he was escorted away by Mr. Dion it was believed that he would be influenced not to take this course. It is the second time within eighteen days that young Italian men have committed suicide in this city. Guiseppe Distefano was found dead from a bullet wound on the day preceding his wedding. There were extenuating circumstances in this death which are still under investigation.

MANSFIELD COURT SETTLES DAMAGE CASE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 23—M. D. Avanzo, of New Britain, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace George H. Andrews in the Mansfield town court this forenoon at 10 o'clock on the charge of reckless driving. On Aug. 31 last Azanzo's car skidded on the wet highway at Perkin's corner and struck a wagan owned by Charles Carpenter, damaging the outfit to the extent of $25. Avanzo agreed at that time to settle for the damages but informed the court Monday that he had not received a bill of damages. The complainant stated that he had forwarded a bill and when it remained unpaid he notified the authorities. Avanzo was placed under arrest by State Policeman Walter Hardisty of the Stafford Springs barracks. There was no indication of reckless driving and Justice Andrews nolled the case on payment of the costs of $22.55 and damages to the wagon, $25. Grand Juror Carleton King prosecuted the case.

VISIT TO STORE NEARBY COSTLY FOR LIBERTY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 23—Ernest Liberty, who conducts a restaurant at Thread Mill square reported to Capt. of Police Grady early this afternoon that $14 had been stolen from his cash register while he left the establishment unprotected for a few minutes to visit in the store next door. The police are making a thorough investigation of the theft.

HOCKS COWS TO RAISE ANDOVER COURT FINE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 23—The persistent and mysterious disappearance of gasoline from the state highway supply station in Andover during the past few months, which was solved Sunday night when John Bonkowski of that town was caught red handed in the act by Deputy Sheriff Allison L. Frink, and Constable W. H. Hillard of Andover, assisted by Constables William D. Kelley and Louis H. Hodis of this city, resulted in a court trial this forenoon. Donkowski was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Charles A. Faulkner. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $10 and costs, amounting to $105.95 and a 30 day jail sentence was imposed but suspended. The costs included a reimbursement for 30 gallons of gasoline which was the amount said to have been stolen. Mr. Nye, who has charge of the station, testified to the theft of the gasoline. Bonkowski said that he was willing to pay the assessment but did not have the cash. It looked for a time as if he would have to be taken to jail but Sheriff Frink came to the rescue, by advancing the money and taking four cows owned by the defendant, into his possession as security. He also arranged for the payment of the fine on a conditional bill of sale for two days, during which time Bonkowski must raise the money. Residents of Andover sat up and took notice some time later when Sheriff Frink assisted by Constable Kelley of this city appeared on the highway leading four cows to the sheriff's premises.

In making allowances for family conditions which he believed to be miserable enough financially without the payment of a fine, Judge Foss imposed a thirty day suspended jail sentence, with a one year probation term, on Mrs. Tillie Bycel, who was arraigned Monday morning on a charge of violation of the liquor law. Mrs. Bycel is a widow and supporting her family. When asked what she had to say her only reply was that she would never be caught again. The costs in the case amounted to $8.15. Her place was the one raided Saturday evening by Police Officers Hurley, Laramee and Orlando.

Harry Heller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore (Jake) Heller was placed under arrest Monday afternoon, by State Policeman Henry Heinold of Stafford Springs on a charge of having falsely affirmed and sworn to the fact that he was 18 years of age when applying for a motor vehicle operators license on August 20th. last. The version is that Heller was born on October 3, 1908 indicating that he was but 16 years and ten months old at the time he received his license. The application was signed by John F. Shea, notary public. Heller will be arraigned in police court this (Tuesday) morning.

A boy with a new air rifle, a pot-shot, and a dent in the fender of a Ford car which the owner was just polishing were the circumstances which led to rounding up of Leo Bernier, 16, of 44 Ives street, the boy with the rifle, and Louis Breton, 25, a neighbor, the man polishing the Ford. Reports of a big fight on Ives street brought Officer Bombria to the scene. He notified both parties to appear in court. Breton admitted Monday morning that he had slapped the youngster. The latter insisted that it was more than a slap. He called it a blow and said that it had knocked one of his upper teeth out. The officials were inclined to believe that the punishment was deserved but the matter was settled out of court when the principals and relatives went into conference.

The case of Frank St. Martin, charged with theft and violation of the liquor law was ordered continued until Saturday morning when St. Martin informed the court Monday that he desired to secure counsel. St. Martin was the man alleged to have "short-changed" Theophile D. Marcoux by retaining a $20 bill and the man's pocketbook when Marcoux paid for two drinks which he and a friend, Ernest Desautelles, had just purchased fro mhim.

Working on the slim clue that the machine which had struck and painfully injured Charles McGhorlick, six year old pupil at the Andover school, last Friday morning, bore a man wearing a hunting coat and a dog as passengers, Deputy Sheriff Allison L. Frink placed the blame on John Shaffer of 852 Albany avenue and "Bud" Fisher of 232 Broad street, Hartford, Saturday morning. One of the men nearly fainted when told that the machine had struck a child. Shaffer and Fisher were taken to the Andover town court where they proved to the satisfaction of all concerned that although they remembered driving past a number of school children who were leaving a bus on the highway, they did not have the slightest idea that one of them had been struck. They readily agreed to pay for all medical attention and the case against them was discharged. The McGhorlick child was hurt about the face and body but not seriously. Learning that the car contained a hunting party Sheriff Frink traced the machine to Hebron where the men had hunted in the forenoon and to Scotland where they had enjoyed the sport later in the day.

The net sum of $146 was contributed here Saturday during Children's Tag Day conducted here under the auspices of the Volunteers of America. In a statement made public Monday by a representative of the organization much credit for the success of the tag day s given to the city officials, newspapers, the merchants who furnished the incentive, the work of the children and to Miss Edith Willett who led the drive. As a result of the competition for prizes Doris Burnham collected $14.60, Mary Garra, $12.41 and Gertrude Brown $9.92. Many other children were awarded free motion picture admissions.

Benjamin Kirshen of Mansfield and Adjutor Bernard of this city, who were notified to appear in police court Monday morning, following a collision of their cars at the intersection of Valley and Church streets at 10 o'clock Sunday night, announced before the opening of court, that they would settle amicably for damages and injuries and the court discontinued action against them. Kirshen sustained a broken arm when his car was thrown over on its side in colliding with the Bernard machine.

A Policeman's Benefit dance, something that local people have heard about only through the funny-papers and motion picture comedies, will be staged here next month by members of the local police department. It is the first social event ever attempted by the personnel of the department. The livewire committee consists of the finest of the finest: Arthur M. Hurley, chairman, R. Rudolph Laramee, Grant Bombria and Edward Patrick Leahy. These veterans of tattle, raids and other incidentals of police work will now take a hand at the more polished side of life and they jovially remark that if they run short of dancers they'll go out and bring some in.

A large show window, 120 by 84 inches, in front of the Martineau-Bacon store on Union street was smashed in a peculiar manner at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon when the right rear wheel came off a delivery truck driven by Harold Walsh and bounded over the curbing into the plate glass. The lower portion of the window was wrecked.

Miss Helen Lucey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lucey of 23 Mansfield avenue and William L. Chappell of 1230 Main street were married Saturday evening at o'clock by Rev. Henry E. Quinn, pastor of St. Joseph's church. They were attended by Miss Katherine Lucy, sister of the bride and Charles L. Garren of Hartford. The bride wore a gown of tan georgette with brown chenille trimmings and gold lace hat. Her bridesmaid was attired in poudre blue georgette with silver trimmings and silver hat to match. A turkey supper was served at the home of the bride. The couple will reside in this city, the groom being employed as a foreman at the Vanderman Manufacturing company plant. Up to recently the bride was employed in Hartford.

Couldn't Stop Engine

A stuck throttle on the locomotive of a Pennsylvania railroad passenger locomotive near Hamburg, Pa., caused one of the most freakish accidents in the history of the railroad. The train was traveling nearly 60 miles an hour when the engineer discovered that he could neither take off nor put on steam. The train was rapidly approaching a station so he turned on the air and brought the train to a stop with the brakes. But the wheels of the locomotive continued to revolve at a high speed, wearing grooves in the rails and creating a terrific noise. The engine was stopped only after water had been poured on the fire to reduce the steam pressure. It required more than an hour to bring the wheels to a halt.

DANIELSON

DETAILS LACKING IN DEATH OF A. M. DANIELS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Nov. 23—Archie M. Daniels, an employe of the N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R. company, in the Providence yards, was instantly killed in that city today, according to information received by relatives here. No details of the accident were received, but it is believed he was killed while on duty. The accident happened at 1:30 a. m. Mr. Daniels was the husband of Miss Margaret Doyle, formerly of this town. The couple have three children.

FOX AND COON HUNTERS ALL SET FOR THURSDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Nov. 23—The fox hunters and coon hunters will be resting up tonight. They'll be in bed early on Wednesday night, too, that they may be fit and in fine fettle for the big hunt on which they will start at daybreak Thanksgiving morning. Arrangements for the event have been completed and is assured of being a success if numbers of hunters and dogs to participate counts for anything. There should be some tall stories to be told by Thanksgiving afternoon. And at night comes the big coon hunt. All of this means that the hunters will be resting up again early Friday night.

That little news item out of Washington in Monday's papers telling about a forthcoming order revoking permits to make 200 gallons of wine for home use has made a few people hereabouts sit up and wiggle their ears. Here they have gone and made wine, not necessarily 200 gallons by any means, and figured they had done it legally. Now they're to be asked at once to give up thei rpermits; in fact, they are going to be told the permits are revoked and no longer of any value whatsoever. They now ask, "what is wine, without a permit?" The feeling here is that no one will drink it, all self-respecting vinegar will reject it as vulgar, illegitimate and without standing, refusing to assimilate it, so there seems nothing to do but revoke the wine. Just how to do this is a problem. Revoking wine is said to be a much different operation than drinking it. The revoking process is little understood here, so the wine-makers are in a problem. Possibly the solution of the problem created by the revocation of permits will force the wine owners to wrap it in swaddling clothes, put it in a basket and leave on somebody's door step, being careful not to ring the bell. Then it can be taken to the foundling home for revoked wine and left to the tender mercies of anyone who may be in charge there.

Providence papers note that Benjamin Brown, of Danielson, now a member of Brown university faculty and coach of the dramatic organization, was grief-stricken at the death of Thomas Johnson, 1925, who passed away unexpectedly at a Boston hospital when he was regarded as on the road to recovery after undergoing an operation. On Friday of last week, Mr. Johnson was a luncheon guest in Providence, of Mr. Brown.

Danielson people who were Sunday visitors at the Kent dam, near Scituate, were surprised to find a depth of about 35 feet of water just back of the dam and with the new lake taking on proportions. The water extends back nearly to the bridge on the Plainfield pike. This new lake will drain approximately 100 square miles. It is the water supply project on which the city of Providence has had contractors engaged for several years and on which it has expended millions of dollars, incidentally razing mills, dwellings and other buildings to make possible the carrying out of the monster plan.

In view of the fact that Danielson bank's are to release well over $100,000 in Christmas club funds early in December, it is of interest to note that such funds in the United States this year will reach the amazing total of $314,000,000, with 6,800 banks figuring in the disbursement. A survey covering last year's Christmas club disbursements of $300,000,000 is reported to have shown that $100,000,0 almost immediately found its way into stores in the rush of Christmas buying. About $38,00,000 was used for paying insurance premiums and in reduction of mortgages. Another $34,000,000 went into taxes, $12,000,000 for coal bills and other obligations maturing at the end of the year. The tidy sum of $88,000,000 was redeposited in savings accounts.

This survey would indicate that the distribution of Christmas club money was diverse and a benefit to many lines of business.

"Shop now and mail early for early delivery," says a circular issued at the Danielson postoffice and bearing the signature of Postmaster General Harry S. New. The circular sets forth in detail how packages should be packed and wrapped, with valuable suggestions for special packing of such articles as cut flowers, candies, paintings and many other things. Parcels for foreign countries should be mailed in November, the circular says, to insure delivery by Christmas. Long sea travel and customs inspection abroad are users of time, so mailing should be done early.

Monday evening members of the Danielson Girls' club and their guests attended a dinner specially arranged for them at the Attawaugan hotel. A chicken dinner was served. An orchestra played during the evening, part of which was devoted to pleasing an interesting features.

In this last week of November contractors engaged with outdoor work have commented on the good run of weather the yhave had since the month opened, though there have been some rainy days. One or two projects have been helped materially by the uniformly good weather for so late in the season. There may be something in the dire prophecies of the hard winter just ahead, but if November continues to be good, there'll not be so much of it.

It is not likely that Danielson housewives will have to resort to the "no-potato" days that Providence women are talking of because of the high prices of the tubers over in that city. Hundreds of bushels of potatoes were stocked here late in September and early October at $1.50 a bushel. Families that have these stored away are not worrying about current prices, which are not near so high from growers hereabouts as the sky high quotations one hears of fro mnearby cities.

PUTNAM

TEXT OF DECISION ON POMFRET SCHOOL CASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 23—The full text of the decision given by Judge Edwin C. Dickinson of the superior court in the suit brought by the Pomfret school against the town of Pomfret, an appeal from the board of relief, is of interest to every person in this community and to the public at large. The school was put down for taxation purposes at $185,000 and the authorities asked that it be exempted from taxation on the grounds that it was a school. The town of Pomfret set up the claim that it did not come under that provision because it was a rich man's school, that only the sons of wealthy people could afford to pay the tuition and that the town had to send its high school pupils to Putnam for educational training.

The court decision upholding the defense was as follows:

The Pomfret school is a specially chartered corporation without capital stock. As such, of course, it is not and can not be conducted "solely for profit," and the evidence shows that pecuniary profit is neither an object nor an accomplishment, the school operating at an annual loss.

While it prepares for college, confessedly it is after the order of the English form school and is divided into six forms or grades, the first two grades, the first two forms including subjects which with the exception of Latin and French are taught in the last two grades of the public primary schools. It is thus, compared with the public schools of this country, a hybrid in that it is partly primary and partly secondary. In this respect it differs from the Brunswick school more in degres than in principal, for it cannot be said of it that its buildings are "exclusively occupied for the maintenance of a school where instruction is given in grades superior to those of the ordinary primary schools."

It requires residence of its pupils at its dormitories. It demands for "tuition and residence" a fee patently out of reach of the average purse. Its aim, it may be said, I believe, as a matter of common knowledge, with other schools of its kind, is not chiefly to prepare its students for college. That any public high school may do. Its purpose is to surround the pupil with a certain atmosphere of culture; to assure him of a certain type of associates, and to give him the standing that the graduate of such a school has. It may not be said of it as was said of another school in the case of Loomis Institute vs. Healey, that "the purpose was to found a school where instruction would be free." "The matter concerns a public charity" its primary purpose was "to give free and gratuitous instruction."

In short, it is a private school of the type concerning which the court said in Brunswick vs. Greenwich, "Such schools were never intended to be exempted from taxation by the statute in question." It is a school, still in the words of the Court in that decision, "calculated manifestly to interest only those who have the means and disposition to separate their children from the public schools" and while, to continue the quotation, this, "the law permits them to do." it is not to be expected that the public will help maintain such schools by exempting them from taxation. For the property of such an institution is not "devoted exclusively to the common good," but to the good presumedly of a chosen few.

The appellant cites the case of Yale University vs. New Haven in support of his contention that such an institution although, "maintained in a sense for the favored few" is, in law, like Yale university, exempt from taxation. It may be said in respect to this claim that the State does not furnish free college education. It has specially exempted from taxation Yale, Trinity and Wesleyan colleges and Sheffield Scientific school. It provides as to Yale college that the governor and lieutenant governor of the state shall be ex-officio fellows; that copies of the state documents be sent to the law library; and that the bodies of dead convicts be sent to the medical school for anatomical purposes. It thus gives its assistance to and he its representatives in this institution for a higher education which it does not but might well itself furnish. Primary schools and high schools, on the contrary, have been established and are maintained throughout the state. In those towns where there are no high schools provision is made for tuition and travel to the nearest school of that character.

What then, would be the practical effect of an exemption such as the appellant claims? It would be to compel the town of Pomfret, already taxed for the education of its own youths, to in effect pay the taxes of an institution from which its youths derive no benefit and so to assist in the education of non-resident youths at an expensive private school.

In conclusion it may be said that "a claim of exemption from taxation by virtue of a statute is construed strictissimi juris. It must rest upon language in regard to which there can be no doubt as to the meaning and the exemption must be granted in terms too plain to be mistaken."

It is held that the facts in the instant case bring it within the ruling in the Brunswick School case.

Judgment is directed for the defendant and the application is dismissed.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

DEALING WITH SHIPPING BOARD

From first to last much has been said about the shipping board. For some time it has also been possible to pass judgment upon the manner in which it has been functioning, and it is a matter of frequent occurrence for the comment to be made that the board is failing to accomplish what was expected of it and in a large degree due to the methods of doing business and the fact that it is out of tune with administration policies. Some progress was made in the way of reduced expenses under the recent arrangement whereby certain powers were delegated to the head of the fleet corporation, but there exists a situation which does not seem likely to be eliminated as long as the shipping board is retained.

For that reason there was much sympathy with the move by President Coolidge in appointing an investigator to probe into the activities of the board and the fleet corporation, and there is bound to be an equal interest in the report which he has just made as the result of his investigations.

Investigator Dalton has reached the conclusion following his inquiries that the shipping board should be done away with as far as operating of ships is concerned, that the duties should be administered by the fleet corporation which should be made up of four members of the cabinet, three more from the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf regions and the chief executive of the board who with the regional members should be named by the president and all be subject to the pleasure of the president. This would place the operation of the merchant marine under one person, even as the departments of the government are and as it has been urged it should be. Mr. Dalton also emphasized the importance of the government getting out of the business of owning and operating the merchant ships as rapidly as possible.

These recommendations are not distinctly new. They are in keeping with what has been urged by Secretary Hoover as a means of ending the present unsatisfactory situation, and they certainly provide a reasonable remedy for getting better results and putting the merchant marine into private hands more rapidly. It is highly probable that the president will lose no time in voicing his sentiments concerning the report.

WHAT LOWER TAXES DID

The subject of taxation is one which has received much attention for some time. There has been a continuous cry for reduction and yet when there has been a suggestion made for the lowering of certain rates for the general benefit of the revenue situation there was a howl of protest. Reductions have been accomplished but the cuts were not in accord with what was urged for the general benefit of the tax situation.

Certain reductions were made reluctantly and yet it is found that under the reduced rates there was a larger aggregate return from taxation than under the higher rates. This bears out the contention that was made at the time the last tax revision was under consideration that the cutting of taxes would have its good effect upon business and place more funds under conditions that would produce income taxes than was the case when the high taxes drove such funds into tax exempt securities.

According to the figures which have just been disclosed on the 1924 incomes there was an aggregate of $689,-514,000 received, and this represents a gain over 1923 of $25,482,000 in spite of the fact that there was more than a third of a million less returns.

This is proof of just what was maintained when tax reduction was under fire. It has since been recognized by those who were doing their best to oppose further cutting. They have come to appreciation of the fact that while high taxes might seem to be the means of extracting the largest sum it does not work out in practice. Those who can escape it are bound to do it, and yet when reduced taxes invite a return to normal conditions those funds which were frozen up are quickly thawed out and productivity and tax returns quickly reflect the change.

There are times when it pays to listen to those who have made a study of taxation. This at least is shown by the outcome.

RUMORS OF COAL PEACE

Rumors about peace in the coal fields have been flying about. There was nothing definite about them other than some persons had a hunch that an agreement would be reached soon. That gave indication that someone may have had inside information, that someone may have been studying the situation a little closer than others or that guesswork was being resorted to as the result of certain signs. When a settlement would be reached was left indefinite.

If we are to judge by the result of the meeting of the coal operators last week it doesn't appear that any special progress has been made toward an understanding. There have been intimations by the heads of the miners, but inasmuch as the general impression of the mine owners, as the result of their meeting was that "the strike must go on some time longer before a state of mind is reached from which any settlement can come" there seems no likelihood of an early adjustment.

The operators have agreed that there will be no settlement unless there is a provision in it for arbitration of and differences occurring in negotiations of future wage settlements. President Lewis of the miners has talked about a five years agreement but he has stood firmly from the first against arbitration.

Thus there does not appear to be any ground for clinging to the belief that there is going to be any early settlement, or for harboring the idea that it will not be necessary to resort to substitutes. If the talk about a settlement soon was intended to convey any such impression it was unjust to the consumer who has not laid in his supply of fuel for there is certainty that hardships will result if dependence is placed upon getting the usual supply of anthracite through prompt peace terms.

The consumer is now experiencing the effect of the strike in higher prices and the necessity of adopting other fuel, but he has reason to be thankful for the fact that he isn't dependent upon hard coal to keep warm.

FRANCE'S TROUBLES

Once more eyes are turned upon France in its cabinet crisis. The Painleve government has fallen under the nagging and pressure that was expected. There is a political situation which is hard to satisfy inasmuch as it is next to impossible to get the various combinations to cooperate and the result under such conditions can be expected to be a brief existence. That is what was predicted for the Painleve cabinet and the forecast was correct.

The resignation of the cabinet means that there will be a new man at the helm. For the eighth time Briand has been called to meet the situation. It is no easy task and even this veteran knows it. Whether he will accept the job will depend upon the success he encounters in sounding support.

The tangled situation is made all the worse because of the financial problem which that country must solve. Were that alone its only difficulty it would no doubt hasten a solution, but in undertaking it with an uncertain support, with a coalition government which is pulling apart instead of standing together, the outlook is not a pleasing one. Perhaps Briand will prove to be the wizard that can meet the requirements of the situation. France knows that it must make provision for its obligations and it understands that it stands on the brink of currency inflation. If the Painleve policies had received support the situation would have been met. It is not impossible for Briand to bring forth equally good policies but there's no more certainty that he would get the support that has been denied Painleve

RADIO PROGRESS

Much attention has been directed to the automobile industry, the great strides it has made, the huge investment involved, the steadily increasing volume of production and the part it plays meeting the demands of the present day. But it is not the only industry today that commands attention for its rapid advancement.

According to the head of the Radio Manufacturers' association the radio business has grown by leaps and bounds in a very short time. By his report there are 1200 manufacturing plants employing 300,000 hands and where the annual turnover was $6,000,000 five years ago it is now in excess of $500,000,000.

Such represents what the demand of the listening public is and how it appreciates what is furnished by radio. For the purpose of serving the radio fans there are 584 broadcasting stations and but for the fact that it is necessary to get permits to broadcast there is no telling what the number would be. How generally radio has been adopted is indicated by the figures for last year which show the sale of 3,000,000 radio sets and 20,000,000 tubes.

With this situation disclosed there can be greater appreciation of the need of just such regulation as was recommended before the radio conference at Washington this month. There is a demand not only for radio programmes but for good ones and better ones. There cannot be a continual cluttering up of the air without some regard of the great army of listeners. Radio has made rapid progress and has long since passed the point where regulation was necessary.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It will never be possible to get anthracite back into the list of necessities.

While many are going to Florida for work it is no place for coal operators or miners.

When it comes to devising or adopting substitutes for anthracite, leave it to Yankee ingenuity.

It is inevitable that there should be predictions about the end of the coal strike but predictions bring no warmth.

After hearing of Ponzi's scheme perhaps Florida will put the bars up against undesirables.

Being denied the usual amount of anthracite this winter that will mean the purchasing of less Pennsylvania real estate.

BORROWED PLUMAGE

Miss Belinda's brother gave her a quizzical look. The last one of their house party guests had just departed. As they turned from waving her goodby Ben seized his sister's arm and stopped the progress up the driveway.

"Now, tell me the truth, you fraud," he said. "Let's sit down here in the garden while you confess."

"Confess? Confess what, pray?"

"I'd like to know the real history of Mrs. Lane's suitcase, Belinda. It's arriving so opportunely just on the eve of her departure struck me as a trifle fishy, my dear. I didn't see any one come with it yesterday."

"Well, Ben," Miss Belinda laughed, "even your eagle eye doesn't see everything that occurs at Hilltop."

"Did that suitcase arrive yesterday?"

"Since you insist upon knowing, it did not, but what's that to you, Ben?"

"I'm only curious to know why you secreted a guest's suitcase. Crooked work, my dear. Don't you think you ought to explain it?"

Miss Belinda laughed. "Sometimes, Ben," she said, "I wish you weren't quite so keen.

"As you weren't here when Mrs. Lane arrived, I suppose I may best go back to the beginning. She came on the bus. I met her in the village, and she was frightfully upset when she discovered that her suitcase, which she had checked, was not in the baggage carrier. I spoke to Joe, the driver, and told him that he must surely bring it the next day. He's a good fellow, and he said that he would get it here if he had to search all Milwaukee for it, but it took him three days to get it here. Of course, I had to lend Mrs. Lane some of my duds. Fortunately we are about the same build, and I do think she looked nicer in them than I do, and I—"

"Yes?"

"Anyway she looked nicer in them than she would have in her own things."

"What makes you think that?" asked Ben. "It sounds catty."

"When the suitcase got here finally it was much battered, in fact it was open and the frocks were fairly tumbling out of it. That was the day Maj. March drove her to Madison, so I thought it would be kind to take out her things and have them pressed before she got back. But, Ben, they were really pitiful—so cheap and skimpy that it was just pathetic. So I stuffed them all back into the suitcase and never said a word about it."

"And she was saying all the time after I got here," Ben grinned, "that she was afraid all her pretty things were lost. She actually described some marvelous frocks."

"Yes," smiled Miss Belinda. Indulgently, "that was after she grew pretty sure that the suit case was permanently lost. The fact is that it was definitely lost in the depths of my closet."

"Well, I admit that I have a mere masculine mind, but I can't fathom your reason for lending yourself to the deception, Belinda."

"Why, Ben, you goose, I didn't wish any one to discover that she had been romancing about her missing apparel, and she looked so very sweet in my things that it was a pleasure to see her in them.

"You know, brother, she has had a hard time since her husband died. She was not trained for any business or work of any kind, and earning her living is a tough struggle. I've always wished that we could help her in some way, but I never dreamed that fate would place her in our hands so deftly."

"Your hands, not mine," objected Ben. "I don't understand what you are talking about, but whatever it is, I've had nothing to do with it."

"That's all you know about it, Ben. It was you who invited the charming Miss March to our house party."

"Good gracious, sis, what's she in the deal? You don't mean to say that she and Mrs. Lane—that they—"

"Certainly, Ben, and if you weren't the densest old dear in the world, you would have known what was going on. I wish you'd seen the look in her eyes last night when I gave her the suitcase. She knew as well as I that the fastidious major would never have noticed her in her own dowdy clothes. Our wedding present will be a comfortable little check sent very soon, to help with the trousseau."

"Oh, you women!" groaned Ben.—Exchange.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Nathan Straus, who has severed his last connection with active business in order to devote himself wholly to philanthropic work, is a native of Rhenish Bavaria. He came to the United States in 1854 and settled in Georgia, but soon he moved to New York City. After preparing by study to enter business he soon got a foothold in trade, and, in the course of time, became a partner in some of the largest stores in Manhattan and Brooklyn. Of late years he has devoted most of his time to charitable work, much of which he initiated years ago, notably his provision of pure milk for the children of the city, and his plans for helping the poor with food and fuel. Always interested in the welfare of his own race, he has given generously to projects in Palestine, as well as for the betterment of emigrants to the United States. Honors in the way of appointment to important civic positions have come to him from mayors, governors and presidents.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Prevention Better Than Cure

Mr. Editor: In the Bulletin of Nov. 17, I noticed a letter by William Dee touching on tuberculosis. In it he suggested that a large appropriation be made in order to improve the deplorable conditions existing with regard to the treatment of this disease.

Now I do not quite agree that this would improve matters to any extent. First let us consider the causes of this disease. It is an acknowledged fact that at least 50 per cent. of these cases (in human beings) originate from needless exposure, carelessness and rundown condition.

I consider it the height of folly for a man to expect, that he can allow his body to become rundown, that he can break all the laws which nature has laid down for the promotion and conservation of his health, that he can overdraw his account in the bank of health and escape the penalty. Yet how many of our young men and women today are going through life without ever giving a thought to the care of their body, which was given to them in perfect health, equipped with every means of resisting disease providing that its owner lives up to the laws of nature, which serves them so faithfully day after day without complaining until it is taxed far beyond its ability, which is more perfect, more reliable, and more intricate in its mechanism than anything which science ever evolved.

Any man who allows his body to degenerate into a germ factory, a breeding place of disease, commits a crime against posterity, a crime against humanity and he must pay the penalty. He may live to see the results of his crime in the broken health of a trusting mate and the meagre health of his children.

I do not see how spending of large sums of money for the improvement of sanitary conditions, for the discovery of a cure for this or any other disease can do any good if the people in general continue to break nature's law.

A doctor with his Latin prescription is not a magician. He cannot with a bottle of medicine repair the wrong which man has done through years of wrong-living.

It is much easier to avoid a wrong by evading its causes than to redress it.

Therefore, I honestly believe that if every man would do all he can to live up to nature's law and instruct his children in the right way of living it would be a long step forward in the elimination of disease.

Please understand that this is not a guess but is based on my own experience, having transformed myself from a 90 lb. cripple to a 152 lb. athlete by following the teachings of nature, I feel justified in expressing my opinion in this way.

Yours for buoyant health,
J. EDWARD BENOIT.

530,000 "Smiths" in G. B.

In England there are 530,000 persons of the name of Smith, and 204,000 of them have "J" for their first initial. The John Smiths number 41,000, the John W. Smiths, 30,000 and the John William Smiths, 5,000. It has been necessary to devise a basis for them to distinguish the persons they mean or own.

From Small Beginnings

Augustus Saint Gaudens, the Great Sculptor

A shoemaker had a little son who had inherited from him an instinctive love of the beautiful; for the shoemaker was French, and all Frenchmen are born with a love of that which is beautiful. There is something of kinship between the French and Irish, for both races love the light and fanciful—and so the French shoemaker married an Irish girl. The little boy had inherited, therefore, the French love of the beautiful and also the Celtic fancy and poetry. That boy was Augustus Saint Gaudens, who became one of the greatest of modern sculptors.

When the child, so gifted from birth, was only a baby, he became, not by any will of his own, an immigrant in the United States. There he grew up with other children of his own kind, and began the gaining of the two requisites for success, education and experience. He went for a while to the lower schools, and then, when he was 13, went to a special course of study in Cooper Union. From his childhood he had shown a gift in drawing and a natural liking for the artistic. That must be developed. So it was that he took advantage of the great institution founded by Peter Cooper, who had himself been a poor boy with high ambitions. At Cooper Union the young French-Irish boy learned the principles of art, working especially in the cutting of cameos and in resign. Later still, he went to the National Academy of Design, where it was seen that he had talent in an unusual degree.

Almost everyone knows his great works—the statue of Farragut in Madison Square; the Puritan in Springfield, Mass.; the Shaw Memorial in Boston; the statue of Sherman at Central Park, New York. Not everyone knows his beautiful designs for United States coins.

One of the best things to remember about Augustus Saint Gaudens, the great sculptor, is that when he made his first bit of sculpture at the age of 19 he made a bust of his father.

From New York the young man went with high hopes to study in Paris and Rome. From then on his fame was secure.

In one way or another in art, Augustus Saint Gaudens brought honor to the United States, the land of his adoption, and showed what a person can do who devotes himself wholeheartedly to the work in which he shows the greatest talent.

Stories That Recall Others

STORIES THAT RECALL OTHERS

Misunderstood

Alice's little cousin Mary, age five, came to her one day with a book of fairy tales, and asked her to read a story.

Alice, taking up the book said: "Now the name of this story is 'The Tale of a Fox.'"

Alice began to read but as she got fairly well along she noticed that a frown which continually grew deeper, was puckering little Mary's brow. Finally she inquired the cause, to which Mary replied: "Why, Cousin Ally, that story hasn't a teeny, weeny word about a fox's tail."

"Try Again," her Retort

The humble pedestrian occasionally revolts. The feminine variety, especially, while she is not always adept at maintaining a right of way, finds relief occasionally in "talking back" to the scornful toot of the horn, or the whir of the wheel. A young woman was rushing across the street the other morning to catch the trolley when one of the carefree motorists that try to see how close they can come to a killing without actually doing so, raced by splashing mud over her from head to foot.

"Don't be discouraged," she called after him as he glanced back, "you'll get the next one."

New Discovery Banishes Sleeplessness, Quiets Nerves and Stops Headache

The most wearing-out process which could afflict a person is that which is caused by lack of sleep. Fitful, insufficient slumber tears the nervous system to pieces and causes much of the weakness, irritability and susceptibility to disease which is often blamed on other causes.

Lack of sleep ages one, destroys beauty and certainly shortens your life. And yet it is so easy to have the deep refreshing slumber of childhood.

A sleep that will make you feel like a new person and add five years to your life—a slumber that will banish the "blues" and give you the strong, healthy nerves which mean a sunshiny, cheerful outlook on life. And you can get all these benefits from a new, harmless, easy-to-take preparation called Neura.

Neura contains no opiates or habit-forming drugs. The results from the use of Neura have been so remarkable, however, that it is now dispensed by Lee & Osgood and druggists everywhere with a guarantee to return the small cost if you are not amazed and delighted with the results from the use of the very first package. Get a good night's sleep tonight by taking Neura today.

Looking For Trees.

To you 'tis nothing but a tree.
'Tis safety, home and food for me.
—Paddy the Beaver.

Before lumbermen begin cutting down trees they send a man to look the land over and judge as nearly as he can how many trees there are to be cut, and just where it will be best to begin cutting, and where the camp for the men shall be built, and where roads shall be cut. These and other important things have to be decided by looking the land over before any work is done.

Peter Rabbit found Paddy Beaver doing the very same thing. Yes, sir, he found him far above his pond wandering about some distance from the Laughing Brook, farther than Peter had seen him before.

"Hello!" exclaimed Peter, looking the surprise he felt. "I didn't suppose you ever got more than a jump or two away from the water. I thought you didn't consider it safe to be away from the water."

"I haven't said that I consider it safe now, have I?" retorted Paddy.

"No-o," replied Peter slowly. "But if you didn't consider it safe you wouldn't be here, would you?"

"That depends," replied Paddy.

"What does it depend on?" demanded Peter.

"On whether or not what I am interested in is near the water," said Paddy.

Peter thought this over for a minute, trying to think what it could be that Paddy was interested in. But he had to give up and ask. "What is it you are interested in?" he demanded bluntly.

"Trees," replied Paddy briefly.

Peter waited for Paddy to explain further, but Paddy didn't. Finally curiosity got the best of Peter and he asked why Paddy was particularly interested in trees.

Paddy looked at Peter as if he though Peter might be joking in asking such a question. But curiosity fairly stuck out of the eyes of Peter. It was clear that he really didn't understand why Paddy should be specially interested in trees. "Peter Rabbit, knowing me as long as you have, how can you ask such a silly question?" said he, and looked quite disgusted. "Trees, the right kinds of trees are the most important things in my life. They furnish me nearly all of my food. They give me safety."

"Safety!" exclaimed Peter. "How do they give you safety? You don't climb and you don't hide in hollow trees, so how do they give you safety I would like to know?"

Paddy the Beaver looked more disgusted than ever. "I have known always that you are full of curiosity, Peter," said he, "but never before did I think you stupid. Why don't you do a little thinking? If it were not for trees how would I build my dam? How would I build my house? Tell me that, Peter Rabbit."

As usual when puzzled Peter scratched a long ear with a long hind leg. He wabbled his wabby little nose very fast. "That's so," said he after a bit. But why couldn't you live in a hole in the bank the way Little Joe Otter does?"

"I could if the water was deep enough and there were food trees growing near enough to the ewater for me to get plenty to eat safely. In some places in the Far North there are Beavers living in just that way. They are called Bank Beavers. They do not build houses and they do not build dams. But the water has to be deep so that it cannot freeze to the bottom in winter. I couldn't possibly live in that way here in the Laughing Brook. I must have a pond, and to have a pond I must have a dam, and to have a dam I must have trees. And this reminds me that I cannot waste time. I must be looking for trees."

(Copyright, 1925, by T. W. Burgess.)

The next story: "Peter Meets Paddy Again."

"I haven't said that I consider it safe now, have I?" retorted Paddy.

HAWAIIAN SHIPPING CONTINUES AT PEAK

Hawaiian business, both in wholesale and retail lines, was quiet during the latter half of August and September, but shipping continued at a peak, according to a cable received by the department of commerce from the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce. The demand for pineapples was exceptionally good during September and favorable shipping conditions enabled heavy removals to continental markets.

There was also a heavy outgoing movement of raw sugar. Hawaiian sugar refineries are active and have disposed of a good part of their output locally. The weather has been exceptionally favorable to growing crops, rains being well distributed. The price being received for raw sugar is the lowest since the autumn of 1914.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

With a large attendance of relatives and friends the funeral of Mrs. John C. Kellogg was held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from her home, No. 94 Laurel Hill avenue. There were many beautiful floral tributes of esteem. The service was conducted by Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church, and burial took place in the family plot in Yantic cemetery. Rev. Mr. Abbott conducted the committal service. The honorary bearers were George A. Keppler, Herbert S. Cary, Frank L. Clark and Arthur E. Story. Undertakers Church and Allen had charge of the funeral arrangements.

WEDDINGS

Hiscox-Cotter

Everett H. Hiscox, Jr., of Jewett City and Miss Josephine Cotter of Norwich were married at 5 o'clock Monday evening, at St. Mary's rectory, Greeneville, the ceremony being performed by Rev. W. A. Keefe. The ceremony was attended by the families and several of the bride's young friends. The bride wore a gown of robin's egg blue crepe romaine with embossed chiffon velvet trimmings. Her hat was silver lace and she wore a corsage bouquet of Coolidge roses. The matron of honor was the bride's sister Mrs. Albert Heber of Norwich. She wore a gold embroidered cocoa crepe romaine gown with metallic hat and corsage bouquet of butterfly roses. The best man was the groom's brother Earl S. Hiscox of Jewett City. A reception at the bride's home was attended by the immediate relatives. The bride received many gifts of silver, cut glass, money, household furnishings, electrical appliances, cutlery and linen. The matron of honor and best man received gold pieces as gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Hiscox went to New York for their honeymoon.

The bride's traveling dress was black prince, gray coat with squirrel trimmings, and hat to match. They will spend the winter at 18 Stanton Ave., Norwich. Mrs. Hiscox is a native of Norwich, the daughter of Mrs. John Cotter. She is employed in the millinery department at the Reid and Hughes store. Mr. Hiscox is a native of Jewett City, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hiscox. He is employed in the Standard Oil Co. office in New London. He is a World war veteran, and a member of Orville La Flamme Post in Jewett City.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PROGRAM STRESSES COMMUNITY SPIRIT

Thanksgiving for the things that have been, and the purpose and importance of making the development of a strong community spirit an outstanding aim in the coming year were stressed by the speakers Monday evening at the November meeting and supper of the Chamber of Commerce, which was held at the Wauregan hotel at 6:15 o'clock.

About 100 were seated at the table when President James L. Case called the meeting to order and invited Rev. Dr. David A. Pitt of the Central Baptist church to say grace. The song leader for the evening was Joseph C. Worth and the music was by Swahn's orchestra.

Programme for 1926.

The programme of the Chamber of Commerce for the year that is ahead was displayed on a large placard at the head of the table as follows:

Aviation field
Building code revision
Community advertising
Community chest
Community spirit
Industrial matters
Memberships
Milk and meat inspection
Parking
Recreation matters
Solicitations
Street improvement
Transportation matters
Zoning

In opening the speaking programme President Case said that it had seemed that local conditions, national and world wide events made a thanksgiving topic suitable for this meeting. Norwich has had a wonderful past for which it can be thankful, but the present is ours and faith in ourselves and the city in which we live should be our guide for the future. It is the spirit which makes the community and a better community spirit will go a long way towards making our ideals realities. He urged that each one should feel the responsibility of making Norwich a bigger and a better city and to make this year's work of the Chamber of Commerce one of the best.

President Case also called attention to the annual roll call of the Red Cross and bespoke for it a very generous support on the part of the community.

Report For Month.

A tenor solo, Because (D'Hardelot), was given in fine voice by Fred T. Maples, with Miss Dorothea Tucker as accompanist.

Secretary John J. O'Rourke made a report of the Chamber of Commerce work for the past month and also referred to the programme for the future which had been drawn up by the committee from suggestions made by the membership.

The first conference on the Community Chest had been held and there had been a conference with the water commissioners regarding lower rates for one of the Norwich industries. The increased water rates put into effect by the water board had had the effect of conserving water and the rates in Norwich compared very favorably with those in other cities in the state. The traffic bureau had held conferences with the railroad and the express company, both of which would result in desired improvements in this service. The industries committee had been in conference with an industry that might locate here and it was hoped that a favorable answer would be received.

Principal H. A. Tirrell was the first of four speakers upon the general topic of reasons why Norwich should be thankful.

Principal Tirrell spoke from the historical standpoint, pointing out that all good ideas start with the individual, but we have the power to understand the idea although we might not have been able to originate it. Norwich is the expression of the ideas of its founders plus what has been built upon that foundation by those who followed them. Those founders went through a course of training that developed their best qualities. Their lives were an expression of determination and self-sacrifices. They were men and women of iron and men of vision, who were living honest, industrious lives. At the present day, said Mr. Tirrill, we get the best in self-development in the smaller cities. If we think of quality, quantity will come. We should welcome those who come to us with the constructive, pioneer spirit, and get from history the spirit of those who went before us and contribute our part towards the making of the future.

A soprano solo, Break of Day (Sanderson) was rendered by Mrs. William Crowe, who was in splendid voice, and was followed by the address, by Walter F. Lester, president of the town school board, who spoke of thankfulness from the educational standpoint.

Mr. Lester referred to a definition of love as "active goodwill" and spoke of this as a desirable development in community life. He spoke of the consolidation of the school districts as an example that might well be followed by the voters in bringing the city and town into one political division and mentioned that before consolidation we had 3,222 pupils in the schools and we now have 4,365. We have sold three of our old school buildings and have brought the pupils from outside into the centers where all have equal opportunities. In the past three or four years we have spent more in school buildings than in the previous 40 years, the sum being about one-third of a million of which $300,000 was for new buildings and the balance for repairs. Nothing is too good for the schools of Norwich in its teaching staff and the aim is to get the best teaching force possible. Mr. Lester said he was glad to pay a tribute to the fine corps of teachers in the Norwich schools.

He also spoke with pride of the fine health conditions of the pupils of the Norwich schools, who had been declared to surpass all other schools of the state. He urged that love of the community and active goodwill should be a guiding principle.

Reasons for thanksgiving from the business standpoint was the topic of State Attorney Arthur M. Brown, who declared that the spirit of optimistic courage had surely been generated by this meeting and it was a fine thing to do away with carping and fault finding. It takes brains, courage and character to build.

He referred to the natural advantages that Norwich enjoyed from its location at the head of the Thames river, its two railroads, its fine modern highways its surrounding territory that furnishes a great trading population. He said it should be thankful that its growth had been slow for it had been sure. Without booms, the city had also been without the reactions that follow. We ought to be thankful also, he said, for the quality of the business men the city had had and now has. On the 10th of January next said Mr. Brown he will have completed twenty five years in business in Norwich and he wanted to bear testimony to his experience and contact with the business men of the community. With hardly an exception, he said, they had been moved first to honestly, properly and cleanly serve the community. The monetary return had been secondary. He closed by saying that like the Pilgrims of the first Thanksgiving day we should pray for strength to endure and courage to go on with the programme that has been mapped out.

A well rendered duet, Oh That We Two Were Maying (Smith) by Mrs. Crowe and Mr. Maples was followed by the final address of the evening which was by Rev. C. H. Ricketts who spoke from the religious viewpoint.

The speaker said that there could be no real ground for thanksgiving unless man was in unison with God and declared that religion is functioning here in Norwich when it is given such expression as the community contributions to the Backus hospital nurses home, the Salvation Army and the Young Men's Christian Association. Let us feel that we have a noble city, he said, and that we are working for it and we will have a city of which we can all be proud. Develop this spirit and we will keep Norwich on the map as long as the work endures.

In closing the meeting, President Case had Secretary O'Rourke read a letter of greeting from Barrington Garnham, a citizen of Norwich, England, who had written here from a place in Cuba, sending with his letter an English newspaper containing a description of Norwich, England.

SPEAKS OF IDEALS OF CONNECTICUT COLLEGE

President Benjamin T. Marshall, of Connecticut college, was the speaker Monday afternoon at Slater hall annex. At the meeting of the Norwich College club, which had an attendance of about 50 to whom the college head made an address of much interest upon the topic, New Emphases in the Education of Women.

At the beginning of the meeting at which the vice president, Miss Charlotte C. Gulliver, presided and introduced the speaker, President Marshall developed his subject with particular reference to Connecticut college and referred in opening to the great interest that had always been taken in the college by Norwich people. In this connection he mentioned the establishment of the Selden lectureship by Mrs. Joseph Henry Selden, as one of the finest and most valuable demonstrations of this interest.

Connecticut college, said President Marshall, has made choice of the fields upon which it would lay emphasis, this applies in the first place in the selection of its students. Quality of mind, character, personality and promise of personal power are looked for in the girls to whom admission is granted. The college wants the girl who shall be a good investment for the college and there is probably not a college in New England that it is so difficult to enter. Connecticut college is not interested in the student who can just get by. Another requirement for entrance is that the students shall have perfect health. This selective process brought the result this year that 163 were accepted out of 950 applicants for the freshman class.

Speaking of the college standing, President Marshall said that Connecticut college is in Class A, of the Association of American Universities, a rating which is enjoyed by not over one-third of the colleges in America. There has never been a college in America that has arrived so quickly or been received so cordially to this high standing. Its standards for entrance and for the degree are higher than any other college in the east with the exception of Bryn Mawr.

In furtherance of the college's intention to give education towards the future life work, President Marshall referred to a new course begun this year, a course in the art of living, which is a branch of the home economics department, which is for juniors and seniors and in which there are fourteen people for every student as counsellors and advisors, as well as the entire faculty.

In closing he referred to the campaign which the college is taking up to raise a fund of $500,000 by the first of the year, $350,000 of which is to be secured by contributions and $150,000 from the general education board, if the $350,000 is first raised.

Three especially appropriate solos were given during the afternoon by Mrs. Helena M. T. Church, for whom Mrs. Charles A. Saxton was accompanist. The first two, rendered before President Marshall spoke, were Thou Wondrous Youth (Ahl), applying, to the students, and Elaine (Bartlett) indicating the spirit of the college club.

Her final number was To A Hilltop (Ralph Cox), typical of the hopes and aspirations of the college girls.

DRIVERLESS TRUCK DASHED INTO PARKED MACHINE

Shortly after 10 o'clock Monday morning a Dodge delivery truck owned by the Norwich Provision company of No. 202 Summit street and in charge of Vincent Carlin ran driverless down the hill in Thamesville near the city line and crashed headon into a Ford one ton truck operated by Benjamin Wine of New London and which was parked by the roadside. Mr. Wine and Morris Mazur, his helper, were in the truck when the Dodge crashed into it.

The Ford truck was thrown around so that the front end rested partially in the gutter with the rear sticking out into the street. The windshield of the Ford was smashed, the front tires blown and the front of the truck quite badly damaged. The local machine was also considerably damaged.

Mr. Wine was jammed between the steering wheel and the seat. He complained of internal injuries. Mr. Mazur received cuts and minor bruises about the face from flying glass. It is thought that a sudden jar started the driverless Dodge truck down the hill. The accident was investigated by the local police.

Heard Common Pleas Motions

In the common pleas court at New London Monday, Judge C. B. Waller heard argument of demurrer in the case of Max Snitken vs. John E. Nelson, the judge took the papers as he did also on a motion to strike out or expunge in John F. Gorman vs. Oscar L. Peterson. Judgment as per bill of particulars was entered in the case of B. J. Harrison Co. vs. Walter J. Shea. Samuel L. Siller of New London was found guilty of non-support of his wife Bessie Siller of Bridgeport. Sentence was deferred till Tuesday.

LOCAL GIRL SANG AT HARTFORD WEEK-END PARTY

Miss Maida Wright of this city who was engaged to sing at the week-end house party of Mrs. Warren L. Smith of Hartford and also at the Community Chanel, has won for herself a permanent place among the musicians of that city.

Among the other entertainers engaged by Mrs. Smith, were "Jack" Crockerham, comedian of New York city and Walter H. McNeely of Hartford and Norwich. Willis Waterman, the gifted pianist was the accompanist.

Flights of genius are as apt to be downward as upward.

JAIL SENTENCE AND FINE IN LIQUOR CASE

Following a plea of guilty to selling liquor, Andrew Lesniewski, 34, of South street Thamesville, was fined $200 and costs and given 10 days in jail by Judge Arthur F. Libby in the city court Monday morning.

Harold Dunleavy, 23, of Abington, Mass., was fined $25 and costs for evading responsibility after his machine had torn a step from a trolley car on Boswell avenue near St. Mary's cemetery, Sunday. He did not stop and was arrested a short time after the accident by the local police.

Bennie Sinkiewicz paid a fine of $50 and costs for reckless driving. He hails from Gales Ferry and pleaded guilty to the charge. The man was arrested by Officer Albert Lamphere after he had passed the beacon at Thames square at a reckless rate of speed narrowly missing a machine while making the turn. Officer Lamphere put after him and arrested him on Market street.

A Taftville man had his breach of the peace case continued for six months and was fined actual costs $5.80. He was charged with beating his wife. Two men who couldn't pay their fines for intoxication went to jail while a sailor from the U. S. S. Cummings, stationed at New London paid $10 and costs for intoxication and $3 for breaking a toilet rinz. Another man paid a fine of $19.50 for intoxication.

PROVIDENCE WOMAN'S CASE CONTINUED FOR A WEEK

Once again the theft case against Gladys Lorraine, 24, of Providence, has been continued by Judge Arthur F. Libby in the city court. This time the case has been continued for a week. She is charged with the theft of a $500 coat of squirrel fur from the store of J. B. Caron and when arrested was wearing the stolen coat.

When the case came up in the city court Monday morning City Attorney Lee Roy Robbins moved that the accused be put to plea. Attorney T. J. Kelly, counsel for the accused, asked that the case be continued for a week. The city attorney objected to the request but Judge Libby granted the continuance as he stated that a Providence attorney retained by Miss Lorraine, was unable to be present at the trial Monday owing to a pressing engagement in Providence. The Lorraine girl is at liberty on a bond of $2000 furnished by a Rhode Island friend.

SKULL FRACTURED IN CRASH AT WINDHAM CENTRE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 23—Three local young men were injured, one of them seriously, when a Ford touring car owned by Frank Olsen of this city and driven by Leslie Flippen collided with a large elm tree on a sharp curve near the Larrabee home in Windham Centre shortly before 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. Joseph Wawer of the Yellow Row, this city, sustained a fractured skull and is in a serious condition at St. Joseph's hospital having sustained a fractured elbow, crushed foot and severe lacerations. Flippen suffered lacerations about the face and a cut on the knee. Constable Alfred P. Abbe of Windham investigated the accident and notified Flippen to appear in the Willimantic police court this Tuesday morning to answer to the charge of reckless driving. The car was wrecked beyond repair.

Don't Say You Can't Sleep —You Can

If your health and nerves are to be maintained at the full vigor, which makes life worth living, you must get proper sleep. The number of hours you sleep is not as important as the depth of your sleep. You should be able to fall asleep almost as soon as your head touches the pillow and sleep without a break until morning. That kind of sleep is the greatest aid to health, beauty, vigor and strength.

And you can do it. Those who are troubled with fitful, broken slumber have found that this condition is changed as soon as they begin to use a new preparation called Neura.

Neura is an easy-to-take pink pellet that contains no opiates or anharmful or habit-forming drugs. Neura quiets the too active brain, soothes the shattered nerves and brings the sweet, profound sleep of childhood. And best of all, you can get Neura from Lee & Osgood Co., or any good druggist with an absolute guarantee to return your full purchase price if you do not get wonderful results from the use of the very first package.

SUSIE'S BOY FRIEND WRITES HIS VERSION OF THE TRIP TO BOSTON

Dear Sports Editor:

I'll introduce myself to you before going any further. I'm Jimmy, the boy friend of Susie. Now that we know each other I want to say right here that the letter Susie wrote you shows that Susie is not as dumb as she writes * * * * * Maybe I ain't expressed myself just clear but you know what I mean, you being married. Now listen, maybe you'll print this and maybe you won't but if you do I wish you'd flash it up like you did that letter of my girl's.

Now Susie the way she wrote might make us look dumb. I was a cheap guy and a penny-pincher. Well, I ain't got an Stolen treasure to me, I know how to give a girl a good time but wotcha going to do if the old bank roll is all in one." No, I didn't hold up anybody for them pasteboards, they are honest by me own hard earned dollars. When I got hold of them tickets I was pretty much proud myself and when I gave 'em to Susie I was darn glad I parted with those ten iron men. You know now it is when you are with some swell thing she's always wanting and she throws her arms around your neck and says "Oh why did you do it?" Gosh amighty, ain't it a grand sensation?

Well, I didn't see so many of the sights going on the train as Susie did. I was busy most of the time, she was a good looker, too but I don't see how girls on a girl can say that such an oily an cold proposition as navigation, at least those parts I saw of the trip we were on. I was learning out how much room the cot could get if everybody had a bottle was pinch-bottle containing liquor. It got as far as Stonington and then gave it up cause I was getting so thirsty I hadda get a drink of water from the water cooler. Those wasn't no paper cups on the railroad. Furnishes them shieks and dames in the town coats had cooler with for the grown stuff they was serving outa the bottles. I borrowed one from a dame and put in a little water and, Oh boy, I almost upset a look at that steel car. When I met her Susie says "What's the matter with you, Simmie." I didn't say nothing. I couldn't, my breath was gone. I made several trips to that water tank before I got to Boston. You know what I mean.

Well, when we gotta Boston we gets off at the back way. I didn't see no city though, all the water I saw was from a few feet in one of the windows. Now here's where Susie in her letter makes me look like a piker, saying we went to the Walled Off. Well we did but she didn't tell you about she and me trying the Copley Plaza and the Brunswick. No, she wouldn't listen. She tried to order beans in those swell joints and when one of them waiters in a swell evening suit told her they didn't have none she asked for corn beef hash. Imagine that. Well I told her we better get out and we did. She got her beans all right.

That stuff about me slipping the tokens into the subway box was all wrong. They just fell in as I was looking for a coupla dimes when the man said "Step lively, you hicks." Guess he musta thought I come from New London. Well, I'm glad his old company got stuck.

Now I'm goin' to tell you something about that game and how Susie acted. Say didja ever take your wife to a game? Well, don't, take somebody else's wife, you'll get more fun outa it. Of all the fool questions a dame can ask at a football game, and just when there's somethin' gonna happen on the field. I don't see how they can think of 'em all.

Well, just as Zarakov fumbled one of them there punts Susie says: "Hey, Jimmy looka that feller in the airplane up there, I thought they wouldn't let 'em fly over a crowd." Well, when the play was over and a Yale man had recovered the fumble I look up and says "Where?" She didn't say nothing, only give me one of them wilting looks. Then I thought if I tried to tell her somethin' about the game she'd be interested. Ever try to tell a woman some thing about a game? She was interested all right, but the dumb questions she asked.

I told her it was first down. She started to argue, telling me it wasn't the first down 'cause she'd seen a dozen players down long before that, can ya beat that? I told her it was Yale's ball and she said she thought that the home team always furnished the balls. Guess she was gettin' her baseball and football mixed. Well, Job had nothing on me for that virtue called patience but, believe me, it was gettin' sorta frayed. Then she yells out just as Allen threw a long forward pass, "Lookit that man trying to hit the umpire with the ball, he'll get put outa the game." Well, that finished my patience and that's where I says "Shut up, don't be so dumb." Well, she didn't make no more wise cracks about the game but she still kept asking me to lookit that, and lookit this, and see that ducky hat, or ain't that a swell coat, till I thought my head was on hinges, from looking so much. Then when Yale pulled that dumb play in the last few seconds I thought Susie would make a darn good coach for them boys, seein' as how dumb she was. They'd be able to understand each other as they both talked the same language. When she asked who won I thought I'd forget I was a gentleman and she was a poor weak female.

You probably wonder what I thought about the game. Well, as far as I could see it was a case of too many bosses on the Yale team, everybody trying to tell the quarterback what plays to run. Yale did the right thing at the wrong time, if you know what I mean. When they shoulda kick they run with the ball and when they shoulda run they kicked. They tried kicks but from terrible angles, and they had the ball square in front of the goal posts on two plays before. Harvard played a good game, especially that feller with the English name, Marion Cheek. Nothing dumb about him, and that tackle when he hit that varsity fullback fellow, it just made you feel funny all over. He saved the game all right. That tackle and the knitting sorta the Yale backfield held was what spelled the beans for Old Eli Yale.

Well I guess I've wrote about enough. But don't think I'm sore at Susie, 'cause I ain't, she's a good kid even if she don't know much about football.

Yours truly,
JIMMY

Ed. Note—Jimmy: I cut out some of that letter where you see the stars. I thought it would not look well for you to say that Susie was not as dumb as she wrote but was dumber. That is no way to talk about the girl of your heart. I could tell you some things about the way of women, but not in print 'cause my wife reads the sport page.

FAST AMATEUR BOUTS AT DANIELSON TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, November 24. There is to be a merry belting bee at the Casino arena this (Tuesday) evening. A delectable card of amateur boxing bouts is to be staged by Promoter Frank Barber. These bouts will bring together some of the best boys in Connecticut and Massachusetts, two of the matters being Johnny Mack, 125 pound champion of Connecticut, and Young Chapnedy, Worcester county champion in the same class.

Mention of this bout is indicative of the class of the boys that make up tonight's card. Take Lew Adams of Worcester and Sunny Mays of Danielson, for instance. There's a team of 165 pounders that will make a socking match that one would go miles to see. They are both fast and tremendous hitters, like the game and play it hard. They should have the fans up on their toes until something or other, maybe the bell, spells finality for the bout. It should be such an affair as Susie and her Boy Friend would love to see, and so hot that absence of a coon skin coat wouldn't mean a thing to Susie. Preferably, she would bring a palm leaf fan and let the Boy Friend swing it.

In addition to these two star bouts there are to be four other events. Young Bennie Leonard is to meet Charles Rocco in the 147 pound class. Danny Doran and Young Mulvaney will hook for a go as representatives of the 135 pound class. Then in the 114 pound class Victor Zona and Ray Strong of Hartford will go to it. At 125 pounds, Young Major of Danielson and Young Angelo of Hartford will look each other over.

The boxers who are coming down here from Worcester county are all top-notch amateurs in their class and recently were returned victors, without exception in bouts at the Elks' club in Boston. The Hartford, New Haven and Danielson boys who will oppose them will take care of Connecticut's interests, be sure of that. This looks like a great treat for the boxing fans and they will be milling around the Casino about 8 o'clock this evening.

PROPOSES AN ALL-EASTERN FOOTBALL CONFERENCE

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 23—(A. P.)—An all-Eastern conference of 17 teams in football was projected here tonight in a radio talk by Dr. Albert H. Sharpe former Cornell and Yale coach, who spoke on the subject from Station WEAI, at Cornell university.

"I have examined the schedules of seventeen colleges in the east that might be called representative," he said, "and I find that they all have played at least three games with other members fo the list; that five of them have played four, and that two of them have played five.

"We have, then, the Army, Brown, Colgate, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, Lafayette, Navy, Pennsylvania, Penn State, Pittsburgh, Princeton, Syracuse, Washington and Jefferson, West Virginia, and Yale, playing a very important part of their schedule with the other colleges mentioned in this list. As they are playing with each other now there would be no objection to their continuing the same relations under fairly uniform conditions.

ELECTION OF YALE CAPTAIN IS POSTPONED FOR TIME

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Of the men who won their football Y at Yale this year, eleven will be lost to the squad by graduation in June. They are Captain Joss, Allen, Burt, Butterworth, Cottle, Cutler, Gill, Shad, Osborne, Potts, Root and Wallace.

A meeting of all football men entitled to vote for captain—that is, all who played in either the Princeton or Harvard games—was called for today but because of the absence of several of the prominent players, including Captain Joss, the meeting was postponed. A number of the men are out of town and their ballot will be sought by wire.

THINKS GRANGE'S ACTION WILL SET BAD EXAMPLE

CLEVELAND, Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Harold "Red" Grange's example in leaving college to become a professional football player may become a menace to the college sport, Dr. J. W. Wilce, head football coach of Ohio State university, declared in an address here today.

Dr. Wilce did not mention Grange by name. Replying to a question as to his opinion regarding the gridiron star, he said:

"Heretofore professional football promoters have played square in not seeking to recruit college players. I fear there may now be a large number of men who will be easily persuaded to go into professional teams for the money they can make."

HARVARD WINS ANNUAL COLLEGE X-COUNTRY RUN

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Thrilling, uphill struggle, during which he won and lost the lead a half dozen times in the last mile, carried Willard L. Tibbetts of Harvard to the intercollegiate varsity cross-country championship today in record time of 30 minutes, 34 seconds for the six-mile chase.

Macauley Smith, of Yale, who won the event a year ago with the best previous time of 31:24, could finish no better than eleventh this afternoon as the Crimson two-mile intercollegiate champion outsprinted James C. Loucks of Syracuse, to win by barely a step after a shoulder-to-shoulder battle in the last 300 yards. A. S. Hillman, of Maine, second a year ago, was 20 yards behind Loucks in third place after having set the pace for more than 100 starters during the first half of the grind.

NORDICS WIN SERIES WITH PONEMAH CLUB

Saturday afternoon at Parish hall the Nordics won the series with the Ponemah Wheel club basketball team when they defeated the Ponemah boys 35 to 10 in the second game of the series. The Nordics completely outclassed the Wheelers from start to finish. The lineups:

Ponemah Wheel Club—Lamoreaux Finn, Phalen, Gordon and Stefanick.

Nordics—Smith, Houston, Archibald Heap, Grant and Pingree.

HOME FOLKS APPROVE OF GRANGE'S DECISION

CHICAGO, Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Western conference athletic officials may not approve of the action of Harold "Red" Grange in signing to play professional football, but Grange's hometown folks in Wheaton are tickled to hear of his prosperous outlook.

The boys who grew up with him at Wheaton open their eyes when they hear that Grange probably will get $30,000 for playing one football game Thanksgiving day.

Erin Wins From Wellesley

WELLESLEY, Mass., Nov. 30—(A. P.)—Old Erin scored a triumph over the Wellesley College Field Hockey team today when the Irish women's team vanquished the American girls 16 to 1. Only brilliant work by Wellesley's goalie, Althea Pease, kept the visitors from a much larger score.

DARTMOUTH STANDS ALONE ON HIGH PINNACLE OF FOOTBALL SUPREMACY

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—(AP)—The unprecedented string of upsets that has marked the eastern football season, now drawing to its close, also has brought about a shake-up in team ranking which has no parallel in the game's annals.

Out of the list of major and minor college eleveng alike, Dartmouth stands out alone as the only combination neither defeated nor tied, holding a position in striking contrast to many other hitherto top-ranking outfits, where in former seasons it has not been uncommon to have at least a half-dozen teams finish their seasons unbeaten, or with perhaps only a tie to mar their record, statistics show that only three elevens altogether have escaped defeat in the east, Colgate, the only major rival of Dartmouth, has a tie with Lafayette on its record, while little St. Lawrence shows a similar slate.

Teams which in past years have often led the way, such as Penn State and Harvard, show as many as three defeats, while Pennsylvania and Yale, which shared the front ranks with Dartmouth only a year ago, each has been downed twice.

All of the teams figuring in the big traditional games that close the season this week have met defeat. The outcome of none of them can do more than perhaps determine the rival claims to position of runner-up to Dartmouth. Colgate can claim this distinction by beating Brown in its final game at Providence Thanksgiving day.

West Virginia and Washington and Jefferson, opponents in their annual Thanksgiving day classic at Morgantown, W. Va. each has met only one defeat. In the same class are Syracuse, Cornell and Pennsylvania, which oppose Columbia, Pennsylvania and Penn State, respectively, in three other outstanding holiday encounters.

The Army has two defeats on its record as the cadets prepare for the final struggle next Saturday at the Polo grounds with the Navy, whose one defeat, at the hands of Michigan, was of crushing character. Holy Cross, drilling for Boston College, has had only one setback so far and hopes to stay close to the top of the heap.

The statistics of the eastern football group follow:

Team	W	T	L	Pts	OPts
Dartmouth	8	0	0	340	29
Colgate	7	1	0	205	20
St. Lawrence	6	1	0	83	13

SPEEDBOYS TROUNCE LORRAINE TEAM ON SUNDAY

The rejuvenated Speedboys' crushing line attack was too powerful for the Lorraines of Westerly at Ashland Park Sunday. The final score was 18-0 in favor of the Speedboys. True to their promise of an entirely new backfield, with the exception of Capt. Parkhurst at quarter, took the field, "Hoss" Gallup and West of Lynn General Electric team at full and half with Marshall former Academy star at the other half. The line was nearly the same, E. Barry and "Kelly" Stafford ends, Cobb and J. Barry tackles, Pulky and "Pat" Burke, guards and "Smiling Jake" Sawicki at center.

The Speedboys scored two touchdowns in the first half on a series of tackle plays, "Hoss" Gallup and "Plugging Bill" Marshall alternating in carrying the ball Westerly was not able to stop the attack. Fumbles were the only way Jewett City lost the ball. Gallup and Marshall each scored a touchdown in the half. The second half the wind was against the Jewett City, but still they scored another touchdown. "Hoss" Gallup going across the line with five men on his shoulders. The Speedboys were only twenty yards from the goal when the game ended. Westerly's highly touted aerial attack was completely broken up. West intercepted three passes. Carr played the best for Westerly. "Hoss" Gallup gained most ground for Jewett City but the entire team played wonderful football.

Glick Beats Finnegan.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—(A. P.)—Joe Glick, of New York, outpointed Dick (Honeyboy) Finnegan, leading Boston featherweight in a 12-round bout in Brooklyn tonight. Finnegan had defeated Babe Herman and Johnny Dundee.

JUBILANT STUDENTS BURN DOWN FRATERNITY HOUSE

CHICAGO, Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Northwestern university students celebrating the achievements of the Purple football team, tonight set fire to an unoccupied fraternity house, then engaged in a pitched battle with firemen and policemen until the police used tear bombs to drive them back, then they started for the old stadium, intent on applying the torch to it.

Navy Has Heavy Scrimmage

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Although the heavy scrimmage practice of the Navy football team is over for the season, Coach Jack Owsley today allowed the regulars to engage in a mixup with the scrubs in preparation for the annual service classic with the West Point cadets at the Polo Grounds in New York on Saturday. Every man reported in excellent condition.

Harvard Hockey Practice Starts

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Harvard's varsity hockey season opened today when fifty men reported for practice. They took a conditioning run of two miles and after similar training the rest of this week will begin rink work next Monday under Coach Edward Bigelow, the new incumbent.

Twenty-five men reported for basketball practice at an organization meeting today.

Army Practices Under Lights

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 23—(A. P.)—Army practiced well into darkness tonight by aid of electric lights in its final preparations for the Navy game to be played in New York Saturday. All the cripples were back and in the play except Sprague, varsity tackle, and Harding, quarterback. They were on the field and in football togs, but did only the lightest kind of work.

Elizabeth Street Eleven Wins

A long forward pass, Worthy to Reardon, was twice the means of the Elizabeth St. School football team beating the St. Patrick's team 12 to 0 Monday afternoon. Featuring the play by long runs was Peckham, Worthy, Reardon and Stephano. The Lizzies are looking for more games with grammar school teams before the season closes.

No more teeth than a hen

PRINCE ALBERT can't bite your tongue or parch your throat any more than a barnyard hen can chew beefsteak. The Prince Albert process fixes that! Yes, sir! P. A. is toothless . . . but tooth-SOME. And that's all the difference between sunshine and rain.

The man who "couldn't smoke a pipe" is now a P. A. fan. You understand why the minute you pack your jimmy-pipe with this fine old favorite and light up. That first fragrant whiff fills your system with a new brand of joy . . . tells you no other tobacco is like P. A.

Cool as old Cape Cod in January. Sweet as the breath of honeysuckle. Soothing as a cradle-song. Real tobacco for real men. Get what's coming to you in downright pipe-satisfaction. Buy a tidy red tin of Prince Albert today and you're all set for a revel and a revelation!

At no extra cost, P. A. gives you TWO full ounces in every tin. Check up on this by looking at the U. S. revenue stamp. Not only quality, you see, but quantity . . . more for your money both ways. Get out your jimmy-pipe, Man—you're losing time!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Look at the U. S. revenue stamp—there are TWO full ounces in every tin.

WESTERLY

GAMBLERS FINED IN STONINGTON TOWN COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 23—To try the fourteen cases which came before Judge William A. Wilcox today's session of Stonington town court, the town court room was not large enough to hold even the principles and the overflow stood on the stairs and in the hallway, it being the last night of the K. of C. fair, the town hall where the adjournment is usually made, was set for fair purposes and not exactly available. The court business, however, with Albert G. Marlin, clerk and George R. McKenna, prosecuting officer and Connecticut State Troopers Giles Watson, Kenerson and Pulaski of the Groton barracks in attendance, was completed promptly after 10 o'clock. At that time in the eight cases heard fines amounting to $65 and costs of $105.78, totaling $170.78, had been paid into the court exchequer and six cases were continued, where the principals did not show up and bonds are held amounting to $150 by the court for their appearance. Millard R. Grier of Brooklyn, N. Y., was three times called to appear and his bond for an infraction of the Connecticut automobile laws was called by Solicitor McKenna and declared forfeited by Judge Wilcox.

Christy Lidestra, of 93 Liberty St. Pawcatuck, was first arraigned on complaint of Solicitor McKenna, who charged that on Nov. 22nd the defendant did keep a place resorted to for the purpose of gaming, it being one of the two places raided by Connecticut state police last Sunday morning at 1 a. m. where men were found shooting crap. The defendant entered a plea of "guilty" and was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs of $12.96 amounting to $37.96 which he paid and was discharged.

Benjamin Sebastian, of North Stonington, entered a plea of "guilty" to the charge of frequenting a place reported to for gambling and on recommendation of Solicitor McKenna that a small fine be imposed was ordered to pay $5 and costs $12.96, amounting to $17.96, which he paid and was discharged.

John Moran, 22, of Westerly, pleaded guilty to frequenting a gambling place and paid the fine and costs amounting to $17.96 as ordered.

James Carr, 21, of Stonington as well as Samuel Sebastian, 21, of North Stonington and George Dyer, 23, of Westerly, all pleaded guilty to similar charges and paid similar costs and fines ordered at $17.96. The men who frequented the places were held on $25 bonds which were returned after their bills were paid and the keys of the Sebastian automobile were returned by the state troopers who had held their auto as security. Lidestra's bail, as alleged proprietor was $100.

When these cases were disposed of Town Solicitor McKenna asked if there were any other persons who were present at the gaming houses when officers called, whose names had not been called. Previous to this the following names were called with no response: Delmar Tanner, North Stonington, John Pallazollo, Frank Piermoz, Thomas Redi, Alban Pampes and Rosodi Bronzi. Their cases were ordered continued one week and if a non appearance continued the bail will be declared forfeited amounting to $25 each.

Vito Concelisa, whose place on the North Stonington road, at the rear of the Orchard Inn, was also raided by state police officers on last Sunday morning, was charged with keeping a place resorted to for gambling purposes. Solicitor McKenna, following his plea of "guilty" recommended that sentence be deferred. He said that the defendant had six children the oldest 11 years old, and that his was a special case, as he had been in the business only two weeks. Someone had badly advised him to enter the business and as his health was not good he could not work at many lines of endeavor. He was found guilty and fine of $25 was remitted as sentence was deferred. Both Lidestra and Concelisa signed waivers and the dice and money seized in the raid were declared forfeited to the state of Connecticut.

Alfred Osborne, 26, of Mystic, was arraigned, charged with operating a public service vehicle on Nov. 18th for which a special license had not been obtained from the Connecticut Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. He pleaded "guilty".

Connecticut State Trooper Frank W. Pulaski, took the stand and testified that Sergt. Gorcas of the state barracks had sent him to Mystic to check up on all public service vehicles and jitneys there. He observed the defendant drive out of the silk mill driveway with six passengers and when he failed to produce the necessary license was told to report in court. He was fined $5 and costs of $16.16 amounting to $21.16 which he paid and agreed to quit the business.

Edgar P. Harrison, 17, of Pawtucket, R. I., driving a truck for the Lakeside Silk company, was arraigned on a "speeding" complaint. Being under age, Dr. James H. Weeks was appointed by the court as his guardian, and a plea of "guilty" was entered. He was found guilty by Judge Wilcox and sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs, amounting to $22.86 altogether, which he paid and was discharged.

Court adjourned.

Westerly police officials for the past four years met in "executive" session for the last time on Monday evening shortly after 6 o'clock at the Elm Tree Inn, Pawcatuck, when a planked steak dinner was the "important" but hardly "confidential" matter discussed by this former law enforcement body. With the election of a new Westerly town council the first of the month a new police committee now considers law enforcement matters.

Heading the dinner party as hosts were the former councilmen police committee members Farquahar Smith, chairman and Louis J. Rossi, with former Commissioner Smith as the committee of arrangements. There was also present Town Solicitor John Ferguson, Jr., who continued in that capacity with the new council and former police patrolman and deputy sheriff, Fred T. Mitchell, now high sheriff of Washington county. Others present were Westerly Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, Sergeant of Police Michael Curtin and Police Patrolman George H. Champlin, Robert M. Kessell, George L. Madison and LeRoy Norman.

The menu was:

Blue Points on the Half Shell
Cream of Celery Soup
Saltines Celery
Mixed Pickles Olives
Planked Porterhouse Steak
Mushrooms Cranberry Jelly
Asparagus Tips on Toast
French Fried Onions and Potatoes
Orange Sherbert
Pineapple and Lettuce Salad
Raspberry Sundae
Assorted Cake Demi Tasse

STONINGTON

Stonington High school's play to be given this year just before Christmas is entitled "The Seventeen." The cast will be composed of many popular Stonington High school students. A good many will remember how successfully Walter Jackson, of Mystic, Ray Hatfield, also of Mystic; Stephen "Si" Hall, of Westerly, and Winnie "Win" Bogle, of Mystic, put over their parts in "Kitchy Koo" last year. All of these graduated in 1924, so they cannot take part this year. "Win" Bogle is no wa Brown student.

Since Stonington High school lost to Norwich Free academy by a single point, 14-13, last Saturday their only objective is to trim Westerly High at the Thanksgiving day game at Owen's field. Another victory over Westerly High would make the local boys feel a trifle better about losing even second place in the league.

Mrs. Thomas Wilkinson entertained the Monday Evening Whist club at her home on Main street.

At the First Baptist church Wednesday evening, a Union Thanksgiving service is to be held by the Baptist and Second Congregational churches. This is a yearly custom.

Anthony Orlando left Saturday for Florida, where he is to spend the winter.

Rev. A. R. Parker, chaplain of the Sub Base, at New London, preached at Calvary church, Sunday evening.

Mrs. Otto Hyde is to entertain her class, "The Sunshine class," of the First Baptist church, at a supper Friday evening.

Frank Krizanek is to spend Thanksgiving in New Haven.

Miss L. Brown was a visitor at Point Judith and Naragansett Pier Sunday.

Steve DePerry, of New York, recently visited at his home on Grand street. He is now working in New York city.

Miss Pauline Chesebro and Mrs Henry B. Noyes will spend the holiday in New London.

Miss Harriett Donahue, of Montclair, N. J., will leave Wednesday for New York, after spending a few weeks at the Noyes home, on High street.

NOANK

The Woman's Home Missionary society of the Baptist church, meets this week with Miss Jessie Chesebro, at her home on High street. The subject will be Workers of the South, the leader being Mrs. Carrie Fitch. The Crusaders will meet at the church parlors Friday morning. The regular Thanksgiving services will be held at the church with Rev. E. E. Gates, of Hartford, in charge.

The name of Miss Hazel Wolverton was overlooked in giving the names of guests at the shower given to Miss Elizabeth Reid, on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Nelson were recent callers in New Haven.

Mrs. Abbie Albin has returned to Ashway after a few days' visit with Ashaway, after a few days' visit with relatives in the village.

John E. Singer, of Noank, has been granted a divorce from Ruth Bogue Singer, of Ledyard. The couple were married June 21, 1906. Desertion was the grounds and was alleged since Jan. 1, 1922.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Rollinson and daughter, Barbara, were recent callers at the home of Miss Josephine Morrison.

Charles Rogers has returned from a business trip to New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Poole were recent callers at the home of friends in Stratford.

Miss Grace Knapp has left for a visit of several weeks with relatives in Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Hiram Mosher and Mrs. Elizabeth Mosher were recent uests of Mrs. Abe Reid.

R. Sherman has returned from a visit to Providence.

Leo Harris is in Voluntown calling on friends.

Miss Dorothy Rathbun, of Norwich, spent the week-end in the village.

Leslie Porter has resigned his position with the Sea Sled Co., in West Mystic.

Tony Passi has returned from Block Island.

Capt. Edward Dybbing is in Montauk on a fishing trip.

Many people of Hartford, were at their cottages at Groton Long Point, for the week-end.

Miss Frances Goodwin is spending a week at the home of Mrs. Lewis Main.

Jasper Murphy was a recent caller in Jordon.

William Crowell has returned from Old Lyme.

The fishing fleet has had a good week of fishing. Many barrels of fish were shipped to New York by truck from Noank on Sunday.

John McKnight spent Monday visiting in Ashaway, R. I.

John Smith was a week-end visitor in Hope Valley.

Neil Runisa has returned from Potter Hill.

On Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock the fire alarm rang for a brush fire on Prospect Hill, that covered six lots. A passing engine of a train caused the blaze which started near the railroad bridge. Many houses were in danger and near one house the firemen had to use chemical to put the fire out. The engine, driven by William Plumstead, made a quick run. Chief Park was in charge of the men. Damage was slight and the company returned to the fire room at 5 o'clock.

The recent apron and food sale by the Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church, was a success. A number attended from out of town.

Raymond Sistair has gone to New York for a few days' visit.

Clarence Spink, of Fall River, was home over the week-end.

MYSTIC

At the Baptist church Sunday morning the Thanksgiving proclamation of Gov. John H. Trumbull was read, also the notice of the Union Thanksgiving service to be held in the vestry of the Baptist church, Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. At this service the sermon will be delivered by Rev. Lucius W. Shey, recto rof St. Mark's Episcopal church. The pastor of the other churches will assist in the service and the regular choir of the Baptist church will sing. All are invited to this service. The topic of Mr. Osborn's sermon Sunday evening was The Risky Road.

FRIENDS SAY SHE IS PICTURE OF HEALTH

"I cannot give Tanlac too many thanks, for it brought back my health and strength after everything else failed, and nearly all hope of getting well had left me," is the grateful statement of Mrs. Sarah Duckett.

"Stomach trouble and rheumatism had been gradually weakening me down for 20 years. At times I ached all over, could not walk without limping, and felt too weak to get out of my chair. Sleep was almost out of the question and I was nervous, discouraged and despondent.

"When I began taking Tanlac I was down to 120 lbs. but I now weigh 160 and haven't an ailment in the world. This is what Tanlac did for me four years ago and since then I have never been without it in the house. I take a bottle now and then and everyone says I am the picture of health."

What Tanlac has done for others, it can also do for you. For sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute.

You must say "QUICK QUAKER"

To get true Scotch flavor—famous Quaker Oats flavor—in quick cooking oats

THE difference in breakfast oats is flavor. Oats, originally a Scotch dish, must have Scotch flavor.

Quick Quaker has the toasty Scotch flavor that's so wonderful . . . famous Quaker Oats flavor.

No other brand has it. None successfully imitates it. It's due to exclusive Quaker milling of the finest, plumpest oats. Milling methods which took some 50 years to perfect.

Makes all the difference in the world. Quaker Oats spoils folks for ordinary brands of oats. Cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. No kitchen muss busy mornings.

Due to Quaker milling methods, it supplies, too, the "roughage" you need to make laxatives seldom necessary.

Look for the picture of a Quaker on the oats you get.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

November of 1925 bids fair to exceed the November building record if building permits are granted at the same rate as they have been during the first three weeks of the month when 26 were issued by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton. During the past two weeks 20 permits were granted, these include six dwelling houses, two of them 2-apartment houses, six frame garages and one large brick garage and one stucco finish filling station. The remainder of the permits issued were for additions and alterations to present buildings.

The building permits issued were as follows:

To John F. Carroll to make alterations to the building at 30-32 Broadway making two new store fronts, one large and the other smaller. The front in the small store will be 12x10 feet and the one for the larger store, 18x10 feet. The windows will be plate glass set in copper framing. The work is being done for Harry H. Land.

To Albert E. Descoteaux of 193 Sachem street to erect a garage, 8x16 feet on the land owned by the Falls Co. The garage will be of frame construction.

To Peter Paraido to build a frame cottage house on Dunham street for himself. The building will have six rooms and bath all finished in hard finish plaster, hardwood trim and floors. The exterior will be finished in clapboards and shingles. The house will be 26x24 feet with cement cellar and foundation.

To Homer Monty to erect a two-apartment house for Abraham Kofman on Broadway. The building will be 28x43 feet with cement foundation The construction will be frame with fir frame and N. C. pine sheathing. The exterior will be finished in clapboards and shingles while the walls will be of hard finish plaster pulp. The floors will all be oak with N. C. pine trim. Each tenement will have six rooms and bath.

Mr. Monty also has the contract for another house for Mr. Kofman on Broadway. This is an exact duplicate of the other building.

To Antonia Raczkowski to build a six-room frame cottage on Spring Garden avenue for himself. The house will be 32x26 feet with concrete foundation and cement cellar. The house will have all modern conveniences and will be attractively finished both on the outside and in the interior.

To Joseph Kirkup to erect a frame garage at 161 Mt. Pleasant street on the land of Mrs. Irving Rankin. The garage will be 10x18 feet.

To Angelo DelGrosso to change the store front at 17 Thames street for Vincenzo DiGangi. A new brick front will be put in with plate glass display windows.

To Anthony Domiskye to build an addition of four rooms to the present house owned by him at 85 Oakridge street. The addition will be 27x27 feet and 2 stories high. The foundation will be of stone and cement and the superstructure of frame. The finish will conform to the present building.

To Arthur Grodotzke to build a frame garage, 20x20 feet, in the rear of the house owned by Arthur Kruck on Dunham street.

To Contractors Healy and Washburn to erect a semi-bungalow of six rooms and bath at Grant court for John Finnegan. The house will be about 34x36 feet with cement foundation and cellar. The exterior finish will be in clapboards and shingles with a composition shingled roof. The interior will be in hard plaster, oak floors and cypress trim.

A permit has been granted to Healy and Washburn to build an addition to the house at 36 Hedge avenue for L. J. Cobleigh. The addition will be of frame construction, 12x26 feet and one story high. The foundation will be stone and brick.

To Mrs. Rose A. Plante to erect a frame garage, 20x40 feet on Carter avenue. The garage will have a concrete foundation and floor and will be large enough to accommodate five cars.

To Ino Rondina to build a 2-story brick garage on Oneco street for the A. C. Swan Co. The garage will be 30x50 feet with cement foundation and floor. The second floor will be of plank

To Mrs. Clara Clegg to erect a frame garage 13x20 feet at 16 Rock street The frame of a barn that stands on the lot will be used in the construction of the garage.

To Mrs. Amelia N. Woraki to erect a frame cottage on Asylum street. The building will have a cement foundation and cellar and will be 24x28 feet. There will be six rooms and bath, the finish being in hard plaster and hardwood. The exterior will be finished in clapboards and composition shingles.

To Mrs. Elizabeth Marsh to erect a frame storm porch on the present house at 138 Central avenue. The porch will be 6x10 feet.

To P. F. Sweeney, contractor, to build a stucco building on North Main street for Jacob K. Slosberg to be used as a filling station. The building will be 13x36 feet with porte cachere. 15x20 feet. The foundation will be of stone and concrete and the walls will be of hollow tile and brick with plaster finish on the inside. The roof will be covered in asphalt shingles.

Contractor Sweeney has been granted the contract to build a brick addition to the building at 11 Franklin street for Mrs. Emma Welte. The addition will be 24x23 feet and one story high. The foundation will be of stone and the walls of hollow tile and brick, the floor girders being of steel. The floors will be wood and the roof will be of tin.

To Charles H. Cochrane to erect a frame garage on Bentley street for himself. The garage will be 14x18 feet with cement foundation and floor.

The total valuation on the permits granted is approximately $51,000 which is placed by the owners.

UNUSUAL
Relief

PERTUSSIN not only soothes a cough, it also helps to clear the air passages from germ-laden mucus which is usually the cause of the irritation. The relief it brings is more than temporary — as it helps Nature to bring about a speedy recovery.

Its freedom from narcotics, chloroform or any harmful drug — as well as its pleasant taste — have made PERTUSSIN the ideal cough remedy.

It has been well known to physicians and pharmacists for more than twenty years and is sold by all druggists in large and small bottles.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

The sales of real estate in Norwich during the past week numbered 9 as compared to 12 sales for the same week in 1924. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $55,100 and $97,223.

In New London during the past week there were six sales of real estate, five less than for the corresponding week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $87,800 and $31,937.

State Building Permits

Building permits for the week as filed in the leading Connecticut towns numbered 320, as against 299 in the like week of last year and 312 in the same week of 1923. The cost of new construction for the week was $1,147,138. A year ago new construction to cost $957,128 was started in this state and in 1923 the cost of new buildings amounted to $1,093,948.

New London

Plans prepared for a garage for the Yellow Cab Co. on Golden street, are being figured. The architect is receiving bids for the proposed construction. The building will be 103x100 feet, 85 feet wide at the rear, one story high with steel trusses in single span. There will be brick walls, concrete floors, skylights, etc. A steam heating system will be installed.

According to a recent press despatch from Washington, new bids for the proposed addition in the rear of the post office will be requested shortly by the architect's office of the Treasury Department. All of the bids previously were rejected.

The permit has been issued to Maurice L. Hendel for a store building at 239 Bank street. The building will be 13x60 feet, one story high, of brick construction. The work will be done by day labor under the supervision of Phillip Hendel.

Plans have been completed for a nine room house on Federal street for Abraham Rakosky, 65 Federal street. The house will be 25x42 feet of hollow tile and stucco construction, with two tile baths, hot water heat and other conveniences. Bids for the work are being received by the architect.

Plans for a large barn foundation and a cold storage building at the State Farm for Women at Niantic, have been prepared by Architect Francis DeGange, who is receiving bids for the construction. The foundation will be 110x30 feet. The cold storage building, which will be built on one section of the foundation, will be 65x30 feet, one story high, of concrete construction, with a capacity of 400 tons. The barn on the remaining section of the foundation will be built in the spring.

The city planning board has approved the recommendation of Health Officed Dr. Benjamin N. Penneil that a comfort station be constructed in the business section. A site for the building east of the monument on the parade has been approved by the board.

H. B. Prentice, 141 Monegan avenue, has the contract for a house at the corner of Nameaug avenue and Thames street for John H. Schaffer. The house will be 26x50 feet, two and one-half stories high, arranged for rooming house purposes. The estimated cost is $10.000.

Building Permits

John H. Ryan, garage, 16 Lenox street, $100.

Maurice L. Hendel, store 239 Bank street, $4,000.

John H. Schaffer, dwelling, Nameaug avenue and Thames street, $10,000.

Robert Tetrault, frame cottage, Montauk avenue $5,000.

Markow & Hendel, alterations, Stuart street, $500.

Charles E. Lacey, frame dwelling, Nameaug avenue and Thames street, $10,000.

Life and Advent church, church building, Blackhall street, $5,000.

Minnie L. Hunter, basement garage, 202 Connecticut avenue, $100.

F. H. Holmes, frame garage, 461 Williams street, $350.

Number of permits issued for the week, 12; estimated cost of buildings, $35,750.

Stonington

Work has been started on an addition and alterations to a residence in Stonington for Eugene Atwood. There will be two additions to the main house, 18x25 feet and 19x22 feet. Additions to the porch will be ten feet wide and 77, 29 and 16 feet long respectively. The interior will be completely renovated with new floors, a new steam heating system, new plumbing, an incinerator, interior finish and five tile baths. The exterior will be refinished in white clapboards, and there will be a new roof. The interior walls and ceiling on the first floor will be finished in canvas for decorative purposes. There will also be a retaining wall, 12x100 feet.

Mansfield

At the annual meeting the Mansfield Center Library Association a formal offer was received of a gift of $10,000 for a library building upon condition that an endowment fund of $10,000 is raised. The offer was accepted. It is planned to start construction in the early spring. Alfred Odden is president and A. W. Buchanan, vice-president of the library association.

GIVES HIGH PRAISE TO BASE RADIO MAN

The current issue of the Sub Base newspaper contains the following:

Captain King expresses the feeling of all of us in his endorsement on this letter, "Delivered with congratulations."

"From the Secretary of the Navy.

"To Radio Man, Second class, James Stewart Herren, via Commander, Submarine Base, New London, Conn.

"Subject: Commendation.

"1. The commander of the Submarine Base, New London, Conn., has brought to the attention of the department your heroic work and remarkable devotion to duty in connection with the recent disaster and the loss of the U. S. S. S-51.

"2. On the night of Sept. 25-26, 1925, you had the regular 2000 to 0200 radio watch, and took charge of the land line upon receipt of the message covering the sinking of the S-51 at 0220 hours and remained continuously on watch at radio and land line telegraph instrument for a period of over 29 hours. In addition you slept by the land line for 4 1-2 hours and during that period handled several messages, only leaving your post when ordered to do so for the purpose of eating.

"3. During the 24 hours succeeding the disaster 217 government messages were handled in addition to a great deal of commercial traffic. Western Union and Postal Telegraph.

"4 It is with pleasure that the department commends you for your conduct which is in keeping with the highest traditions of the service, and it is most gratifying to this department to receive such reports.

Curtis D. Wilbur.
Secretary of the Navy."

RECOMMEND SEVERAL CHANGES FOR WATER DEPARTMENT IN NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 23—The city council at its meeting this evening instructed the city manager to confer with the selectmen of the town of Groton as to the lease of the ferry during the ensuing year and as to the payment of the cost of operation, the same lease as was made last night holding good, or at least a lease that is practically a counterpart of the former lease shall be made. The city asked for bids for the lease and the only bidders were Messrs Sheehan and Crandall, the lessees at present. Their bid was $5,700 to be paid in twelve monthly installments of $475. The town of Groton is expected to arrange for the payment of a proportion of the expense of operation as was done last year. The suggestion of a smaller boat was made, but it was only incidental and did not enter into the proposed lease. The town of Groton is understood to be opposed to having a smaller boat on the line, and, indeed, New London is not decided that a smaller boat is the proper vessel for the route. The matter as it stands now is left for the city manager to confer with the selectmen of Groton as to a lease and then to report back to the council.

There were seven applications for permission to erect buildings or to make alterations. Of these proposals to build three cottages were included. The other applications were for alterations and for the erection of one garage.

Bids were received for the painting of the Thomas, Ockford and Niagara apparatus. Two of the apparatus are to be painted by Bliven and one by the Blue Ribbon Auto Painting company.

A proposal of Ernest E. Rogers to deed to the city a small parcel of land at Chappell street and Pequot avenue and for the city to deed to Mr. Rogers a small strip of land, that Chappell street and Pequot avenue may be widened and improved by the elimination of a "jog" or curve, was accepted. The city manager was authorized to make the exchange of deeds. The matter came up in the form of an ordinance and it received its first reading.

Messrs White and Alexander, accountants, announced that they had made an audit of the city's accounts and complimented the officials who have kept the accounts. They recommended some changes in the method of bookkeeping in the water department and such as will abolish work that is now necessitated. The establishment of a sinking fund by that department is recommended strongly and no doubt will be adopted. They also recommended the collection of personal taxes and said that the practice has not been to see that all the debtors pay up. It was reported that there was a considerable sum of money that should be obtained from this source by the city. That matter will be taken up and the recommendation of the auditors will no doubt be adopted.

In the matter of Bates woods, Councilor Woodruff reported for the committee on public work progress. A survey is to be laid before the council and then a decision as to action will be made.

The ordinance providing for the laying of a sewer on Ashcraft road extension was read for the third time and adopted.

The matter of an ordinance to cover the installation of fuel oil for heating was discussed informally as to its bearing upon the safety of property and the emission of offensive odors and smoke. Manager Holt declared that the ordinance proposed had the endorsement of the fire marshall and was in line of procuring the greatest degree of safety from fires. He said the city now had no such ordinance and that he believed no more delay should be permitted. He advised a public hearing on the matter at which the provisions of the ordinance could be thoroughly discussed and that then such as ordinance as was needed would be adopted.

The condition of Arthur Dunnmire, 311 Williams street, and James Elwood, 18 Walter street, injured in the overturning of Dunnmire's automobile at Quaker Hill Sunday afternoon afternoon resulting in the almost instantaneous death of Raymond Nelson, Uncasville, was reported this afternoon at Lawrence hospital, as being as comfortable as could be expected. It has not been determined whether Dunnmire has sustained a fractured pelvic bone and a fractured spine and it will not be definitely known whether these injuries have been suffered until another day or two. Elwood will probably be dismissed from the institution the latter part of the week.

Mrs. Luddie Larsen, of 52 Sherman street; Mrs. Leslie Newby and infant son, 63 Poquonoc road, Groton; Miss Eleanor Henderson, Buell street, Groton; Donald Hayes, 13 Groton street; Mrs. Henry W. Kaiser and infant daughter, Avery court; Mrs. Jose Alzafera and infant son, 193 Bank street and Mrs. Arthur Skaling and infant daughter, Waterford and Mrs. Selina Tracey, 73 Groton street were patients dismissed at Lawrence hospital Sunday and today.

Leon Parkiss, colored, was a disgusted man when he was fined $75 in the police court this morning for reckless operation of his Paige car and for having defective brake on the machine. Parkiss did not have the money to pay his fine and he would have gone to jail, but for the consideration Judge Prince gave to him in allowing him to procure the cash he needs during the coming six months. Parkiss bought the car second-hand. Notes that are due at intervals of a month have taken all the money he obtained from shovelling coal at a local yard and from operating a motor livery cart. Saturday afternoon Leon drove out of Union street after he had secured repairs to his automobile coming down the hill to State street where he bumped into the Hupmobile of Genaro Menghi hitting the latter machine a poke that turned it over and crashed it against the curbing. The damage was to the cars and not to the occupants. Each driver placed the responsibility on the other, Parkiss even declaring that the Hupmobile was occupying the wrong side of the highway. In court today, the testimony of the drivers and of Police Sergeant Hick and Patrolman Clyde Murphy was taken to clear up the situation. Judge Prince imposed a fine of $50 for reckless driving and $25 for operation of a car on which there were defective brakes. It is altogether likely that the state motor vehicle department will suspend the operating license of Parkiss for a few weeks, during which time he will not drive his own car nor the car of anyone else.

Herman Beckwith made his usual visit to the police court from Niantic today. He paid a fine of $5 with attending costs. He said he only took "a few" so that being true the few cost him about $5 each.

John Timmons of Fishers Island was in New London Sunday and became intoxicated. That meant his arrest. He then secured a bond of $50 to insure his appearance in court today, but he failed to keep his engagement or else he was willing to forfeit his cash rather than appear. No matter what the reason was, he forfeited the $50.

William Buchert was also fined $5 for intoxication. He settled.

Arthur Tracy, charged with intoxication, pleaded guilty. It was his first arrest for any cause, so he won the leniency of the court and judgment was suspended.

William Susi did not attempt to excuse his carelessness in parking an automobile on the east side of Bank street near the corner of State street. He owned up without any hesitation. That brought him a fine of $5.

The garages which the Savings bank of New London has erected on North Bank street are ready for occupancy.

There is a scarcity of employment for coal handlers at the yards of local dealers. Since the strike in the Pennsylvania mines resulted from a failure of the miners and the operators of the mines to agree on terms of wages no coal has been mined, so none has been shipped. The coal dealers are without a supply of anthracite, and they have none too much of the bituminous sort. So the coal yard workers are idle. When they will return to work is uncertain. They surely will not be engaged till mining is resumed.

Meyer Boyer, former North Bank street second-hand merchant, died this morning at his residence, 3 Prospect street, death being caused by heart trouble, with which Mr. Boyer had been a sufferer for a long time. The funeral was held this afternoon, with burial in the Hebrew cemetery Jordan. Mr. Bover was of advanced years and is survived by his wife, a son, Attorney Max Boyer and a daughter who was seen to enter an automobile with another girl and three men, that the girl returned, having put in an appearance at her home this forenoon.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles R. B. Stoeckel today caused the operators' license of Thomas Librizzi, 35 Jefferson avenue to be suspended.

E. F. Anderson, a sailor stationed at the submarine base, engaged in a fight with another sailor near the union station late Sunday night and suffered a cut on his chin that required the attention of a physician. After the wound was dressed the base authorities were communicated with for the purpose of causing Anderson to be sent to the base hospital. When the base ambulance was on its way to the police station and passing over the New London approach to the Thames river highway bridge, the ambulance was struck by a Groton & Stonington Traction company trolley car and damaged. Anderson was taken back to the base in one of the navy busses, by a guard.

H. R. Lathrop of Hamburg, today notified the local police that his automobile, a Ford touring car, was stolen from the Lathrop premises last Friday night.

It was revealed this forenoon that the box car and old house, the property of the local branch of American Legion which have been used whenever the legion conducted parades or celebrations, were not stolen from the yard of the Southern New England Telephone company, Washington St., Saturday, as was reported by John Cruise, a member of the legion. The box car and house were taken from the telephone company's yard by Albert St. Germain, adjutant of the legion, and removed to the yard of St. Germain's home, Broad street and Jefferson avenue.

Miss Mary A. Donnelly died this morning at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Ellen Henley, 7 Front street. Miss Donnelly was of advanced years and had not been in good health for some time, although it was not until recently that her condition was serious. Miss Donnelly was formerly employed as maid by Henry R. Bond and besides her sister, she is survived by two nephews, William T. Henley, this city, and John Henley, Schenectady, N. Y., and by a niece, Mrs. Frank Smith, also of Schenectady.

Garage thieves, who have started a vigilant campaign and who Saturday night were detected in their attempt to burglarize the garage of A. E. Little, 26 Franklin street, were scared away when their operations were heard by Edward Hennessey, residing nearby. Sunday night they attempted to gain entrance to the Hennessey garage, rear of 10 Franklin street, but were again scared away.

Mrs. Manice, wife of Patrolman William Manice of Williams street, underwent a serious operation this forenoon at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital. This afternoon it was stated that the patient's condition was favorable and that Mrs. Manice was resting as comfortably as could be expected.

Harold Lewis, Fairview avenue, Groton, was taken into custody late this afternoon by State Officer J. J. Bobnick, Groton Barracks, charged with evasion of responsibility. He will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning.

Lewis was arrested upon complaint of Paul Alfieri, 48 Pratt street. Alfieri lodged complaint with the local police, stating that Sunday the car operated by Alfieri was struck by the machine driven by Lewis at the corner of Main street and Crystal avenue and that Lewis, instead of stopping to ascertain the extent of the damage he had caused, drove away from the scene of the accident. As Lewis resided outside the jurisdiction of the New London authorities, the arrest of the accused was left in the hands of the state police.

Lieut. Scheck, submarine base, complained to the police this evening that he was robbed during the day of his Duber-Hampden gold watch, a heavy gold chain, attached to which was a gold knife and pencil, with the letter "S" inscribed on the knife and a gold wedding ring, all attached to the chain. The theft was from his apartment at the base.

The trial of Ruby Parker, Flanders merchant, arrested by state police, Groton barracks a week ago, charged with violation of the prohibition law, will take place before Justice of the Peace Charles B. Watrous in Odd Fellows hall, Niantic, Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. Parker was arrested by State Police Officers Fred Caron and Bernard Kenerson, following Constable Stedman it is alleged, having purchased a pint of liquor of Parker and then turned the evidence over to the state officers. Parker denies the accusation, but the state police declare that the marked bill that was given Stedman to purchase the liquor was found in the possession of Parker when he was taken into custody.

According to the charter of the city of New London there should be 12 supernumerary police officers connected with the New London police department so that an ample number of officers will be available for duty at all times. At the present time there are but two supernumerary officers and these have been performing regular duty for a number of months. Last night, Abraham Gordon, whose residence was damaged by fire Sunday, desired an officer to maintain a watch of the house throughout the night and was willing to pay for the service, but in the absence of a supernumerary officer, Gordon could not be accommodated. The police did the next best thing, they secured the services of one of the drivers of the fire department, who acted as watchman at the Federal street house from 9 o'clock until 6 o'clock this morning.

The New London fire department responded to three alarms today, two of which were still. At 7:35 o'clock this forenoon a still alarm summoned the Ockford Hose company to the residence, 65 Shaw street occupied by Tanna Giordiani, and where a chimney fire existed. The blazing soot was extinguished with chemicals. At 4:30 o'clock this afternoon another still alarm caused the Ockford Hose company and Allen Hook and Ladder company to respond for a chimney fire at the residence of David Jacoby, 29 Moore court. Like the other blaze the fire was subdued with chemicals and without damage of consequence. This evening at 7:10 o'clock an automobile owned by a sailor at the submarine, back-fired on the New London approach to the Thames river highway bridge and threatened to destroy the car. An alarm was rung in from Box 12, corner of Harrison and Tenth streets. With the arrival of the department, the fire was quickly extinguished and with damage less than $25 resulting.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Nicholas Dana, and family, West Mystic, today moved to the dwelling on Ocean avenue, Mr. Dana recently purchased of Thomas W. Casey, Providence, formerly of this city.

In the Groton town court this morning another continuance, the third, was ordered by Judge Cornelius C. Costello, in the case of Matthew O'Brien, charged technically with manslaughter, in causing the death of Louis Olbrys, 18, formerly of 36 Richards street, several weeks ago. The reason for the third continuance was the failure of the court to receive the finding of Coroner Jeremiah J. Desmond, Norwich, as to whether O'Brien, a resident of Allen steet, Groton, is criminally liable. The accident that resulted in Olbrys' death took place on Thames street, Groton, when the motorcycle operated by Olbrys and O'Brien's machine were in collision.

MAYOR FOX DEFENDS THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 23—At the meeting of the city council this evening Mayor Fox intimated that a considerable volume of unreliable talk was heard in relation to changes in the fire department. He gave any councilor a chance to express himself on the subject but no one appeared to be interested. The mayor said the volunteer department of this city was an excellent one and that it saved the city from $40,000 to $50,000 a year actually as compared with what a paid department would cost. He pretty positively expressed himself that there would be no changes made. He said that if there were any difficulties they would be adjusted and that the excellent department would be maintained.

It is understood that the mayor referred to the appointment of drivers of the extension fire ladder apparatus and combination truck, which were not to the liking of the Konomoc Hose company in whose station the new apparatus was located. The Konomocs desire that the drivers shall be selected from its membership, and there is an opinion that such selection will be made.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Coming to the Breed

Sixteen honor regiments of England, Canada and Scotland were represented in the three hundred war veterans who took part in the battle sequences of Havoc, the William Fox screen version of the celebrated stage play, directed by Rowland V. Lee, which opens a three day run at the Breed theater Thursday.

Replete in accurate details, these battle scenes are declared by a corps of war experts who supervised them to be the most authentic of the kind that have ever been put on the screen.

Colonel Everett Ford, 91st Division, Artillery, U. S. A., acted as technical director on the picture and Major Harold Harcourt of Princess Pat's own Canadian regiment, supervised the building of trenches and the equipment of the British troops. Two ex-German army officers saw that the Teuton troops were properly outfitted.

Among the regiments represented by veterans, every man of whom had won at least one medal of honor, some of them six, were the Princess Pats, 77th Seaforth Highlanders, Royal Canadian Dragoons, Scots Guards, Argyle Sutherlands, the most famous Scotch regiment in the war; 47th Canadian Infantry, Fourth Canadian Mounted Rifles, 78th Canadian Grenadiers, 3rd Toronto Infantry, 102nd Canadian Infantry and six London regiments, in addition to ex-Royal Navy men who later served in the trenches, aviation corps, trench service troops. Five commissioned officers were among the veterans.

Edmund Goulding, who adapted Havoc for the screen, is a veteran of the British Intelligence Service and received a baptism of fire such as no other man now interested in motion pictures. Rowland V. Lee, the director, served first as a private with the American forces abroad and won the commission of Lieutenant while at the front.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater

A woman's faithfulness to a jazz-mad husband, who dragged her to the very rim of the vortex of Parisian night life is graphically envisioned in Corinne Griffith's latest screen endeavor, The Marriage Whirl, First National's current offering at the Breed.

Startling in its realism, the film brings home the lesson that the woman who "flicks" isn't always the sentient, sensible and successful being that she is held up to be, and that loyalty on the part of one without faithfulness on the part of the other is no gain to either.

Expertly assisting Miss Griffith in the development of this absorbing plot are Kenneth Harlan, Harrison Ford, Nita Naldi and a half dozen other prominent screen delineators.

The crash and color of the jazz-swept French capital is all there, forming a throbbing background for one of the most dramatic achievements of the screen. Based on the successful J. Hartley Manners stage play, The National Anthem, Miss Griffith's latest contribution will rank at the very top of her list of successes.

Al Santell directed the picture.

Broadway Theater

It's a holiday week celebration at the Broadway theater and if ever there was an exceptional pre-holiday program at any theater in the city, this is the one.

Marie Kavanaugh and Paul Everett in Dance Stars assisted by The Hamel Sisters, Harry Selvin and Wallace Allen was more entertaining than the advance publicity stated. A little comedy, some real dancing and excellent singing were outstanding. A fine attraction for the biggest houses.

Jack Danger made a splendid opening attraction. In a Trade of His Own. He sings, juggles, dances, and adds comedy—a very snappy offering.

Kelly and Bart, the comedy couple followed with a fast line of real funny patter that hit the funny bone.

Neilson and Ward in a comedy skit Who's to blame? followed up with moe clever comedy and songs for a hit.

Harry Sykes and Co. is a trio of comedy cyclists and one of the finest novelties seen here in some time.

The feature photoplay offers a prominent cast in The Primrose Path.

Palace Theatre

Mack Moroni Swain is the name borne by "the funiest villian" in the role of Big Jim McKay, with Charlie Chaplin in "The Gold Rush," a United Artists Corporation release, now playing at the Palace Theatre.

Swain was born February 16, 1874, in Salt Lake City, Utah. His middle name —Moroni—he gets from the angel who blows the trumpet upon the tower of the Mormon temple in Salt Lake—as his parents were Mormon pioneers, both his father and his mother having crossed the country to Brigham Young's pioneer settlement.

Commonly known and identified by the movie fans as "Ambrose," a lovesick youth, Swain became a figure indeed in these old-time comedies. The name "Ambrose" was tacked onto Mack by P. S. Harrison, a cinema critic of note in those early days. In a review of "The Fatal Mallet," he referred in words of praise to the playing of "that big fellow Ambrose" (Swain weighs nearly 300 pounds.)

MYSTERY LETTERS READ IN RHINELANDER CASE

read, Justice Morschauser scanned them and said:

"I will give the women in this court an opportunity to leave before these letters are read. I feel that no woman will want to hear the things that are contained in them."

A minority of the women present left, but the rest clung stubbornly to their seats, bringing a sharp rebuke from Justice Morschauser. I am glad to see that there are some decent women in this court, but if there are not more I shall have to use my authority and clear the courtroom." A few more women left, but others took their places and when the letters were about to be read Justice Morschauser ordered all women outside. Only two newspaperwomen were left, even Alice and her mother having gone out.

Both letters were written from the Cliff Hotel in San Francisco in 1922. Parts of them spoke of Leonard's love relations with Alice and of the time they spent at the Marie Antoinette. Young Rhinelander was not abashed at the lurid passages. Although he kept his eyes on the floor part of the time, he answered some of the more intimate questions distinctly. His stutter returned now and then, as he struggled to control his voice. Finally he said that he could see nothing wrong in the things he had done.

"Not even now?" asked Mr. Davis.

"No," said the witness.

After brief re-direct examination and cross-examination on minor points of testimony in the afternoon, young Rhinelander was permitted to leave the stand. Alice returned to the court apparently relieved that the letters had been read, and seemed more cheerful than during the morning.

Joseph Rich, a furniture dealer of Mount Vernon, took the stand and testified that Alice had stayed with him and his wife four days after Leonard left her in 1924. During this time, he said, she told him she was of English-Spanish blood and would prove that she was white. She had assured Leonard of the same thing, Rich said she told him. Alice was asked to remove her hat, and Rich said she looked Spanish to him, though perhaps darker than when he first saw her.

T. B. Petersen, one of Leonard's paid companions took the stand and told of his unsuccessful search for Carl Kreitler, a former friend of young Rhinelander with whom he first met Alice. He testified that he had visited Kreitler's wife in New Canaan, Connecticut, and his mother in Hartford, without avail.

"Do you know where Portand' Maine is?" asked Mr. Davis in cross-examination.

"Yes," said the witness.

"I would suggest you try there if you're so anxious to find him," responded the attorney, without revealing what information he has on Kreitler's whereabouts.

PLAN ORGANIZATION OF WOMAN'S EDUCATIONAL COM.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 23—About 20 young women employes of the local office of the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting company and Mrs. Maude Cosgrove and Miss Rita May Eckler of the Rockville office met at a local tea room Monday evening to initiate the organization of a Woman's Educational committee and a branch of the National Electric Light association. It is planned to hold monthly forums when the various phases of the electrical industry and service will be discussed. The meeting was presided over by Miss Evelina Beaulieau of the sales department. An outline of the aims and standards of an educational committee was given by the Misses May Gilligan, Rose Greene and Mrs. Coty of the Hartford Electric Light company, where the committee has been a decided success. Officers will be elected at a later date. The following were drawn as a committee to prepare and preside over meetings during the year: Miss Alice Sullivan, chairman, and the Misses Albertine Coutu, Rae Hevrin, Elinore Moriarty and Annie Shea.

The Pumpkin

Ah! on Thanksgiving day, when from East and from West,
From North and from South come pilgrim and guest,
When the gray-haired New Englander sees round his board
The old broken links of affection restored,
When the care-wearied man seeks his mother once more,
And the worn matron smiles where the girl smiled before,
What moistens the lip and what brightens the eye?
What calls back the past, like the rich Pumpkin pie?

O fruit loved of boyhood! the old days recalling,
When wood-grapes were purpling and brown nuts were falling!
What wild, ugly faces we carved in its skin,
Glaring out through the dark with a candle within!
When we laughed round the corn-heap, with hearts all in tune,
Our chair a broad pumpkin—our lantern the moon,
Telling tales of the fairy who traveled like steam,
In a pumpkin-shell coach with two rats for her team!

Then thanks for thy present! none sweeter or better
E'er smoked from an oven or circled a platter!
Fairer hands never wrought at a pastry more fine,
Brighter eyes never watched o'er its baking than mine!
And the prayer, which my mouth is too full to express,
Swells my heart that thy shadow may never grow less,
That the days of thy lot may be lengthened below,
And the fame of thy worth like a pumpkin vine grow,
And thy life be as sweet, and its last sunset sky
Golden-tinted and fair as thy own Pumpkin pie!

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

Care

All in the leafy darkness, when sleep had passed me by,
I knew the surging of the sea—
Though never wave were nigh.
All in the leafy darkness, unbroken by a star,
There came the clamorous call of day,
While yet the day was far.
All in the leafy darkness, woven with hushed grey,
I heard the vulture wings of Fear
Above me tireless sweep;
The sea of doubt, the dread of day, upon me surged and swept
All in the leafy darkness,
While the whole world slept
—Virginia Woodward Cloud.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Visitor at church (to friend, as collection plate nears)—"Put that money back in your pocket, Bill. This is on me!"—Colliers.

"My dear aunt, you should have seen him when he proposed. He looked like a fish out of water."

"Naturally. He realized that he had been hooked."—Le Petit Parisien.

Daughter: Mama, what is an optimist?

Mama: An optimist, my daughter, is a woman who thinks her friends thinks she looks as young as they say she looks.—Life.

"Are we going to that affair or not?"

"I'm trying to make up my mind, hubby."

"Make up your face at the same time or we can't make it."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Jones—Whenever I have to borrow money, I try to get it from a pessimist.

Brown—Why?

Jones—A pessimist never expects to get it back.—University of Pittsburgh Panther.

Grocer: This is the best brand of peaches on the market—your husband will like them.

Woman: The peaches my husband likes are not in cans!

Grocer: What are they in?

Woman: In bathing suits!—The Progressive Grocer.

"This stove would suit me perfectly," said the tiresome customer, "but it is too low: I would have to stoop every time I worked over it."

"Well madam," said the weary clerk, "what you want is a mountain range."—Good Hardware.

A man in a restaurant in Rome one night snarled:

"Waiter, you've spilled that soup all over my trousers."

"Don't be alarmed, signor," said the smiling waiter, "I know the soup here. It never stains after 8 o'clock."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Flamingo tongues were a great delicacy to the old Romans.

Native women of Tibet always cover their faces at the approach of strangers.

Among the most musical of the members of the English royal family is Queen Mary, whose singing voice was trained by Tosti.

During the last year dust explosions in mills and factories resulted in the loss of forty-five lives and the destruction of property to the amount of $3,000,000.

Ralph Love holds the record for the longest drive ever made on the Hiawatha (Kan.) golf course. He sent a ball into a coal car on a passing freight train. The car's destination was Atchison, making Love's drive forty-two miles.

R. H. Price, of Nocona, Tex., has a watch 200 years old, which was made by Smitton & Hutton in London. This ancient timepiece has been passed down in his family for generations. Although somewhat large, wound by a key and of the "chain drive" variety, it keeps good time.

In fishing with a minnow, Frank B. Hargrave, of Latrobe, Pa., chanced to give his line a sharp jerk which landed the minnow on the ground behind him. Almost instantly he felt a strong tug as of a big bass. The startled fisherman looked around to discover that a venturesome chicken had swallowed hook and bait.

J. E. Lang, a banker, of Carthage, Mo., received 5 cents as payment for an apple stolen thirteen years ago. The sender, who signed his name, wrote Lang that the lure of the bright red apple had proved too much for him in his boyhood, that recently he had been converted and desired to make restitution and, therefore, inclosed 5 cents in order to erase the blot from his record and bring him peace of mind.

Insulin, the widely used remedy for diabetes, has found a use in curing of ulcers of the superficial veins of the leg, according to a statement made before the French Academy of Science by Drs. Chabanier, Dumiere and Levart. They first noticed that diabetes patients receiving insulin treatment did not develop certain characteristic sores due to decomposition of the excess sugar in the blood, or if these had already broken out they were speedily healed. They then decided to try the remedy on a class of afflictions not associated with diabetes, but still due to excess blood sugar. Weak injections of insulin were found to result in cures. Experiments are now under way to test its efficacy in other cases.

Many of the world's greatest men are unknown to fame. They are great because they share their joys with others and keep their sorrows to themselves.

Corn: Barely steady; lower cash markets.

Cattle: Easy; shipping demand narrow.

Hogs: Lower; all interests buying.

BREAK IN STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—(By the A. P.)—Stock prices broke sharply again today when selling pressure was renewed against the motor shares. Closing quotations disclosed a large number of losses ranging from 1 to 10 points. The volume of trading fell below two million shares for the first full session since October 8, the day's total aggregating 1,732,000 shares.

There was nothing in the day's news to account for the reaction, which was generally accepted as a further correction of the weakened technical position resulting from the speculative excesses of recent months. The opening was irregular but prices gathered strength in the late morning and early afternoon, leading to the belief in many quarters that the market was again fundamentally sound. The late break, therefore, came as a surprise and led to heavy liquidation for both accounts.

Motors showed a marked absence of effective buying support.

Chrysler broke from 187 to 175, where it was nearly 10 points off on the day. General Motors, selling ex-dividend, registered a net decline of 7 points at 109 1-2, and Fisher Body sold off 6 3-4 to 83 3-4. Hudson dropped from 93 3-8 to 88 and then rallied to 89, off 3 1-8 and Mack Trucks showed a net decline of about a point at 218 1-8 after having sold as high as 219 3-4.

Oils developed a temporary outburst of strength in response to an increase of 25 cents a barrel in Pennsylvania crude prices and reports of stiffening gasoline prices, but the early gains were substantially reduced or wiped out in the late wave of selling. Pan-American "B" was heavily bought on the announcement that another well, flowing 40,000 barrels a day, had been completed on the Tierra Blanca district of Mexico, making the second gusher there within a week.

A rather thin market developed for some of the high priced industrials specialties. Du Pont broke from 215 to 200 and then rallied to 204, off 9 3-4. American Brake Shoe and Foundry fell over 10 points to 133 and then rallied to 135; and Chicago Pneumatic Tool, Coca Cola, Foundation company, General Electric, International Shoe, Loose-Wiles Biscuit, United Drug, United Fruit, U. S. Rubber and Woolworth showed net losses of about 4 to 6 points.

Standard Oils lost ground with the rest of the list. U. S. Steel common showed a net loss of 2 1-4 at 127 1-2 after selling as high as 131 1-8. Baldwin dropped 1 1-2 to 122 1-4, and American Can showed a net loss of one point at 241 1-2.

Rails showed better resistance to selling pressure, although losses of a point or more were recorded by Atlantic Coast Line, Baltimore and Ohio, St. Paul preferred, Chicago and Northwestern New York Central, Union Pacific, Great Northern preferred, "Nickel Plate," Southern Railway and a few others.

There were a few independent strong spots. Federal Mining and Smelting, which sold at 15 1-4 this year, touched a new high record at 86 and then eased to 83, where it was up 8 1-2 points on the day. General Baking jumped 6 points to a new top at 256 on one sale.

Good buying also was noted in Gold Dust, Mathieson Alkali and United Cigar Stores.

Despite the sharp shrinkage in excess reserves shown in last Saturday's clearing house statement call money renewed at 4 1-2 per cent., holding steady at that figure all day. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges were irregular. French francs duplicated the year's low at 3.87 cents on selling inspired by the defeat of the Painleve ministry, and then rallied slightly on the announcement that Aristide Briand had been asked to form a new French cabinet. Demand sterling held fairly steady at $4.84 1-2 and Italian lire rallied about 5 points to around 4.06 cents. Polish zlotys broke 40 points to a new low record for the year at 14.50 cents.

TAFTVILLE

Fire, supposed to have started in defective wiring in one of the cars stored in the building, broke out in the garage owned by Arthur Fontaine on Merchants avenue about 2 o'clock Monday morning. Before it was discovered, the inside of the garage had been damaged considerably, and some of the automobiles showed the effects of the flames and heat. The cars of Albert Airey of North Second avenue, Henry Filliger of North B street and Oscar Gaudette of South A street were badly damaged. Fire Company No. 2 responded to an alarm and soon had the blaze under control, which might have been serious if not discovered sooner.

Fourteen members of the Taftville Congregational church school attended the Girls' Rally at the Norwich Town Congregational church Friday evening. After the basket lunch, two interesting talks were given by Miss Miriam Woodberry and Miss Helen Smith.

Among the beautiful flowers at the funeral of Mrs. Fred Wohlleben Saturday were: pillow, husband; heart, sons; wreath, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Leupold and family; wreath, Mr. and Mrs. M. Leupold; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Crist Wohlleben and Mr. and Mrs. William Wohlleben; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Eribeck; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Torreance and family; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Pollard; wreath, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Wohlleben; basket, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Leupold and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Larkin; wreath, Krumholz family; wreath, employes of Baldwin's store; spray, Mrs. Eugene N. Monty and Miss Bertha Monty; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Max Heinrich; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Banker; spray, Charles Adams; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kloss; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Eribeck; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Pellequin and Miss Mildred C. Kloss.

The committe appointed by the Lafayette club to arrange their annual banquet met Friday evening to make final preparations for this event which takes place Thanksgiving eve. The Parish hall has been engaged as has also the Royal orchestra to furnish music for the round dancing. To make certain that all the guests will be satisfied, the Canadian serenaders of Willimantic have been booked for the square dances. This orchestra with two of its musicians totally blind, has made an enviable reputation in Canada and New England. The president of the various Franco-American societies of the village have been invited and have signified their intention of attending. A prominent orator has been secured to address the gathering. During the evening old French songs will be sung by Miss Jean St. Marie of Holyoke. Many attractions have been included in the program and this will be one of the biggest social events ever held by this enterprising organization.

OPERATION SUCCESSFUL ON SENATOR CRONIN'S EYE

The operation performed on an eye of Senator Daniel M. Cronin of New London at a New York hospital was apparently a success, according to reports received by relatives of Senator Cronin in New London. The operation was performed Saturday afternoon. Dr. William D. Cronin, brother of the senator, is at the New York hospital where he will remain until the latter part of the week in company with his brother. The bandages are not expected to be removed until the latter part of the week.

BIRD HUNTING SEASON IN STATE HAS CLOSED

The general hunting season on birds in this state closed Monday evening except for ducks which may be shot for some weeks longer. Superintendent John W. Titcomb of the fish and game commission said Monday that except for grouse there was an abundance of game birds this season. Pheasants, woodcock and ducks have been shot in large numbers. The scarcity of grouse was due to the effect of a disease from which the birds have suffered and from which a large number died. The disease was not uniformly spread over the state and there were quite a number of spots in Connecticut which were entirely free from it.

Disturbance in a Local Theatre

The patrons of a local show house were very much disturbed and annoyed by the continuous coughing of a person in the audience. Don't be a nuisance because you have a cough or cold. A few doses of FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND taken promptly will bring speedy relief from coughs, colds and hoarseness. Mrs. W. T. Clary, White Plains, Va., writes: "We have used FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND for colds and bad coughs with splendid results." Lee & Osgood Co.

COUNCIL VOTES TO ACCEPT OFFER FROM NEW YORK FOR WATER BONDS

By a roll call vote the court of common council at a special meeting in the council chamber Monday evening at 8 o'clock, awarded to Gibson and Leefe, G. L. Austin & Co., and H. L. Allen & Co., of New York, the sale of water bonds to the amount of $210,000. Their bid was a price of $100.41 for each $100 par value, i. e., $210,861 and accrued interest to date of delivery for the entire issue. The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock by His Honor Mayor Mile R. Waters, and according to custom the minutes of the previous meeting were accepted without reading. City Clerk Weston C. Pullen then read the warning for the meeting. There were two absentees, Alderman F. Russell Smith and Councilman Frank Rinella.

City Clerk Pullen then read the offer of Gibson & Leefe, G. L. Austin & Co., and H. L. Allen & Co., as follows:

Mr. Charles S. Avery, Treasurer,
City of Norwich, Conn.

Dear Sir:—

For all or none of $210,000, City of Norwich, Connecticut 4 1-4 per cent., water bonds, dated December 1, 1925, due $6,000 annually December 1, 1930 to 1964 inclusive, coupon bonds of the denomination of $1,000 each, interest payable semi-annually, we will pay a price of $100.41 for each $100 par value, i. e., $210,861 and accrued interest to date of delivery for the entire issue.

This bid is made with the understanding that the bonds are valid and binding obligations of the City of Norwich, Conn., and that all papers necessary to evidence these facts will be furnished us prior to delivery of bonds.

Yours very truly,
GIBSON & LEEFE,
Jointly G. L. AUSTIN & CO.,
H. L. ALLEN & CO.

The council, by a roll call vote, then unanimously adopted a resolution accepting the above offer.

Petitions Presented

After disposing of the water bond issue, the council proceeded to act on several petitions. Henry H. Vignot and Arthur M. Thompson petitioned for an arc light at Chelsea court. This was referred to the police committee.

Theodore Lebarry and several others petitioned the city to repair Geer avenue as the street is full of holes and extremely muddy in bad weather. Councilman Clarence G. Thompson spoke briefly in favor of granting the petition. He said he went over there and is of the opinion that the street is in need of repair. Alderman Patrick F. Sweeney asked if there is any money on hand to do the work.

Alderman Henry Gebrath, chairman of the public works committee, said that the holes could be filled up. He said the committee will do something to remedy the condition of the street if possible. It is so late in the year that nothing of an elaborate nature can be attempted. The petition was referred to the public works committee.

Joseph Gronowski petitioned to have a tree removed from in front of his premises at No. 128 Smith avenue. He represented in his petition that the tree is in a dangerous condition. The petition was referred to the public works committee and tree warden with power.

As there was no other business to come before the meeting adjournment was taken at 8:20 o'clock.

Following the special meeting of the court of common council Monday evening, it developed that that part of Geer avenue, from Woodmansee avenue to West street, which a petition received at the meeting asked to have repaired, is not a city street. Attention was called to the fact that the portion of Geer avenue which has been accepted by the city is in good condition.

FLORIST PIERSON'S WILL PROBATED IN MIDDLETOWN

There is Norwich interest in the fact that Andrew N. Pierson's will was offered for probate during the week in the Middletown court by Dr. Emily M. Pierson, daughter of the late Cromwell rose king, who was named executrix. The document was accepted without notice of hearing upon the waiver of all parties at interest. Appraisers will be named by the probate court and will have two months in which to file their inventory.

The instrument was drawn October 19, 1920, by Judge Carl F. Anderson of Middletown. According to its terms one-third of the estate was to be given to the wife with the stipulation that should she pre-decease the testator, her share would become part of the residuary estate. Her death occurred in February, 1923.

Senator Wallace R. Pierson, son of the deceased is given a small cash remembrance, as the major portion of his share of the estate had been advanced to him in the lifetime of the testator in the form of a controlling interest in the A. N. Pierson corporation, one of the largest enclosed horticultural enterprises in the country.

The residue of the estate is given a daughter, Dr. Emily M. Pierson and a grandson, Orion Pierson, only child of a deceased son, Frank, to be equally divided between them.

Two nieces, Anna Pierson Cox and Margaret Pierson Foster, are bequeathed $5,000 each, provided the estate shall inventory $100,000.

Stockholders of the West Side Cut Flower company of Cromwell at a meeting later, voted to sell all the assets of the business of A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell for $103,000. Following this the directors met and voted to dissolve the corporation. A stockholders' meeting has been called for December to act on this matter.

The West Side Cut Flower company was started two years ago by the late Andrew N. Pierson and occupied 100,000 square feet of glass. Forty hands were employed.

Its officers were: A. N. Pierson, president; Emily M. Pierson, vice-president; Paul Pierson, secretary; A. N. Pierson, treasurer. Upon the death of the elder Mr. Pierson, Emily Pierson was elected president.

THE NATIONAL ACADEMY SHOW INTERESTS ARTISTS

Charles H. Davis, the noted Mystic painter, is a member of the National Academy of Design, which is making preparations for its centennial exhibition. The exhibition was opened in the Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington about five weeks ago by President Coolidge. When it comes to New York it is to be augmented by important additions to the paintings and sculpture.

An outstanding attraction will be John Sargent's "A Vele Gonfie," a study of Eva Wertheimer, purchased by an American for $40,000 before the artist's death. It is now estimated, on the basis of recent London prices for Sargent's work, to be worth at least $80,000. The recent death of Paul Wayland Bartlett and Donn Barber will also draw unusual attention to their work.

The exhibition will include hundreds of objects, with an estimated value of more than $2,500,000. They arrived in New York from Washington Friday and the cars in which they came were shifted to the Grand Central tracks and unloaded at the terminal. It will take ten days to get the exhibition in readiness.

BALTIC METHODIST CHURCH MEMBERSHIP NEARLY DOUBLED

Sunday evening marked the closing meeting of a series which have been held every evening for the past week at the Versailles Methodist Episcopal church, under the direction of Rev. Harvey H. Conklin, pastor, assisted by Gustav Bochman, personal worker of Hartford and Miss Elsa Nesbit of Providence, soloist and music director. Mrs. Louis Eribeck acted as organist with Mrs. Alma Boutilier at the piano.

The meetings throughout the week have been largely attended, reaching a climax on Sunday evening when the church space was taxed to the utmost by an attendance never before equaled in the history of the church, Baltic, Hanover and Lisbon sending large delegations.

Fifty three were given the right hand of fellowship by Rev. H. H. Conklin, assisted by Rev. Dwight C. Stone of Hanover, making the church membership nearly doubled. The entire service was exceptionally impressive, the order of service being:

Scripture, Gustav Bochman: prayer, Rev. Dwight C. Stone; solo, Mr. Bailey of Baltic; solo, Miss Nesbit.

During the week, noonday meetings have been held at the plant of the Tokett Manufacturing company and the Hygienic Fibre Company, Inc., by Mr. Bochman and Miss Nesbit.

GAVE ENJOYABLE SHOWER TO MISS ESTELLE GREENSTEIN

About 50 friends of Miss Estelle Greenstein tendered her a shower at the Tanney Corporation store, Franklin Square, Monday evening in honor of her approaching marriage with Jack Zimmerman. The young people gathered at the store during the early evening and the pleasant hours were passed in games, music and dancing, music for the dancing being furnished by a Victrola. A feature of the evening was a comedy and singing act given by Evans and Carter, who are appearing at the Palace theatre this week.

Arthur Callen, manager of the Tanney corporation, made a brief address in behalf of the management and employes of the store in appreciation of the valuable services of Miss Greenstein during the year and a half she has been employed there.

During the evening refreshments of sandwiches, ice cream, cake, soft drinks, cookies, apples and grapes were served by the committee in charge. Miss Greenstein received numerous gifts of linen, glassware and silver ware.

The shower was held at the store through the courtesy of Abe Tanneybaum and Harry Tanneybaum and the arrangements for the party were made by Miss Bertha Kening ably assisted by Charles Jacobson and L. Rosenberg. Guests from the Willimantic Tanney store, New York and Lisbon were among those present.

THREE DIVORCE SUITS ARE FILED IN COURT

Three divorce suits which are returnable to the superior court in December were filed Monday here at the office of the clerk of the court.

Isabel Kennison Benway, of New London, seeks divorce from Archie Benway, formerly of Gurleyville, Windham county, now of parts unknown. They were married Dec. 15, 1916 and she alleges that she was deserted by her husband a week later. She asks for change of name to Isabel Kennison.

Martin W. Maine of North Stonington is the petitioner for divorce from Maida Lillian Maine, whose maiden name was Nickerson. She is now of parts unknown and he alleges that she deserted him Nov. 1, 1922. They were married Jan. 12, 1924.

Walter H. Davidson of Sprague seeks divorce from Rose Davidson, formerly of Norwich, now residing at 202 Kempton street, New Bedford. They were married Sept. 20, 1919, her maiden name being Rose Lange. The divorce is sought on the ground of unfaithfulness, the alleged acts having been committed since September, 1920, in Norwich "with various men."

DIED SUDDENLY WHILE WORKING AT BALTIC

While unloading waste for the Max Gordon Corp., at Baltic, Monday morning, Philip Jenkins, 43, of No. 110 High street, was suddenly seized with a heart attack and died almost immediately. Although Mr. Jenkins had been ailing for some time he was in his usual good health when he reported for work Monday morning.

Mr. Jenkins was a native of Virginia, but came north when a young man. He resided for a time in Pachaug and Jewett City and then came to Norwich to make his home. May 3, 1903, he was united in marriage with Josephine Dorr, and for the last 10 years had been employed as a truck driver for the Max Gordon Corp.

Mr. Jenkins is survived by his wife and five children, Daniel, Beatrice, Josephine, Grace and Annie Jenkins. There are also three brothers, Henry, Everett and John Jenkins and three sisters, Belle, Sylvia and Jennie Jenkins.

MRS. W. C. BURGY'S SONGS DELIGHT MIDDLETOWN CLUB

Mrs. Vandalia Burgy, of Norwich, popular soprano, gave a costume recital Friday evening, in Wesleyan chapel for the Middletown College Club. She sang of France, Norway and China, and of our own southland, taking her audience back to the 18th century in Watteau costume, then along the Louisiana Bayou in "Ma Li'l Batteau;" again to the land of snow-clad mountains, where "My Lover, He Comes on a Skee," and to far China, where they sing "Of What Use is a Girl?" Her recital was very successful.

Union Thanksgiving Service.

The union Thanksgiving service, under the auspices of the Norwich Ministers' association, will be held at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Universalist, on Thursday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

The sermon will be by Rev. J. Harlow Graham of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church and the other ministers will participate in the service.

MOTHERS OF DAUGHTERS

Will Profit by reading Mrs. Quigg's Letter Telling How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her Daughter

Royersford, Pa.—"My daughter was sickly from the time she was 13 years old, she was irregular and also had severe headaches, and pains in her sides and back. She was this way about six months before I began giving her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helped her very much. She is not bothered by headaches, backaches, or cramping any more, and has not missed but one day. We recommend it to other mothers with girls who have these troubles."—Mrs. QUIGG, 210 Main Street, Royersford, Pa.

Another Mother's Letter

Roxbury, Mass.—"At the age of 16 my daughter was all run down, nervous, with poor blood. These troubles made her weak and unfit to work. She tried several medicines, but they did her no good. Finally I induced her to take the Vegetable Compound, too, and she has gained in health and strength and is now working steadily. I have told these facts to many mothers."—Mrs. HUDSON, 252 Eustis Street, Roxbury, Mass.

STORRS SHORTHORNS SCORE AT KANSAS CITY SHOW

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, Nov. 23—Connecticut Agricultural college's herd of Milking Shorthorns made an exceptionally good showing at the American Royal Livestock Exposition at Kansas City last week, according to word received here today by Professor Harry L. Garrigus, head of the animal husbandry department at the State College.

Ribbons, trophies and $400 in cash was won by the college herd; the outstanding achievement of which was the winning of the first prize and senior championship in the aged bull class by Flintstone Model, Connecticut's famous Milking Shorthorn sire. It was the first time that cattle from Connecticut, or even New England, had been shown at the American Royal in Kansas City and held as it is in the very stronghold of the cattlemen's country, the winnings of the State College herd are all the more noteworthy.

The college cattle are now en route to Chicago, where they will be shown at the International Livestock Exposition, the world's greatest cattle show.

In winning the senior championship at the American Royal, Flintstone Model defeated in class the Grand Champion of the Pacific International, the famous Inmisfal Perfector from the Inmisfal herd of California. This victory adds another to the long list already made by Flintstone Model, including 2nd prize at the International at Chicago in 1923, four times Grand Champion at the Eastern States Exposition, Grand Champion at the New England Fair at Worcester twice, at the Maine State Fair at Lewiston, and at the Danbury Fair twice.

Other winnings by the college herd includes first prize for Black Creek Katy 2nd, in the aged cow class; four second prizes, one third prize, two fourth prizes, one fifth prize, and one sixth prize. The competition was extremely keen, eight herds being shown from Colorado, Iowa, Wisconsin, New York and the Connecticut Agricultural college herd.

Workmen's Compensation.

Workmen's compensation agreements as follows have been approved by Commissioner J. J. Donohue:

Connecticut Engineering and Contracting Co., Norwich, employer, and Salvadore Peruta, Westerly, employe, tendon in foot injured, Sept. 28, at rate of $13.20.

H. F. and A. J. Dawley, Norwich, employer, and Frank Cote, employe, blood poison in finger, Oct. 27, at rate of $12.

Mohican Hotel Co., New London, employer and Frank Cianchini employe, foot bruised, Nov. 3, at rate of $12.50.

NORWICH TOWN

At the First Congregational church, Sunday, after reading the account of Peter's address given in the second chapter of Acts, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey took for his text, Acts 2,37, the question asked, What shall we do? The people asked these questions, they had life for their day very much as we have life in our day. We need as they did to have our hearts pierced through, to be aroused to consciousness. Who were these men who aroused these people? They might not have had the education of some of their hearers, but they were men who had been in fellowship with their Lord, had had their own hearts pierced through. The power of the Spirit was upon these men. The day will never come when hearts will not need to be stirred with a great compulsion.

Mr. Bailey described a child whose parents, for its needs as to helpful food and the finest clothing, would have the ends of the earth searched. No effort or money spared for their boy's education, and to select the best college, to send him abroad for travel that he might be fitted for life. But is there nothing more? Some of us think he has a spiritual nature. He must have a motive that shall give direction to all his powers. His conscience has needed training, he needs a religious training, he has a will, a soul. Without this religious impulse we know not whether this life will be for God or for the devil. Without religion the life has destroyed itself. What is to be done with all this? Self and service, between these two will depend results. Religion is to stir the conscience, to direct forces, to pierce through hearts and Peter succeeded in accomplishing this.

Referring to the Every Member canvass, Mr. Bailey said, What is this our old church doing? What is the good of this old church? We are doing things together. The Lord is in this fellowship of Christians. We sing our hymns together, we break the bread in unison. It is as we bow our heads in prayer together that we are moved to carry out Christ's gospel beyond our borders. The splendid work of this church has continued 150 years, this church of the Pilgrims is the center of religious impulses.

The canvassers were: Clyde M. Beebe, Miss J. G. Bonney, Miss Susan Hyde, William R. Lathrop, Thomas H. Bachelor, John L. Browning, Mrs. Sarah W. Chapin, Frank E. Merry, Dwight W. Avery, Frederick Ross, Mrs. M. Buckley, Mrs. Annie Grant, Charles P. Learned, Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. P. Learned, Miss Bessie M. Grant. Those who loaned the use of automobiles for the outlying districts were: Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, John L. Browning, Henry T. Frazier and Charles P. Learned.

Mrs. Mary F. Hall, of Yonkers, N. Y., was received into the church membership by letter of transfer, from the Methodist church, of Yonkers. Mrs. Hall is a sister of Lucius Fenton, of Elm avenue.

Miss Bernice Underwood supplied at the organ in place of the regular organist, Herbert L. Yerrington, who was indisposed due to a slight illness. Miss Marjory Merry was the leader of the Young Peoples' Christian Endeavor service in the evening, when the topic was, God's Bounties: How Can We Share Them With Others?

The Drop-in class of the Congregational Sunday school will hold a meeting Friday evening at the parsonage on Elm avenue.

Mrs. Richard Carter was in charge of the Young People's Christian Endeavor service, at the First M. E. church, on Sunday evening. This was a Thanksgiving meeting. The topic was, God's Bounties: How Can We Share Them With Others?

The Union Thanksgiving service of the up-town churches will be held in the First Congregational church, Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The churches cooperating are: Bozrah Congregational church, Rev. N. C. Wells, pastor; Fitchville Baptist, Rev. J. F. Speeril, pastor; Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, E. Allen Bidwell, lay reader; Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. James B. Aldrich, pastor; with the First Congregational church, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, pastor. The order of worship follows: Organ voluntary, doxology, invocation, Hymn, the Old Testament lesson, Gloria Patri, the New Testament lesson, Hymn, prayer, offering, hymn, reading of the president's proclamation, the sermon, hymn and benediction.

The sermon will be given by Rev. Norval E. Webb, of Bozrah. The pastors of the other churches will have a part in the programme. H. Dwight Richardson, of Norwich, will preside at the organ, in the absence of Herbert L. Yerrington. Because of this union service, the regular mid-week service at the First Congregational church will be omitted.

Psalms 95:2, "Let us come before His presence with Thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto Him with psalms," was the text of the Sunday morning sermon by Rev. James B. Aldrich, at the First Methodist Episcopal church, in the evening Rev. Mr. Aldrich preached from Romans 10:1 Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved.

Miss Alice M. Smith with Mrs. A Maud Smith and daughter, Miss Beatrice Smith, of Town street, motored to Danielson Sunday morning. A brief stop was made at the home of Miss Smith's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Smith, of Brooklyn, Conn., who, with their son, Albert, had the Norwich Town parties as their automobile guests on a trip to Providence. While there the Smith family called on their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert West. A call was also made at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Kinney, former Norwich Town residents.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burke and son, Robert Burke, of Lafayette street, and Mr. and Mrs. David M. Dean, of Town street, motored to Providence, Sunday, and spent the day at the home of Mrs. Dean's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Kinney.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. House, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Kinney and William Kinney, of Town street, motored on Sunday, to Webster, Mass. They had as guests, Rev. and Mrs. Harry Pettis, of Dunham street, Norwich.

M. DOUMER MAY ENDEAVOR TO FORM FRENCH CABINET

The Senator Has Requested 24 Hours in Which to Give His Final Answer—Has Obtained M. Briand's Assurance That He Would Stand by Him As Foreign Minister—M. Briand Had Declined the Task of Forming Ministry When Socialists Demanded Half the Portfolios in the New Government.

PARIS, Nov. 24—(A. P.)—The socialist demands for half the portfolios in the new government, the right to name the new premier and dictate the financial policy blocked the cabinet-making negotiations today and spoiled the efforts of M. Briand to form a ministry likely to enlarge the government majority in the chamber.

M. Briand finally declined to accept the task of attempting to form a cabinet, and suggested Senator Paul Doumer, former finance minister, who consulted with President Doumergue and requested twenty-four hours in which to give his final answer.

Leon Blum, socialist leader, and Paul Boncour refused to accept posts under M. Briand, while the entire socialist group in caucus decided that they must be allowed to name at least half the new ministers from among their number and adopted a resolution that they could support the government only on condition that it adopted the socialist project for a capital levy.

M. Briand offered portfolios to M. Painieve and M. Herriot, as well as to the socialist leaders. M. Painieve declined, and M. Herriot made his acceptance conditional upon the participation of the socialists. In the presence of a seemingly well laid plan to maneuvre him into a corner, M Briand informed President Doumergue that senator Doumer seemed to be the most liked man to set up a new combination that could rally a safe majority in the chamber.

M. Doumer agreed to see what he could do, promising a definite reply within twenty-four hours, and he started on his task at once by obtaining M. Briand's assurance that he would stand by him as foreign minister.

The senator apparently is so sure of success that he went to work this evening on financial projects he proposes to introduce in the chamber immediately if he becomes premier, leaving further consultations until tomorrow.

There was less confidence among the deputies in M. Doumer's ability to solve the situation. The socialists declared they would have none of him at ony price. The radicals are divided. A considerable number are hostile because M. Doumer is not regarded as a man of the radical-socialist coalition.

The uncompromising attitude of these two groups is said by the deputies of the other parties to indicate a determination to force President Doumergue to call on M. Herriot to form a radical-socialist cabinet.

It is thought that M. Doumer will endeavor so to choose his official family as to divide the radical party and shift the majority toward the centre, and thus disregard the socialists entirely.

DOUMER WOULD INCREASE THE EXISTING TAXATION

PARIS, Nov. 24—(A. P.)—The plan which Senator Doumer has prepared to meet the financial situation, if he accepts the post of premier, is based on an increase in existing taxation, which he contends would furnish sufficient additional funds not only to balance the budget but meet the requirements of the treasury and redeem the national debt fairly rapidly.

He intends, above all, to have recourse only to simple measures capable of yielding immediate results and susceptible of ratification by parliament without giving rise to a long academic discussion.

M. Doumer rules out not only any capital levy but also forced consolidation of part of the short term debt and taxation of government rentes. He estimates that the increase in the business turnover tax will yield at least an additional four billion francs yearly. The first year's yield will be applied to reduction of the fiduciary circulation, which would have to be increased to meet the maturities on December 8.

A strictly balanced budget naturally is an essential of M. Doumer's program, which will be completed by a set of measures tending to stabilize the franc and restore the value of government rentes.

He considers that the new ministry should limit itself to putting the national finances on a sound basis. Should he be called upon to head it, he will apply himself, with the help of parliament, to accomplish that before January 1, and, if he succeeds he will consider his task ended. These are the ideas which the prospective premier will submit to the leaders whose collaboration he wishes to obtain.

COOLIDGE STUDYING THE CHARGES OF COAL MINERS

WASHINGTON, Nov 24—(A. P.)—Receipts of the miners' union complaint that some bituminous coal operators were disregarding the Jacksonville wage agreement, was acknowledged by President Coolidge in a letter today to John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, at Philadelphia. In it, the president said he would make a full reply after study of the charges advanced by Mr. Lewis.

The complaint, which was made Sunday in the form of an open letter to the president, said the wage contract had the approval of government officials when drawn up, and asked whether the federal government cared to intervene or would consider the miners justified in taking steps to enforce it.

These steps were not described, but the threat of labor disturbance in the soft coal fields seen in this question is understood to have occasioned white house conferences in which not only cabinet members but William Green and Frank Morrison, respectively president and secretary of the American Federation of Labor, have participated.

Other than the statement at the white house that Mr. Lewis' letter had been acknowledged, no other governmental action touching on the situation today was disclosed.

The bureau of coal economics of the National Coal association, which represents a large number of the soft coal operators, meanwhile, published an estimate that coal production last week for the period ending November 21, was 12,650,000 tons, and said this was the largest outturn for any similar period since 1920.

PROGRESS OF SHENANDOAH NAVAL COURT OF INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, Nov 24—(A. P.)—The Shenandoah naval court in inquiry spent most of its time today in seeking to combat testimony offered for the defense before the Mitchell court martial.

Charles P. Burgess, aeronautical engineer in the bureau of aeronautics of the navy department, was the principal witness. The high spots of his testimony were that:

The strains to which the Shenandoah was subjected when she broke away from the mooring mast at Lakehurst, N. J., in January, 1924, caused no lasting damage to her hull structure.

The fact that the hull structure was "overweight," that is, it weighed slightly more than the designers had calculated it would, served only to increase the strength of the ship and consequently her air worthiness.

The tying off of the gasing manifold, which divided the gas cell installation in two parts amidships, fifteen minutes before the accident, was helpful rather than harmful since it served to reduce the gas pressure in the after cells.

Reiterating a former statement of the court, Mr Burgess expressed the belief that aerodynamic forces and not gas pressure from the cells had broken up the ship.

Gas pressure might have had effect if the hand valves had failed to function, he said, but there was every reason to believe that there had been no such failure.

Lieutenant O. A. Anderson, of the army service, who testified for Colonel William Mitchell before the army court martial, was closely questioned for two hours, largely as to the desirability of having parachutes on a rigid airship. He finally conceded that this was a matter of opinion

DEFENDANT TO TESTIFY IN RHINELANDER CASE TODAY

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 24—(A. P.)—Alice Beatrice Jones, daughter of a negro hack driver, will tomorrow, tell her version of her romance with Leonard Kip Rhinelander, wealthy young society man, who seeks annulment of their marriage.

For the past week young Rhinelander, stuttering and red of face, has told his story and submitted to a gruelling cross examination of intimate questions of his love life. Today he took the stand for a few minutes to clear up a minor point and then stepped down as his counsel announced that the plaintiff rested. Alice was to have gone on the stand as the first defense witness but she was still too shaken by her ordeal of yesterday when she partly disrobed in a private room to permit the jury to see the color of her skin.

Tonight Lee Parsons Davis, her attorney, announced that she will be the first witness called tomorrow.

Her appearance, however, may be delayed a little by a legal tangle which has come into the case because of an application by Rhinelander's attorney to amend the original complaint. In the complaint, the plaintiff alleges that by an affirmative action, Alice defrauded her husband by claiming she was white. The amendment, sought today by Isaac N. Mills, Rhinelander's attorney, would charge her with defrauding him also by negative action in not telling him she was a negress. The amendment brought a point of legal procedure into the case which will be decided tomorrow by Justice Morschauser. Mr. Davis, in objecting to the amendment, contended that Mr. Mills sought to "put two arrows into his bow."

Although it was first thought that a mistrial might result over the issue, counsel for the plaintiff said they did not consider the point vital enough to contest an adverse dicision by the presiding justice.

Three witnesses for the defense were heard in the late afternoon, including Robert Brooks, negro butler, husband of Emily, Alice's sister. Brooks testified that Leonard had always been "very friendly" to him, had played cards and dined at his house often and called him "Bob." He, in turn, he said, called Rhinelander, "Len." All of his friends, Brooks said, were negroes, and Rhinelander had played cards with some of them. He denied that he and Emily had been barred from the Jones' house because of their marriage.

EDITOR PHILIP TROUP HONORED BY ITALY

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 24—(A. P.)—Philip Troup, editor and publisher of the New Haven Union, received word today that he had been made a Chevalier of the Crown of Italy. This crown was sent from Rome on October 12 by the king and was recommended by the foreign minister. Mr. Troup tonight attended a dinner in New York, in honor of Count Volpi and the Italian debt commission. Mr. Troup has been active in Italian circles here.

FRENCH POST TO WEST OF DAMASCUS RELIEVED

BEIRUT, Syria, Nov. 24—The French post at Rasheiya, west of Damascus was relieved this afternoon, after its garrison of 250 men had put up a strong defense, holding off several Druse attacks. Beleaguered in the citadel, the French defenders resorted to a bombardment of the town, to which the tribesmen had set fire.

The Druses retired in the direction of Damascus. It is reported that they suffered heavy casualties.

Rumor of Presidential Pardon For Chapman

If Recommended by Department of Justice, Chapman May Be Turned Over to Connecticut For Execution.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—The fate of Gerald Chapman still hangs in the balance although District Attorney Alcorn and State Prosecutor Cohen left nothing undone towards having Chapman turned over to Connecticut to meet the death penalty. President Coolidge maintains silence as to his proposed course regarding a pardon permitting it to be understood that he feels it a matter for the department of justice to determine but a White House spokesman today made it clear that the president would probably follow whatever course was recommended by the Attorney General Sargent. If the president decimes to act the matter will go before the supreme court for decision and be acted on without delay. If the president grants a pardon Chapman would leave the Atlanta penitentiary only to fall immediately into the hands of the waiting Connecticut authorities and returned at once to that state to meet the death penalty. The department of justice refuses to comment on the matter but there is a strong rumor here that a presidential pardon will be recommended and that the president will at once act favorably on that recommendation and so the wishes of Connecticut would be carried out.

ATTY. GEN. SARGENT SILENT ON THE CHAPMAN CASE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 24—(A. P.)—Attorney General Sargent refused again tonight to indicate the course which the department of justice will pursue with respect to the release of Gerald Chapman, mail robber, so that he may be executed by Connecticut authorities for the murder of a policeman in New Britain. The unusual secrecy which has characterized the department's attitude in the case continued and every effort to break it down failed.

Mr. Sargent met a flood of interrogations concerning the Chapman affair without divulging the slightest intimation even of his own opinion in the case. He said flatly at the outset of the interview at which a dozen correspondents sought to get information on the case that he would say nothing under circumstances where a remark from him might result in prejudicial results to the interests of the man held, or the authorities or rights of federal or state governments.

"So you will please excuse me from replying further," he said with an air of finality.

Other department officials were as uncommunicative as the attorney general who previously had denied a decision had been reached on the question whether commutation of sentence would be recommended to the president so that Chapman's term might expire at once and Connecticut authorities then would have a free hand. Mr. Coolidge earlier was quoted as having said he preferred to let all comments on the case come from the attorney general.

Pardon Attorney Finch refused to say whether he had the Chapman case under investigation. The usual course in such matters is an investigation first by the pardon attorney who makes recommendations to the attorney general who in turn would divulge no information because the attorney general, Finch, however, said he could not say definitely when, if ever, justice might be done if any comments were forthcoming from any source in the department.

STATE NEARING CLOSE IN MACRI MURDER TRIAL

LITCHFIELD, Nov. 24—The state is nearing the close of its case against Olympia Macri on trial on a charge of murdering ohn Bagnano in New Haven on February 26. State's Attorney Arnon A. Alling informed the court and Joseph Koletsky counsel for the defense, after court adjourned today that the state hoped to rest early on Monday.

Carrie Bagnano, widow of the man fatally shot by Miss Macri in the lobby of the Palace theatre, will take the witness stand tomorrow, it was announced tonight. She had been at the court house several days, waiting to be called to the witness stand.

The defendant received the announcement that the last witness for the state would soon be called, without displaying any great elation. Her eyes were red-rimmed tonight from tears shed intermittently during the day. She wept silently into her handkerchief.

Six witnesses were called by the state today, the state's attorney having finished the direct examination of the last one, Mrs. Theresa Fiengo, when court adjourned. She will be recalled tomorrow morning for cross examination and Mrs. Bagnona is expected to follow her.

Other witnesses called today were: Mrs. Mary Lombardi, cousin of the defendant and mother of Mrs. Marion Bagnano, sister-in-law of the man shot by Miss Macri; Ralph Bagnano, John's brother; Miss Fannie Anastasio, who knew both Olympia and John Bagnano for five years prior to the shooting; William Kelly, "good friend of Johnnie," and Mrs. Angeline Arnone, proprietor of a grocery store in the Bagnano neighborhood. All live in New Haven and with the exception of Miss Anastasia. They all testified at the first trial in New Haven last spring.

COL COOLIDGE IS OUT, FIGHTING FOR HEALTH

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Nov. 24—Today saw Colonel John C. Coolidge, father of the president, up and out, and fighting for his health after more than a week's battle against a dangerous attack of heart disease.

Showing plainly the effects of his illness but nevertheless exhibiting that determination to carry on which has allowed him to conquer where many a man half his age might have gone down, the colonel not only joked with newspaper men but insisted on visiting his celebrated wood pile.

It was a different man than the one they had seen last summer, correspondents agreed, but they and his physicians marveled that he had come through so well. Something of the same ability to recoup that had surprised his advisers after his operation in June was apparent today and Major James F. Coupal, the president's physician, and Dr. Albert M. Cram were plainly delighted at the change.

Reichstag Debates Locarno Treaties

Count Von Westarp to Submit a Motion of Non-Confidence in the Government in Connection With Treaties.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—(AP)—Count Friederich von Westarp, leader of the conservative wing of the nationalists, announced in the Reichstag today that his party would submit a motion of non-confidence in the government in connection with the Locarno treaties and another motion insisting upon the passage of a special law to sanction Germany's entry into the League of Nations.

All of today's session was devoted to speeches by the various party leaders on the Locarno agreements. Foreign Minister Stresemann declared that from the texts of the treaties and from the declarations made by allied statesmen at Locarno it was evident that the possibility is not precluded of changing existing frontiers by peaceful agreement, in regard to the question of Germany's war guilt, he said:

"We gave unequivocal declarations when the Locarno negotiations were initiated. The signature of the treaties must under no circumstances be considered a new confession of guilt.

During the Locarno debate Dr. Stresemann informed the Reichstag that hte French and Belgian governments had declared it undesirable to continue the trials of absent German officers for alleged wartinie crimes.

"We attach great importance to converting the foreign ministers of France and Belgium to our viewpoint in this matter," Dr. Stresemann said. "In view of the attitude of the French and Belgian governments on this question now, we have no reason for undue distrust."

This is presumed to mean that France and Belgium will drop the proceedings against the so-called German war criminals and the demands for extradition of these persons.

At the foreign office it was stated that while no information has been received from London in regard to the suggestion that the ambassadors only sign the Locarno treaties at London on December 1, the German government would agree to such a procedure if it were proposed.

Dr. Stresemann, in the course of the debate on the Locarno treaties, announced that he had already informed the French ambassador of Germany's willingness to take part in an international economic conference such as was proposed by Louis Loucheur of the French delegation during the session of the League of Nations assembly.

POSSES MADE FRUITLESS SEARCH FOR ROBBERS

CASSOPOLIS, Mich., Nov. 24—(A. P.)—Sheriff's posses returned tonight after scouring southwestern Michigan in automobiles all day in a fruitless search for the robbers who terrorized the village for more than two hours early today.

Leaving behind them one wounded resident, a badly wrecked safe in the offices of the First national bank and a crippled telephone system that badly interferred with efforts to trace the bandits or to summon a sufficient number of townsmen to capture them, the robbers sped out of town by automobile shortly before 9 o'clock this morning after the strength of the inner bank vault had baffled their attempt at robbery.

The number of the armed men engaged in the attempted robbery is not definitely known, although those who saw them are positive there were five or more.

Residents tonight praised Miss Josephine August, telephone operator, who, they said, shattered the hopes of the bandits. With much of the telephone system put out of commission by the bandits, Miss August ultimately got a call through to Dr. James H Kelsey, who armed himself and summoned Sheriff Earl Fill and Under Sheriff A. K. Nixon.

Arrival of the physician and the two officers precipitated an exchange of shots that lasted for more than an hour. Villagers, attracted by the firing, rushed out thinly clad to determine the cause, only to dodge back again when the bullets flew close to them.

George Jones, a stock buyer, was struck and slightly wounded by one of the bullets. The sheriff said more than 250 shots were exchanged, some of which broke windows in houses and business places

7,754 CATTLE IMPORTED INTO CONN LAST YEAR

HARTFORD, Nov. 24—(A. P.)—A total of 7,754 head of cattle, or 355 carloads, of dairy cattle were imported into Connecticut during the year preceding November 1, bearing out the statement, Commissioner James M. Whittlesey, of the domestic animals department, says the farmers of this state spend more than half a million dollars annually for stock from other states. About one-half the importation is from Vermont, while the rest is from other New England states, New York, Canada and western states.

POLICEMAN WAS SHOT BY BANDITS IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Nov. 24—(A. P.)—A policeman was shot, probably fatally, today as six men overpowered five bank messengers and escaped with a shipment of $57,760, enroute from the Drovers National bank, near the stockyards, to the Federal Reserve bank.

The policeman, Patrick O'Shea, later identified Leroy Marshall, as one of the robbers. The messengers identified a photograph of a former convict as that of another.

GOVERNOR'S CURT REPLY TO MAYOR OF BRIDGEPORT

Mayor Behrens Had Written Letter of Six Pages to Gov. Trumbull Criticizing the Governor's Attitude on the "Ripper" Bill—Without Comment the Governor Merely Directed His Secretary to Acknowledge Receipt of the Mayor's Letter.

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 24.—(AP)—Mayor F. William Behrens' letter of six pages sent to Governor Trumbull and criticising the governor in refusing to call a special session of the legislature to act on repeal of the "ripper" tax law, is answered by a letter of sixteen words. It is signed by Edward D. Kelly, executive secretary, and states Mr. Kelly is 'directed by the governor to acknowledge your letter of November 20.'

The brief communication is characterized by political leaders here as a rebuke to the Bridgeport mayor. The letter was mailed in Hartford today and is expected to reach Bridgeport tomorrow.

Mr. Kelly was asked what significance he ascribed to the governor's refraining from continuing the discussion with the mayor and failing to answer the mayor himself. "I suppose the governor did not think it worthy of his consideration," said the executive secretary.

The mayor demanded the repeal of the law in his first letter to the governor.

Mayor Behrens, in his second letter to the governor, sent last Saturday, declared the "ripper" question is not closed as far as he is concerned, repeated that the "ripper" bill was adopted by the basest kind of misrepresentation. He attacked the governor's reply to his first letter, denied he had at any time been in favor of the "ripper" and presented for the governor's consideration what he claimed to be a fair and complete resume of what has been accomplished by the "ripper" law.

In conjunction with the letter, the mayor issued a statement, saying that the governor had made a combination with the democratic party against his own party, the republican party, in appointments to the "ripper" board. He assured the governor and his advisors that if they were afraid to let the people of Bridgeport vote on the bill "they have many rocks in their road ahead of them."

TO REVOKE PERMITS FOR WINE IN HOUSEHOLDS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—(A. P.)—While the treasury was taking another step toward tightening prohibition restrictions today, the department of justice made public a report on its last year's work, declaring prosecutions for liquor law violations had been more successful.

The treasury action came in an announcement by Assistant Secretary Andrews of a ruling revoking all permits for the manufacture of wine by householders, one of the last pre-prohibition exemptions to be wiped out, and instructed internal revenue collectors to issue no more of them. More than 200,000 such permits, which allowed the holders to make 200 gallons of wine a year without license or tax, are said to be outstanding.

Later in the day, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition prosecutions, delivered to Attorney General Sargent a review of the work of her division for the fiscal year ending last June 30. A study of the prosecution records for the twelve months, the report said, showed betterment in the program of prosecutions as follows:

"The government is prosecuting larger and more important cases.

"There has been a decrease in each of the last two years in the number of cases pending, indicating more prompt trials.

"The penalties for violations, especially in the matter of fines and prison sentences, are steadily increasing.

"There has been a very substantial increase in the number of injunctions made effective."

BAR AND GRILL ROOM OF N. Y. ELKS PADLOCKED

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—While groups of Elks looked on in silence, Deputy Chief U. S. Marshal Raymond Milligan placed a prohibition padlock today on the doors leading into the bar and grill room of the mother lodge of the Elks club, the padlock will remain for six months.

Signs and copies of the court orders were also placed on the doors, signs read: "Closed for violation of the national prohibition law, by order of the United States court."

The proceeding today followed the issuance of a "consent" padlock and injunction against the Elks club, arising out of the discovery of nine kegs of alleged beer on one of the club's elevators October 26. After legal arguments with U. S. District Attorney Buckner, the club agreed to submit to the padlock without fighting the case in court.

After the padlocking of part of the Elks club, Marshal Milligan went to the Delfey club where he placed a padlock on the basement and first and second floors which will remain one year.

TROUBLES OF THE IRISH FREE STATE MINISTRY

DUBLIN, Nov. 24.—(AP)—The Irish free state ministry holds together and rumors of its possible resignation are thus far unfounded. Dr. Eoin MacNeill, minister of education, however, resigned and after his resignation from the cabinet and his resignation from the boundary commission were accepted, he gave a detailed recital in the Dail Eireann today of his views of the work of the boundary commission.

Dr. MacNeill's retirement from this commission, which was created for the purpose of defending the boundary between north and south Ireland, has caused considerable surprise, particularly as the two other members of the commission in a public statement asserted that he had been in agreement with them on the principles set forth in their decision.

His speech was listened to in grave silence and at its close the government's position was not challenged from any quarter except the labor benches, the general sentiment being that the least possible should be said and the ministry supported in handling a difficult situation.

N. W. UNIVERSITY STUDENTS RIOTOUS IN EVANSTOWN, ILL.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24—(A. P.)—A few black eyes, cracked heads, and soiled police uniforms and some damaged fire equipment were all that was left tonight to remind the university town of Evanston of how its dignity was ruffled last night when 3,000 Northwestern university students allowed their exuberant spirits to spill over in celebration of the Purple football team's prowess.

Town officials, incensed at the burning of an unoccupied fraternity house, the lighting of huge bonfires in the business district and several pitched battles between students and firemen and policemen, said they expected to arrest the ring leaders if they found them. Meanwhile four students who had been arrested were released because the police said they were not the ring leaders.

University authorities said they favored the celebration but frowned on the destruction of property or the violation of the town's laws.

Mayor Charles H. Bartlett who was struck over the head while trying to help the police quiet the students announced he expected to turn in a bill to the university for damages done city property including that to police uniforms and fire equipment, and for $300 worth of tear bombs used by the police in subduing students.

Spokesmen for student organizations maintained there would have been no trouble if the police had not fired pistols and had not appeared to be taking unnecessary measures to stop the celebration.

Some city officials declared that the disorder incident to the celebration would result in the city zoning commission refusing to grant a permit for the erection of the university's new stadium on the grounds that the town would be unable to handle a crowd of 80,000 football spectators if it could not handle a crowd of 3,000 students.

FIEND HAS BEEN STABBING GIRLS IN BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 24—(A. P.)—The whole strength and all the resourcefulness of the Bridgeport police department have been mustered to apprehend the mysterious stabbing fiend, who now has eight young girls on record as his victims. Because of the elaborate preparations, which have been made for the detection and capture of the man, police officials declared it is contrary to the public interest to disclose the details of the way in which the police are drawing the net about the revolting criminal who has terrorized parents and children in all sections of the city.

After the fiend's second appearance within four days, Monday evening, when he claimed his seventh and eighth victims, Catherine Dillon, 13, of 43 Union avenue, and Rose Kerensky, 12, of 281 Hollister street, police redoubled their efforts to capture the man. Since his latest appearance the department worked unceasingly in their efforts, several "promising" clues are being followed up.

Detectives and patrolmen of the department have received orders to concentrate all efforts towards apprehending the fiend.

After each of his stabbings the mysterious assailant has fled from the scene of his stabbings, and has vanished into the darkness from whence he came. Girls are fearing to walk the streets and parents are alarmed when their children are on the street last they fall victim to the fiend.

WATCHING WITH CONCERN SITUATION IN TACNA-ARICA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP)—Washington officials continued to watch with apparent concern today the developments in the situation in Tacna-Arica, growing out of President Coolidge's arbitral decision in the old dispute between Chile and Peru over those provinces. The only comment, however, was an official explanation that hte movement of the cruiser Denver from Panama to Arica had been ordered merely to relieve the Rochester, which has been there since August 2 and is in need of repairs.

Unofficial reports, meanwhile, have shifted the center of interest from the complicated details of preparation for the plebiscite ordered to determine sovereignty over the provinces and the protests of Chile against expected demands for new guarantees, to the person of General Pershing, the American chief of the plebiscite commission.

With the news that the Denver had been ordered to hold itself in readiness to proceed to Arica, it became known that General Pershing had hoped to visit the United States for the Christmas holidays. Whether he still plans to leave Arica, in the face of the difficulties that have arisen in connection with the plebiscite mission's work, is not known here. The decision rests with General Pershing.

YOUNG ITALIAN HAD WORKED AT NORWICH TOWN

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 24—The identity of the young Italian who committed suicide shortly before noon here Monday when he leaped from the stone bridge near Thread Mill Square into the water raceway of No. 1 Mill was definitely established Tuesday as that of Segeara Paridi, 121 Washington avenue, Torrington. This was the name which was deciphered from a soiled envelope which was found in the man's clothing. The Torrington police were notified of the time and they reported Tuesday that Mr. and Mrs. Benedetti Renner of 121 Washington avenue, Torrington stated that a man answering the description and known to them by that name had boarded with them for several months. Early last summer Paridi left Torrington and went to Norwich where he was employed with a road building construction company there. He had previously come from Waterbury and was said to have friends in that city and in Hartford.

It was also found that the dead man has a cousin, Lugi Lenti, who had lived at 22 Washington avenue, Torrington but had since removed to another section of the city. At the request of the local police Lenti will be located and conferred with relative to the disposition of the body. It had been rightly supposed that the man had recently resided or visited in Norwich as he wore a comparatively new cap which had been purchased in that city from Saul Friedland a West Main street merchant. Paridi's was the third body to be recovered from the Willimantic River since last May.
